Emergency Alert Mistakenly Aired

By U. P. INTERNATIONAL

The North American Air Defense Command (NORAD) mistakenly issued an authenticated "alert" message today that led many radio and television stations across the county to leave the air as they would in event of a genuine national emergency.

The alert from NORAD headquarters near Colorado Springs, Colo., was transmitted over teletype services to the broadcast media at the start of a test that is run every Saturday at 6:30 a.m. PST.

But the wrong tape was used. The message read:

"Message authenticator: Hatefulness-hatefulness.

"This is an emergency action notification (EAN) directed by the President. Normal broadcasting will cease immediately. All stations will broadcast EAN message one preceded by the attention signal, per FCC rules. Only stations holding NDEA may stay on air in accord with their state EBS plan.

"Broadcast EAN message one.

"Message authenticator: Hatefulness-hatefulness.

"20 Feb."

Use of the code word "hatefulness" meant the alert was real rather than a test. U.S. broadcasters are given a sealed envelope every three months listing the code words that will be used each day for the coming three months. Station officials are supposed to open the envelope if an alert is issued and to check the authenticator word to verify accuracy.

The message stood without other comment from NORAD, which pre-empts the news services' teletype circuits for the tests, for six minutes.

At 9:46 a.m. ESP, United Press International and the Associated Press advised their clients that they had been informed thewrong tape was used by NORAD and that stations should disregard it. But under the provision of the emergency broadcast system, stations that are supposed to leave the air following an alert are to refrain from further broadcasting until the official "cancel" message has been received. That came 44 minutes later and read:

"Message authenticator: Impish-Impish

"Cancel message sent at 09:33 EST repeat cancel message sent at 09:33 EST

"Message authenticator: Impish-Impish -20 Feb."

However, the alert message as well as a corrected version transmitted less than an hour later via a special hookup with the wire services — United Press International and Associated Press — failed to reach some areas of the nation, including Denver, 120 miles away.

The mistake prompted hundreds of telephone calls to police and broadcast stations. Many media officials were infuriated.

"This made us just as angry as hell," said a spokesman for radio station KIXL in Dallas. "You can't play around with things like this. If we had gone on the air and broadcast the alert as being from the President of the United States, some old people would have checked it right then."

"We're considering billing NORAD for three sets of underwear," said Mike Brown of station WKJC in Bluefield, Va. "The real bad part was when we opened the envelope and the words matched."

"I thought I was gonna have

MOMENTS AFTER EXPLOSION

A volunteer runs to help as another man sprays water from a garden hose on the blazing garage of a Novato residence. The fire occurred at 2:46 p.m. yesterday at the home of Kenneth Madis of 4 Driftwood Avenue as the teen-age son of the occupant and companions were siphoning gasoline in the garage. Fumes from the gas were touched off by a water heater, causing a minor explosion. The youth escaped injury but the garage and its contents, including a car and motorcycle, suffered $10,000 damage.

Big Loss For Viet Troops

U.S. Copters Downed In Major Laos Battle

SAIGON (UPI) — A force of 3,000 North Vietnamese besieged a battered South Vietnamese outpost inside Laos with heavy artillery and tanks today in the biggest battle of Saigon's Ho Chi Minh Trail drive. Field reports said South Vietnamese casualties were "immense" and that survivors were short of food.

U.S. helicopter pilots braving withering antiaircraft fire airlifted a 150-man South Vietnamese reinforcing team into the beleaguered outpost-Landing Zone LZ Ranger-five miles inside Laos and carried wounded men out on the return flight.

Military sources said barely one-fourth of the outpost's original complement of 400 men was still able to fight after three days of North Vietnamese attacks.

The sources said at least 26 members of the South Vietnamese 39th Ranger Battalion were killed in LZ Ranger action and 110 more were wounded. Sixty soldiers were reported missing in action and an official spokesman said in Saigon that the entire unit may have been overrun.

One military source at Khe Sanh, headquarters for the American force supporting the South Vietnamese campaign, said defenders of LZ Ranger had been low on food for two days.

Reports reaching Khe Sanh said the North Vietnamese were using big howitzers and tanks, and that LZ Ranger defenders withstood three ground assaults Friday night in a three hour period. Heavy shelling began at 6 p.m. Friday and continued through midmorning today.

U. S. military sources said as many as 12,000 North Vietnamese main force troops appeared to be trying to encircle the 19,000-man South Vietnamese task force which launched an offensive against the Ho Chi Minh Trail in Laos on Feb. 8.

LZ Ranger was established to protect the South Vietnamese force.

U.S. headquarters in Saigon reported five Americans killed, 14 wounded and one missing in action in two clashes with Communist forces near Khe Sanh.

Four men of the 1st Brigade, 5th U.S. Infantry Division Mechanized were killed, seven wounded and one listed as missing in a fight Friday afternoon seven miles northwest of the Khe Sanh airstrip. Early today, Communist troops attacked a night defensive position five miles north of Khe Sanh and headquarters reported one American killed and seven wounded.

Scores of U. S. helicopters flew through a curtain of Communist antiaircraft fire in a relief effort today for LZ Ranger and finally succeeded this afternoon in setting down with a team of 150 South Vietnamese Ranger reinforcements.

One U. S. helicopter was hit and crashlanded on the base, a pilot reported, but he said a second got in and pulled "all the Americans out." However, it appeared that one U. S. helicopter crewman who was flown out of the besieged base

TRAINING: A MOCK EMERGENCY

Nurses and aides at Petaluma's Hillcrest Hospital give emergency treatment to the "victims" of a mock bus accident staged today. Sixteen Boy Scouts were the "victims" of the accident, staged at Highway 101 and East Washington Street. The Scouts were rushed from the scene to the hospital by the Petaluma Ambulance Co. The Civil Defense drill was aimed at preparing the hospital's staff for major emergencies.

Fatal Nursing Home Fire Draws Serious Charges

TAFT, Calif. (UPI)—A fire that trapped seven mentally-retarded patients in a nursing home here has touched off charges that budget cuts by Gov. Ronald Reagan's administration contributed to the tragedy.

The fire broke out early Friday in the Desert Aire rest home, a 50-year-old wood frame structure where the patients were housed under the URISDICtion of the state Social Welfare Department.

The fire destroyed the building and trapped the seven patients before they could flee. Four other patients were able to make their way to safety and a fifth was burned but rescued by the nursing home attendants, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Armstrong.

The blaze occurred 11 days before the patients were to be moved on grounds the structure was a fire hazard.

Several nursing home operators and social workers put the blame on Reagan for ordering cuts in state social welfare spending. Reagan had no comment.

"I think Reagan put the match to the blanket, by ignoring urgent requests to provide money for adequate care,'' said Bob Anderson, executive director of Local 535 of the Social Services Union, which represents 150 psychiatric social workers.

Tom Gilliam, executive-director of the California Association of Nursing Homes, said the dead were the victims of "Reagan's drive to reduce cost in state mental hospitals."

The patients had been placed in Desert Aire, an unlicensed facility, by the Social Welfare Department while they were attending a training school in Taft.

Anderson said the Bakersfield Community Services Office of the department was supposed to find other homes for the patients, but a staff shortage had hindered the effort.

"It's the governor's fault," he said. "Those people wouldn't even have been in that building if Reagan hadn't imposed a hiring freeze on the Social Welfare Department."

Gilliam, whose organization represents 1,000 licensed California nursing homes, called the building "an unlicensed private poorhouse" and charged the patients were put there because the state government wouldn't pay for private facilities.

State Unemployment To Remain High

BERKELEY, Calif. (UPI)—A high rate of unemployment through 1971 is in prospect for California despite an overall modest expansion of the state's economy.

The prediction was contained in a report issued by the California Economic Forecasting Project at the Institute of Business and Economic Research at the University of California.

ITU Strike Gets Grand Jury Look

I-J Special Report

SAN FRANCISCO — A newly impaneled Federal Grand Jury on Organized Crime plans to investigate the 13-month-old printers' strike against the Independent-Journal.

The scope of the probe, which came to light yesterday, was not made clear, although it was disclosed that four members of the striking union and several I-J employees whose homes have been vandalized and firebombed during the long strike have been ordered subpoenaed by the jury.

The investigation became known when former U.S. Attorney Cecil Poole filed a motion in federal court here to either quash or delay a grand jury appearance of two officers and two members of the International Typographical Union.

Members of Local 21 of the ITU struck the paper Jan. 7 of last year, and the walkout has been marked by violence. There have been clashes with police at rallies and attacks on the property of advertisers and the paper's employees. And last July, an I-J production specialist was fatally wounded in his home by two young gunmen.

The jury's subpoenas called

Fire Sweeps Nicasio Home

Fire destroyed a home nearly a century-old in Nicasio last night after the occupants had gone out for dinner.

Glenn Kerch, retired Nicasio fire chief who helped fight the blaze, said that Ed Gallagher, whose ranch is one-half mile from the house located off Point Reyes-Petaluma Road, reported the fire at 9:18 p.m.

The fire, at the home of George A. Boners, was out of control by the time Nicasio volunteer firemen arrived. Marin County firemen arrived with five trucks but could not save the old home.

Bowers told Kerch he had thrown a log in the fireplace before leaving for dinner and said the blaze may have been started by sparks or a fault in the chimney.

Kerch said the flames could be seen in the center of Nicasio, six miles away. No damage estimate was available.

Bowers and his wife and three children are staying temporily with his wife's parents in Nicasio.

WORLD NEWS IN BRIEF

Police Battle

ANKARA (UPI)—Police held controlled dormitories at Hacettepe University today following an hours-long, pitched battle with armed male and female students.

A police spokesman said at least 191 students —40 of them girls—had been arrested after the fight. He said the number of injured might rise "above 100."

Students armed with pistols, dynamite, gasoline bombs, sticks and stones opened fire Friday when helmeted police wielding aluminum shields tried to search dormitories for hidden arms and explosives.

After five hours' fighting, all women's and two of three men's dormitories were in police hands.

Moon Robot Sleeps

MOSCOW (UPI)—The Lunokhod One moon robot has completed its original exploration mission but just keeps rolling along.

The Soviets said the eight-wheeled silver buggy settled down into mechanical hibernation today to endure the punishing cold of another 14-day lunar night—its fourth in three months on the moon.

But the Soviets indicated Friday their space scientists would be thinking up new jobs for the soil-sampling, universe-scouting robot when it awakes March 6.

"The Soviet automatic vehicle Lunokhod One has completely fulfilled its planned program of three months of work on the lunar surface, and it will continue experiments in the Sea of Rains," the official news agency Tass said.

Welfare Raid

ROME (UPI)—More than 1,600 police made a lightning and coordinated raid Friday on 280 orphanages and nurseries in the Roma area. They inspected bedrooms, classrooms and kitchens, interrogated staff and children and carried off books to investigate whether the state is being defrauded.

Judge Luciano Infelisi, the man in charge of the investigation, said all the institutes house orphans or children from broken homes who are being supported at the expense of the state. He said he wanted to make sure that the support money was being put to proper use.

Results of the investigation were not immediately made public. But officials said several abuses had been turned up, including some in a boys' institution run by Roman Catholic priests which they said was almost totally lacking in hygienic requirements.

Student Uproar

PARIS (UPI)—French high school students, bolstered by a unity not seen since the near-revolution of 1968, vowed today to continue their fight against a government shaken by infighting and labor unrest.

In the face of a government ban the students massed more than 10,000 strong Friday to protest for the third time this week the three month jail sentence of Gilles Guiot, 18, accused of punching a policeman in the face. The demonstration took place during the appeal hearing of Guiot.

Suddenly the crowd, jammed onto the Boulevard St. Michel from the River Seine to the Sorbonne school, began to shout the 1968 war cry, "This is only the beginning, continue the fight."

They ran through the streets, handing out leaflets calling for continued demonstrations. "The Guiot case is only one. We'll get the police state," some pamphlets read.

Lon Nol Progress

HONOLULU (UPI) —Cambodian Premier Lon Nol has made rapid progress in his recovery from a stroke and may be able to return home next month, according to his doctors.

Cambodia's public health minister, Kang Keng, who has been with the prime minister since he came here a week ago, said Friday Lon Nol would need at least two more weeks of therapy at Tripler General Hospital, meaning he could return to Phnom Penh in early March.

The 58-year-old prime minister's stroke on Feb. 8 left him partly paralyzed on his left side, but his speech was only slightly affected. Since he has been at Tripler he has been able to move about his room with the aid of a special leg brace. Lon Nol is a diabetic who also has suffered from kidney ailments and hypertension.

"There will be no lasting effect of the stroke on his further political action." Kang said.

Textiles, tobacco items and furniture are the main products of North Carolina.

PX Witness Recalls Saigon Corruption

WASHINGTON (UPI) —A civilian who headed services for military post exchanges in Vietnam has told a Senate subcommittee probing charges of bribery and corruption in the system it was "the worst situation I've ever seen."

But the former PX official, Frank Burgess, refused to elaborate Friday when he appeared before the Senate Permanent Investigation Subcommittee. He repeatedly took the Fifth Amendment when asked if he pocketed kickbacks from U.S. corporation salesmen from whom he purchased liquor, cigarettes and other goods.

Burgess, who served as chief of services for the PX system for one year in Vietnam before retiring last month, also refused to submit his personal financial records to the subcommittee.

He was called as a surprise witness at the third day of hearings into charges of corruption in PX and service club operations in the war zone. Earlier, committee investigators submitted documents they said showed liquor, tobacco and other firms paid kickbacks to military purchasing agents in exchange for orders.

Financial records, canceled checks and affidavits from some of the men involved showed that kickbacks and gratuities to dozens of U. S. personnel ranged from direct payments ($12 per case on L&M cigarettes and $1 a case on Old Crow bourbon) to arrangements for hotel rooms, women and fancy food throughout Asia, the investigators said.

Some of the documents indicated Sgt. William Higdon, one of eight persons indicted Wednesday on charges of fraud and conspiracy in connection with service club operations, was paid thousands of dollars by Liggett & Meyers Tobacco Co. agents "as early as September, 1967" to promote L&M sales.

Homeowners Up

WASHINGTON (UPI) —When the census was taken last year, 39.9 million Americans were living in homes they owned or were buying. The figure was up 7.1 million—or 22 per cent—over 1960.

The Census Bureau said Friday 63 per cent of occupied housing units in the United States in 1970 were in the homeowner class.

Manson Power Display

LOS ANGELES — With one gesture, Charles Manson demonstrated his power over the three young women convicted with him of the seven Tate-LaBianca murders.

While Patricia Krenwinkel was on the stand during Friday's session of the penalty phase of the trial, Manson suddenly raised his left arm and pointed his index finger straight upwards toward the ceiling.

Miss Krenwinkel, 23, stared at him, halting her testimony. Then, slowly, she raised her left arm and index finger in the same gesture. Susan Atkins and Leslie Van Houten followed Manson's lead.

For 35 minutes, until Superior Court Judge Charles H. Older called a recess, Manson kept his arm extended. The girls copied him, occasionally lowering their arms when the strain became too much.

Miss Van Houten followed Miss Krenwinkel to the stand and she also was expected to confess her part in the murders while trying to clear Manson. However, she never got to that point in her testimony before the trial was recessed for the weekend.

Capone Imitator Admits Slaying Three Deputies

DALLAS (UPI)—Rene Adolfo Guzman, a scar-faced ex-convict said to be a drug addict and in imitator of Al Capone, put his signature to a confession Friday night, admitting he and another man arrested with him shot three deputy sheriffs to death beside a river bank five days ago.

Guzman, 33, and Leonardo Ramos Lopez, 25, were captured shortly after midnight Friday when 60 lawmen raided a shabby three-room flat in east Dallas, guided by a spotlight from a hovering helicopter.

Lopez was scheduled to be interrogated today by Dallas County Sheriff Clarence Jones' men.

Both Lopez and Guzman were identified as the killers by Deputy A.D. McCurley, who escaped in the confusion and darkness last Monday while three of his colleagues were being killed and another officer wounded in an execution-style shooting on the barren bottomlands of the Trinity River near downtown Dallas.

In his confession, Guzman said he and Lopez disarmed three officers who came to arrest them in a house. A short time later two more deputies knocked on the door, and they too were disarmed and tied up, Guzman said.

He said he and Lopez loaded the bound lawmen in a car and drove them to the river bottom. He said one of the officers got his hands free and took a swing at Guzman. Guzman, a pistol in each hand, fired until all the captives fell in the darkness, the statement said. Then he said he and Lopez jumped in the car and drove away.

Killed were Dallas County Deputies Samuel Garcia Infante and William Don Reese and Ellis County Deputy A. J. Robertson. The officers had tried to arrest the suspects on burglary charges.

A relative said Guzman "thinks he's Al Capone."

Sheriff Jones said both suspects are drug addicts and may have been high on heroin the night the deputies were murdered.

Guzman's brother, Moises Zuniga Guzman, 35, was arrested the night of the slayings. McCurley said the elder Guzman did not take part in the shootings but did nothing to stop the killings. He was charged with murder.

When police raided the apartment Friday they also arrested gangie Rojo Hernandez, 38, and Mary Alice Rosales, 25. They were charged with harboring fugitives and being accessories to murder.

Retired Policeman Shot Dead At Home

SEATTLE (UPI) —Hazard P. Butterfield, 56, retired Seattle policeman, was shot to death at his home here late Friday night when he answered a knock at the door.

Angela Wins Right To Visitors For Defense

Angela Y. Davis has won permission to have visitors in her jail cell who are necessary to her defense of charges stemming from the Aug. 7 shoot-out at the Marin County Civic Center.

In a ruling yesterday, Superior Court Judge Joseph G. Wilson said such persons would include material witnesses, experts or any other certified as "essential and necessary" by the defense.

Wilson also ruled that a defense attorney must certify to a sheriff's officer that the visitors are not a threat to security.

Miss Davis's defense corps swelled to six yesterday when Sheldon Otis, a Michigan attorney, was named an associate counsel in papers filed in Marin Superior Court.

Miss Davis is charged, along with San Quentin inmate Ruchell Magee, with murder, kidnapping and conspiracy in connection with an escape attempt which resulted in the death of Superior Court Judge Harold Haley and three others.

Miss Davis has petitioned the court to be allowed to represent herself. That request is still pending in superior court.

Other attorneys representing Miss Davis are Howard Moore Jr., Allan Brotsky, Dennis J. Roberts, Margaret Burnham and Michael E. Tigar.

In another development yesterday, Rev. Cecil Williams of the Glide Memorial Methodist Church in San Francisco protested his removal from the list of persons eligible to visit Miss Davis in her cell. Williams, who claims to be her "spiritual adviser," was told last Tuesday he would no longer be able to visit the prisoner except during regular visiting hours.

Corps Asked To Outline Warner Creek Flood Plan

The Novato Creek Committee asked the Army Corps of Engineers last night to submit an outline of various options to cementing Warner Creek.

Herbert W. Cook Jr., co-chairman of the committee, said the Army promised to submit the outline, with costs, in a month.

Upon receipt, Cook said, the committee will hold public hearings for property owners along the creek and then formulate an alternative plan to handle floodwaters.

The Army has proposed to leave Novato Creek in a natural state, but would build a concrete flood control channel in Warner Creek.

However, the concrete channel proposal is the least expensive at $10.2 million, Cook said, so Novato would have to try to finance the difference for a more expensive project.

Most often mentioned of the Army's original 12 options is piping floodwaters under Novato Boulevard. This project would cost more than $14 million, meaning that Novato — through bond issues and state and federal assistance — would have to raise about $4 million, Cook said.

Auto Burglary Hearing Due

Robert John Perinoni, 18, of San Rafael, has pleaded innocent in Marin Municipal Court to charges of possessing stolen property and auto burglary.

He and Russell Fred Meils, 19, also of San Rafael, were arrested Feb. 2 for allegedly breaking into an auto on Highway 37 while the motorist was away getting gasoline.

Preliminary hearings for both men were set for Thursday.

Hearing Slated On Landscaping In Belvedere

A public hearing on landscaping and redesign of the San Rafael Avenue entrance to Belvedere will be held when the city council meets Monday at 8 p.m. at city hall.

The improvements, recommended by the parks and recreation and planning commissions, include construction of a pathway below the level of San Rafael Avenue, plus surveying, grading, planting of ground cover and trees and construction of benches and irrigation and lighting systems.

A representative of M. Carlisle Becker, Tiburon city councilman and San Francisco landscape architect who designed the improvements, will attend the meeting and explain the projects and give cost estimates.

Also on the agenda is selection by the council of the type of street light standards to be used along Beach Road and the color they are to be painted.

He was arrested Jan. 31 in a car leaving the Pleasant Valley School grounds.

Third Bid For Reed Board Seat

Margaret Jones, a housewife, of 270 Bay View Avenue, Belvedere, filed yesterday as a candidate for the Reed School District board in the April 20 election.

Mrs. Jones, wife of Dr. Reese T. Jones, resigned from the board of directors of the League of Women Voters of Southern Marin before filing for the school post.

It is a national policy of the league that no member can run for public office while serving on a league board.

Mrs. Jones was the third candidate to file for two seats on the board. Incumbent Leo Souza and Marie L. McLeod, a housewife, previously filed.

Dr. John J. Osborn of 2960 Paradise Drive has filed for the seat held by Gordon C. Wright, who is the target of a recall election.

Draft Defendants Get Reversal Of Bail Bar

I-J Special Report

SAN FRANCISCO — Lawyers for a Marin man and three other draft violators yesterday won a reversal from a higher court of a judge's decision which had sent their clients to jail pending sentencing.

Judge Samuel Conti on Feb. 10 found Robert E. Lopez of Sleepy Hollow guilty of refusing induction after a brief trial which he heard without a jury.

Conti, sworn in as a federal district judge in December, remanded Lopez into custody while he awaited sentencing. He also followed this same unprecedented policy with three other draft violators.

The practice of other judges in federal district court in San Francisco has been to allow draft defendants to remain free pending sentence, either with or without bail.

The judges have generally either granted straight probation to draft defendants who claimed moral objection to the Vietnam War or given them short jail sentences.

The Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals yesterday ordered that Lopez and the others be released while they await sentencing next Wednesday. Lopez was freed on his own recognizance.

His freedom will probably be short-lived, however, as Judge Conti is expected to send him and the others to prison.

Man Arraigned In Pot Case

Ricky B. Deem, 22, of Santa Venetia, was arraigned yesterday in Marin Municipal Court on misdemeanor charges of possessing narcotics paraphernalia and contributing to the delinquency of a minor.

Judge Peter Allen Smith referred his case to the probation department to see if he may be released on his own recognizance pending further court appearances. He is scheduled to return to court to plead to the charges next Friday.

Deem was arrested yesterday when San Rafael police saw him drinking malt liquor in a car with two juveniles.

was stranded at a second position nearby when his helicopter was forced down by intense antiaircraft fire.

In a radio report from his jungle entrapment, the stranded American reported that at least 65 South Vietnamese Rangers had been killed and 50 wounded in fierce combat.

Highly-placed Allied military sources said fighting raged through the night Friday and until dawn today and that some Communist attackers had been slain at the camp's barbed wire perimeter. The sources said at least 19 South Vietnamese were killed and 32 wounded in one wave of the assault with many of the casualties caused by intense mortar, rocket and artillery fire.

"It' a mess over there," a senior South Vietnamese commander told UPI tonight.

Heroic U. S. helicopter crews managed to lift some of the South Vietnamese casualties out this afternoon, military sources reported, but senior U.S. advisers on the South Vietnamese side of the border described the situation as "bad, very bad." They described South Vietnamese casualties as "immense."

At South Vietnamese headquarters in Saigon, official communiques said 40 South Vietnamese soldiers were wounded and 26 missing after a shelling attack on LZ Ranger early Friday.

"The casualties would indicate the unit may have been overrun," a spokesman at Saigon headquarters told newsmen.

Senior U.S. military advisers said air strikes, artillery and counter-attacks had inflicted hundreds of dead on the North Vietnamese attackers.

Allied military sources said a North Vietnamese defector told South Vietnamese interrogators that his regiment had moved by truck from the Mu Gia Pass to the Ho Chi Minh Trail junction of Sepone, then marched to the area of the LZ Ranger siege. Sepone, a major Ho Chi Minh Trail junction, is the main objective of South Vietnam's campaign to cut the trail.

Combat of the kind raging at LZ Ranger had been predicted by American officials who said North Vietnam would have to protect the Ho Chi Minh Trail or lose the Indochina war. The trail is Hanoi's lifeline to Commmunist troops in South Vietnam and Cambodia.

"It was 2-1-2 hours of hell," said Pfc. James C. Costello, 20, an Army medic of Bellevue, Wash. in describing the situation at the outpost Thursday when the pilot of his helicopter was wounded fatally when their chopper was hit by Communist ground fire. He was finally rescued by another U.S. helicopter.

The besieged outpost in Laos consists of two battalion-sized positions, (850 men) on hills about 1,100 yards apart and overlooks what a U.S. adviser described as "a big damn road." He said the North Vietnamese apparently had 130mm and 152mm artillery pieces in the valley.

Allied forces firing from a command post inside South Vietnam were providing constant 105mm and 155mm artillery support for LZ Ranger.

ALERT

a heart attack trying to open that damn envelope," said Dave Skinner, news director of WEVA in Emporia, Va. "I haven't felt that way since John F. Kennedy was killed."

A station manager in Milwaukee wanted to know "who got their heads screwed in backwards?" Another in Minneapolis said he was "ready to put on my uniform," and across the river in St. Paul, a manager said he was about "to tell the engineer to unplug everything and go home."

Many stations did not leave the air —some because they are not required to and others because they did not notice the alert until after the news services pointed out it was erroneous.

Typical of the calls from fearful citizens was one from Corine Muldoon, 24, of Cambridge, Mass.

JURY

for the four men to appear Tuesday. Poole's motions were quickly denied yesterday by Chief U.S. District Court Judge Oliver J. Carter.

The Independent-Journal has also learned that several of its employees who have suffered property damage through strike-related vandalism have been subpoenaed.

Subpoenas have been issued for John D. Martini, vice president of ITU Local 21; George Duncan, ITU International representative of Los Angeles; Grant Anders, a member of the Mount Diablo local of the ITU, and James R. Brocato of Santa Rosa, an ITU member.

Poole said this morning that only Anders has actually been served with a subpoena. He said it was "questionable" whether the other three would be subpoenaed in time to appear Tuesday. He did not elaborate.

Poole sought to quash the subpoenas on the basis that he had not had time to discuss the case with those subpoenaed.

"We're not trying to duck anything or question the jury's right to investigate this. We just want time to discuss the aspects," Poole said today.

"I also pointed out to the judge that the subpoenas were defective in that they ordered the men to report to the offices of the Department of Justice Organized Crime Strike Force and not before the jury itself. But the judge said this could be rectified by verbal instruction to the men," Poole added.

Poole said he was leaving for Santa Barbara early Monday and would not be able to be on hand for the hearing Tuesday.

Two of the men subpoenaed — Brocato and Anders — have pleaded guilty to conspiring to break the windows of businesses who have continued to advertise in the Independent-Journal. They are scheduled to be sentenced March 5 in Solano County Superior Court.

Poole said he did not know whether Anders would appear Tuesday as ordered. "I haven't talked with him since I went before the judge Friday," Poole said.

OBITUARIES

Berryhill Memorial Rite Set

Memorial service is pending for Helen Huntington Berryhill Heilman of Berkeley, mother of the founder of San Anselmo's Festival Theater, Elizabeth Berryhill.

Mrs. Heilman died Thursday at a Marin convalescent hospital after a long illness. She was 82.

She was a pianist, singer and teacher who founded the Berkeley Musical Association and the Berkeley Music Center.

A native of Des Moines, Iowa, Mrs. Heilman taught briefly at Drake University there after graduating from the Institute of Musical Art (now the Juilliard School of Music) in New York City.

She was trained as a pianist and concert singer and, after moving to Berkeley 50 years ago, became a piano and voice teacher.

She was a member of St. John's Presbyterian Church, Berkeley, and the Berkeley Piano Club.

Also surviving are her husband, William R. Heilman of Scottsburg, Ind.; a brother, John Chadwick Huntington of Stewartsville, N.J.; a second daughter, Ann B. Angelo of Brussels, Belgium; eight grandchildren, and four great-grandchildren.

She was the daughter of Clarence W. Huntington, president of the Virginian Railway.

The family asked that contributions be made to the Berkeley Piano Club Scholarship Fund, 2724 Haste Street, Berkeley.

ALLAN CAMERON

Private funeral for Allan E. Cameron of Montreal, Canada, father of Beverley Norman of San Rafael, was today in San Anselmo.

Cameron, 64, died Wednesday at a Marin hospital after a long illness. He had been visiting Mrs. Norman the past three months.

Born in Toronto, Canada, he lived briefly in Ohio before settling in Montreal about 40 years ago.

He was foreman for a printing company until his retirement three years ago.

Surviving are his wife, Josephine Cameron of Montreal; two other daughters, Loraine Rattary and Barbara Hughes, both of Montreal, and four grandchildren.

VINCENT GINI

Vincent Gini of Mill Valley, a retired restaurant owner, died yesterday in a local hospital after a long illness. He was 75.

Gini was retired owner of the Silver Fox Cafe in San Francisco. Born in San Guisto Lucca, Italy, he lived in San Francisco before moving to Marin 10 years ago.

He lived at 407 Marin Avenue.

Surviving are his wife, Amelia; a daughter, Gina Matteucci, and a son, Robert Gina, both of San Anselmo; two sisters, Rosina Comessi and Lida Scarpellini, both of Italy, and two brothers, Gino Gini of Italy and Domenico Gini of Sebastopol, and three grandchildren.

Requiem Mass will be offered at 9:30 a.m. Monday at Our Lady of Mount Carmel Catholic Church, Mill Valley, with burial in Italian Cemetery, Colma. Rosary will be recited at 8 p.m. tomorrow at Russell and Gooch Mortuary, Mill Valley.

GLENN KELLEY

Rev. Glenn A. Kelley, assistant pastor at St. Raphael's Church in San Rafael from 1936 to 1944, died yesterday in a Daly City hospital after a long illness. He was 71.

Father Kelley was sent to Marin the year he was ordained from St. Patrick's Seminary in Menlo Park. After leaving Marin, he was with St. Paul's Catholic Church in San Francisco, then with a Rio Vista parish.

For the past 12 years, he was pastor of St. William's Catholis Church in Los Altos.

He was born in Oakland.

Surviving him is a sister, Vera K. Kwapil of San Rafael.

Requiem Mass will be said Monday at 10:30 a.m. at St. William's, El Monte at Covington, Los Altos, with burial at Gate of Heaven Cemetery, Los Altos. Rosary will be recited tomorrow at 8 p.m. at St. William's.

DORA JUDA

Private funeral for Dora Juda, mother of Mrs. Burt Capel of Larkspur, was held yesterday in San Francisco.

Mrs. Juda died Thursday in her home in San Francisco. She was 94.

A native of California, she lived in San Francisco for 76 years. She was the widow of Leon Juda.

In addition to her daughter in Larkspur, she is survived by a son, Felix Juda of Los Angeles and several grandchildren and great-grandchildren.

Burial was at the Hill of Eternity Cemetery in Colma.

Electric Jolt For Drinkers

CHICAGO (UPI) — Comment of a patron told she had just been served a computer-made martini: 'A-ar-gh!"

Not so, say the master mixer's owners, the Jolly Chef Restaurant. Ron Briskman, a proprietor, said Thursday the machine is fast, never gyps the customers and eliminates spilled booze.

The machine is not particularly obvious. Basically, it looks like an overgrown cash register, with a panel of buttons labeled for 36 drinks and a spout at the bottom.

The bartender puts a glass under the spout, punches the appropriate button and the drink is ready.

Briskman said some of the customers "realized something funny was going on."

"One customer asked why all the television cameras were here today and when I told her, she said, 'A-ar-gh.'

Briskman said the regular bartender didn't like the computer at first, either.

Prison Probe Hears Of Inmate Beatings

RAIFORD, Fla. (UPI)—Two Raiford State Prison inmates, one of them a former attorney convicted of murder, testified at a state investigation Friday that they had witnessed unprovoked beatings of prisoners.

Prison officials denied the charges during an eight-and-one-half-hour hearing conducted by two aides to Gov. Ruebin Askew.

Meanwhile, District Judge Gerald Tjoflat scheduled a hearing in Jacksonville on a suit filed by the American Civil Liberties Union (ACLU) calling for a federal takeover of the prison until the court is convinced that the prisoners' rights are not being violated.

The suit charges about 500 prisoners were fired upon "at point-blank range with automatic weapons and shotguns with lethal caliber buckshot" during an incident Feb. 12.

The two inmates told the investigators prisoners were forced to run a gauntlet of state troopers swinging nightsticks during a "show of force" by prison officials last Tuesday. The disturbance resulted in injuries to eight prisoners and four officers, capping a week-long series of confrontations at Florida's largest correctional facility.

The most serious incident was the confrontation mentioned in the ACLU's suit in which 64 inmates were wounded —all but one from gunfire— during a riot on the recreation field at the main prison unit.

Former Attorney Joseph A. Peel, 46, who was convicted in the murders of Judge C. E. Chillingworth and his wife in 1955, testified inmates were beaten without provocation as they were being removed from the ground floor of their three-tiered cellblock.

China Warns On Laos

TOKYO (UPI)—Communist China said today the Allied incursion into Laos constituted "a grave menace to China" and said through the operation President Nixon has "reached the zenith in arrogance."

Peking's Peoples Daily, the official Chinese Communist Party newspaper, rejected Nixon's statement earlier in the week that the Laotian drive does not pose a threat to Peking.

The report was broadcast by Peking Radio and heard in Tokyo.

"Laos lies not in northwest Europe or South America but in north Indochina," the newspaper said.

"Nixon should not lose his head and forget such a common knowledge in geography," the newspaper said.

"By spreading the flames of war to the door of China, U.S. imperialism is on a course posing a grave menace to China. Nixon has indeed laid bare his ferocious features and reached the zenith in arrogance," Peoples Daily said.

"We must warn Nixon once again that the 700 million Chinese people will not allow you to run amok in Indochina."

Car Flips Over, Driver Injured

A 16-year-old San Rafael youth suffered scrapes and swelling of the head and arms when his car flipped into a ditch yesterday, according to San Rafael police.

Police said a car driven by James H. McKee, Jr., 16, of 600 Idylberry Road, Marinwood, failed to negotiate a left turn from Las Pavadas Avenue onto Manuel T. Freitas Expressway at 12:14 a.m.

McKee left the car upside down in the water of the ditch and walked home, police said. He was cited at home for not have a driver's license in his possession.

Low Cost Housing Plan On Tap

Planning techniques to provide more low and moderate income housing will be discussed by the Marin County Planning Commission, meeting at 9 a.m. Monday in the Civic Center Administration Building.

headed by Margaret B. Azevedo will present a draft of a county housing policy statement. The statement is needed to qualify the county for federal aid through the Department of Housing and Urban Development. It also establishes guidelines for preparation of a countywide housing plan that will meet state requirements.

The statement suggests such techniques as offering bonuses for developers of low and moderate income housing, use of air rights over publicly owned buildings, added second units to existing single family homes, and offering tax rebates for low income homeowners.

In other matters before the commission, Charlotte Berkov will ask for a four-lot land division at Indian Valley Springs Road and Indian Valley Road in southwest Novato.

James Hall School in Los Ranchitos will seek permission to add a new classroom building and a swimming pool on the 3.3-acre school property.

Pleads Innocent To Arson Charge

Rhonda Pflaumer, 23, of San Francisco, has pleaded innocent in Marin Municipal Court to a charge of arson. A preliminary hearing was set for March 9.

She was arrested Sunday after a Sausalito man told police she had set his car on fire.

Differing Pictures Of Officer's Firing

I-J SPECIAL REPORT

SANTA ROSA — A Marin psychiatrist testified yesterday that former Petaluma policeman Robert C. Blagborne was emotionally unstable at the time his probationary status was extended.

The testimony concluded the hearing in which Blagborne sought reinstatement, charging he was fired because of participation in wage negotiations that nearly led to a police strike last summer.

Blagborne's attorney, Paul A. Neuer of San Francisco, hammered away at the testimony of Dr. Edward Shev of Greenbrae, who said he was a physician specializing in neurology and psychiatry.

Shev, who had been under contract as police psychiatrist for a year, said he interviewed Blagborne at the request of Asst. City Mgr. John T. Nolan on Sept. 16. He said he called for a second interview Sept. 22 because the officer had been uncommunicative in the first visit. He finally recommended that Blagborne's probationary status be extended for six months to work out personal problems.

Neuer questioned Dr. Shev's credentials as a psychiatrist and wondered how he could come to a conclusion about Blagborne after only two 45-minute interviews and without benefit of psychological testing.

Dr. Shev said Blagborne became angry and showed "paranoid symptoms" when questioned about personal problems relating to the illness of his father. Neuer insisted it would be natural to be angry about outside interference on such matters.

Also testifying yesterday were Lt. George Wagner and Sgt. Jimmie Matthews, who had been Blagborne's watch commanders, and Petaluma City Mgr. Robert H. Meyer.

Wagner testified that Blagborne sometimes balked at orders and disagreed with decisions of his superiors. Neuer produced efficiency reports prepared by Wagner that had described Blagborne's performance as competent overall.

Neuer pointed out that it wasn't until after the wage dispute in August that some mention was made on a report of an attitude problem.

Matthews said Blagborne was argumentative and had a demoralizing effect on other officers. Meyer testified the officer had never been involved in negotiations other than as a voting member of the Police Officers Association.

Judge Kenneth M. Eymann took the case under consideration, but gave no indication on when a decision might be reached.

Pot-Testing Youth Values Police Trust

CLEARFIELD, Utah (UPI)—When police pick up marijuana and hashish in narcotics raids, they save it for high school senior Jeff Murray, 17, who feeds it to fruit flies to study the effects of the drugs on them.

"It would be so easy to collect the marijuana and start selling it," he said, "and some of the students have asked me to. But the police trust me and I'm going to keep it that way."

HELEN HELP US!

By HELEN BOTTEL

Lovable Little Brother Tells All And Always Gets In The Way

DEAR HELEN:

Big brothers got a big hand in your column. Now let's hear it for the little guys:

What Is A Little Brother?

A little brother is one who teases you unmercifully about your boy friend but as soon as you mention another guy, he comes up with, "What's the matter with . . . ?"

Really, who else would ask your newest fella "Are you going to marry my sister?" or tell someone special, "You can't sit there, that's Larry's chair!" (Larry is your other boyfriend).

He's the one who comforts you when you're sick in bed and even brings you a library book from elementary school.

The one who begs you for a nickel, promising to give you some of what he buys. Result: He gets the five baseball cards and you get the stale piece of bubblegum (which he expects back).

He tells you that you can't do anything right when you play kickball with him, but somehow the next day his friends all pile around the fence to watch you kick that ball.

He's at the age now where he hates girls and can't stand "mush," but sometimes he'll give you a quick hug — his sister of all people. You ask "why?" and he'll say, "Because I felt like it."

Who else would tell your father you ran over all the speakers when you only grazed one at the drive-in?

He is the wonderful excuse to go on the ferry, to the zoo, out roller skating on the sidewalk, and for eating that "awful" cotton candy (you love).

A little brother is the only one possible to blame for using your hair rollers as tunnels for his electric train.

Should you have a late date and come home to find something spread-eagle across your bed —guarantee it's a little brother.

Who gets hungry late at night and wants a pizza; puts artificial bugs and worms in the ice cube tray; uses your hair dryer because his "sheets are cold?"

You guessed it: One bright, bubbly, happy, though somewhat spoiled little brother you wouldn't trade for anyone else in the world. — TWO BIG SISTERS

DEAR HELEN: I have a boy friend who talks about breaking up, and then talks about getting married. What do you think of a guy like this? — V. W.

DEAR V.;

We-l-l-l, he's either talking himself into a future (with you) or else he's talking about two different girls. — H.

DEAR HELEN:

I disagree with "Mad Student." Teachers put in as much overtime as kids do, and besides that, they have to cope with students who are so blind they can't see that school is to help them.

Too bad that so many grow up believing school work is a pain instead of a privilege. If schools were suddenly closed, maybe they'd realize how much they now take for granted. — SCHOOL LOVER

SEW SIMPLE

Methods Of Tailoring Have Changed With Softer Looks

By EUNICE FARMER

DEAR EUNICE,

I have sewed for years and always enjoyed it but never so much as I do now. The fabrics are so beautiful they are irresistible, and the ready-made clothes so ugly. I wonder if that is the reason there is so much activity in home sewing. I used to look forward to the day when I could spend any amount I chose for my ready-made clothes. Today I consider it much more of a thrill to buy the nicest fabric available and do my own sewing.

I just started a tailoring course and being curious, I went to the library and started to do some research on tailoring. Much to my amazement, the teacher I am studying with doesn't teach tailoring the way the professional books explain. Do you think I am wise in continuing my lessons?

Mrs. J.C.C.

DEAR MRS. J.C.C.,

The sign of the times seems to bring changes in every field. Tailoring was once a very laborious thing and very few women were capable of doing it themselves with any amount of success. Years ago when women's clothes resembled men's, with menswear fabric and styling, it was necessary to tailor a woman's suit or coat just exactly like a man's garment would be tailored.

Today, with the softer look in women's clothes, we find more dressmaker styling and the hard finish fabrics have been replaced by fabrics with more texture and dimension. The fabrics have also resulted in a different styling that is more appropriate. For this reason, many of the old tailoring manuals have become obsolete.

It sounds like your teacher has up-dated her methods and the results are more "au courant". If you have seen any of the garments she has made, I am sure this will convince you that she is correct. It is much simpler for the home sewer and certainly more successful for today's look.

MRS. EDNA Bollinger, Louisville, Ky, is this week's Tailor Trix pressing board winner for her sewing suggestion:

"When your dress needs gathering, I have found an accurate, simple and very controlled method which I would like to share with your readers. After the first row of machine stitching on the right side of your fabric, don't cut your thread at the end of the row. Instead, continue stitching by lifting up the pressure foot, turning it at a right angle, take two stitches, lift up the foot again and turn to another right angle and machine stitch back to where you began. The second row of stitching will appear 1/4 inch below the first row (this row should be exactly on your 5/8 inch seamline). Now when you pull the bobbin threads together to ease the necessary amount, the threads won't pull out of the opposite end and is much easier to handle"

DEAR EUNICE,

What is a LaCoste type knit? Also, I have to lengthen my dress of this knit and since I saved the extra allowance I cut off last summer, I am wondering what would be the best way to add the extra length without having it look pieced?

MRS. Y.S.

DEAR MRS. Y.S..

LaCoste type knit is a polyester knit that has been associated with a manufacturer that makes exclusive sportswear. It is a pebbly surface much like a sharkskin finish. It is now available for the home sewer and is still best suited for sportswear.

As to the piece you have cut off your dress that you now wish to re-apply, carefully pin it in the same position, lapping it very slightly to avoid a gathered look. Machine stitch the two layers of fabric together, not in a regular type seam, but simply overlapping the fabric.

There are so many attractive braids, bindings and trims of polyester today, simply apply one of these over the seam you have just joined. You could repeat the trim for a belt, outlining the collar or sleeves and it will probably be more attractive than in its original form. Many times I have noticed that a garment that you had to use some creativity on turns out to be your greatest success.

For illustrated instructions on how to make professional looking bound buttonholes send a stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request for "Bound Buttonholes" to Eunice Farmer in care of the Independent-Journal.

Marin Open House Benefit Party To Be Held Friday In Sausalito

A party to benefit Marin Open House will be held Friday from 6 to 9 p.m. in the Portal Gallery of the Village Fair Building in Sausalito.

The open house benefit for Marin's drug treatment center will feature a jazz trio, wine tasting and buffet dinner.

Dr. Roger Smith, director of the center, will speak, and posters, prints, pottery, batiks, books, leather purses and flowers will be sold.

Tickets are available at Marin Open House, 1327 Lincoln Avenue in San Rafael and will be sold at the door.

NEW OFFICERS of Woodwardia Circle, Neighbors of Woodcraft, are Mmes. Edith Godair, guardian neighbor; Frank Mattos, past guardian neighbor; Ada Earwood, magician; Kenneth Jones, attendant; Jessie Leavell, banker; Albert Sabel, clerk; Lawrence Hancock, captain of guards; Esther Lewis, musician; Josephine Bright, flag bearer; Mattos, Halsmer Ongman and Poster Lawrence, managers; Manuel Azevedo, outer sentinel; Mary Silva, inner sentinel; Rose Solari, correspondent; Ada Kane, senior guardian; and Carl Brooks, deputy clerk.

Dr. Charles Musante is advisor.

MRS. CHARLES R. Thurman of Greenbrae has been presented a certificate of appreciation by the San Francisco Bay Area Girl Scout Council.

Mrs. Thurman was honored for seven years of volunteer service as an artist and designer for the Girl Scout council.

THE FINAL program in a series of four lectures on "Man and His Neighbors," will be held at 8 p.m. Tuesday at Hill Junior High School Library in Novato. The program, featuring multi-ethnic studies in Novato, is being presented by Novato Branch of the American Association of University Women and the Marin YWCA.

Speakers will be Raleigh Floyd, president of Novatans for Racial Equality and chairman of the Citizens Multi-ethnic Studies Committee, and Mrs. Carlin Nelson, teacher at West Novato School and Kay Kaufman, a teacher at Hill Junior High School, both members of the Novato Unified School District Multi-Ethnic Studies Committee.

A TOTAL of $3,000 was raised for the Greek Orthodox Church of Marin County building fund by the recent St. Valentine's Day and Mardi Gras party at the Corte Madera Recreation Center. The party was sponsored by the Ladies Philopthos Society and the parish council.

A COUNSELING session for parents will be hosted by the Hill Junior High School Parent-Teacher Association in the school auditorium in Novato at 8 p.m. Tuesday.

"What Course For Your Student?" will be the title of the program and will give parents an opportunity to learn about required courses and electives during secondary school years in Novato for the 1971-72 year, according to Mrs. Howard Crabtree, P-TA president.

Ninth graders will meet with high school counselors Thursday, to learn more about course selections for the coming year.

FRANK TAINTER will be speaker and auctioneer for the Antique Study Group of the Novato Newcomers Club auction to be held Wednesday at 9:30 a.m. at the home of Mrs. Charles Yates in Novato.

Articles to be auctioned will be brought to Mrs. Yates' home on Tuesday. Reservations chairmen are Mmes. Edgar Garland and Yates.

OFFICERS AND trustees for Belvedere Nursery School Corporation were elected recently.

Re-elected for 1971 were Mmes. Richard Otter, president; William Hynes, vice president and Gardner Baldwin, treasurer. Mrs. Robert Flint succeeds Mrs. Harry Brownson as secretary. Mrs. Robert Bastian is executive director.

New trustees to serve three-year terms are Mmes. John Lorenzen, Charles McDaneld and Thomas Uhry. Continuing on the board are Mmes. Harry Brownson and F. J. Dreyfous. Retiring are Mmes. Mark Noble, Donald Bekins and B. G. Falk, junior past president.

THE PROBLEMS of overpopulation will be the subject of Tuesday's public meeting of the Mill Valley Branch of the American Association of University Women.

Virgil Bozarth, a representative of Zero Population Growth, will be the speaker at the gallery of the Mill Valley Library at 10 a.m. Bozarth is a retired junior high school principal from Martinez who devotes full time to the Zero Population Growth organization.

Miss Burman Is A Bride

Penelope Anne Burman and Kenneth Wayne Casey were married Feb. 11 in the home of friends in Davis.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward James Burman of Kentfield, and the bridegroom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Leon Casey of Sacramento.

Penny was graduated from Redwood High School and the University of California at Davis. She is a kindergarten teacher in Woodland. The bride is the sister of Heidi Burman of Sun Valley, Idaho, and Gretchen Burman of Kentfield. Mrs. James A. Burman of Oakland is her local grandmother.

Kenneth was graduated from McClatchy High School in Sacramento and attended U. C. at Davis, where he is now in the educational television department.

The couple are living in Dixon.

CHRIS PILARA became the bride of Gary D. Story in a ceremony at Trinity Lutheran Church in San Rafael. Her parents are Mr. and Mrs. Leonard J. Pilara of San Anselmo, and he is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Luther C. Story of Dallas, Tex. A reception at Dominic's restaurant in San Rafael followed the ceremony.

Women Continue To Get Less Pay Than Men

NEW YORK (UPI) — The wage gap between men and women in the United States has been widening in recent years, with women getting a shorter and shorter end of the paycheck, reports a study by the Chase Manhattan Bank. The bank attributes the decline to several factors, among them that women are generally employed in lower-paying, lower-level jobs than men. Also that the marked increase of women in the labor force has created greater competition for the jobs open to them, tending to depress wages even more in those jobs.

Ballet Aquacade Tryouts Are Set

Swim tryouts for the 26th annual Marin Ballet Aquacade will be held from 1 to 3 p.m. March 6 and 13 in the girls' gymnasium at Sir Francis Drake High School.

Girls in the eighth through 12th grades wishing to try out should bring a swimsuit, bathing cap with chin strap and a towel. Swimmers are selected on their ability to perform basic stunts, strokes, sculling and endurance.

Mrs. William Randolph of Kentfield, swim coordinator, will supervise the tryouts. Judges will be the coaches for the various swim routines, Mmes. Paul Alioto, Peter J. Brajkovich, Robert Finn, William Hillebrand, Steve Minutoli, Christopher Scales, and Miss Joann Elkin.

Registration committee for tryouts will be Mmes. R. A. Bacci, Clarence Bohn, D. S. Bordner, Bryon Box, William Hillebrand and David M. Sullivan, Ballet Aquacade president.

A YOUNG ARTIST

'Turned On' To Be Just Alive

By LAURA DEVENDORF

Not all youth is infected by the "Bay Area mood," a term coined by Charles Maurice, art instructor at San Rafael High School, to cover young persons with a bored and "turned off" attitude.

And he should know. He works with a small student element whose attitudes are just the opposite.

Among them is Dolph Jones, a 17-year-old senior, whose one-man show continues through Tuesday at the San Rafael Schools Administration Building, Third and E streets.

Judged on size alone, the 51-piece show — ranging from a subtle design painted on a small ceramic tile to a painting that approaches wall size — is hardly the product of a lazy or indifferent mind. And this represents only about half his two-year output.

The ideas and techniques with which he experiments are similarly open and energetic. One canvas is done by floating machine oil in house paint. Another is partly burned away with a blow torch.

Jones may create a cool geometric design from wood chips and paint or a bizarre drawing of a figure shaped like a bowling pin with a terrifying, sawtoothed fish forming the face and head.

At one moment he may turn out a convincing bit of realism, such as the sea diver inspired by his interest in skin diving. Another time anything will do for a painting surface, such as the back of an old pull down classroom map on which Jones painted progressions of watery nudes.

Maurice describes him as "... a person who finds materials and puts them to work in unorthodox combinations. He's very innovative with supplies." And from all this you might expect a more flamboyant personality than the quiet and pleasant person you find earnestly working on an etching in the cluttered school studio.

Jones gives the impression of being much like serious artists twice his age who are too busy "doing" to do much talking about art and who would rather let their work speak for them.

Perhaps, as the saying goes, "If he could say it in words he wouldn't have to paint it." Anyway, Maurice says that Jones "disdains verbalizing about his work." And when comments from others get uncomfortably drippy with praise, "He just walks away," Maurice said.

What comes through in his painting is a talent so awakened to the many possibilities that might be achieved, that it can hardly wait to try the next thing. It's a sort of reflection of someone "turned on" to being alive and constructively enjoying it.

Marin City Development Idea To HUD

A contract which would give the Marin Urban Development Association exclusive development rights in Marin City has been referred to the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development for review.

The action was taken Wednesday at a joint meeting of the Marin County Housing Authority and Redevelopment Agency boards, according to Wallace K. Shepherd, executive director of both organizations.

The Marin City-based development group is seeking to replace the California Development Corp. which has held development rights in the community for seven years, Shepherd said.

The housing and redevelopment boards will await HUD approval before giving final authorization to the development association, Shepherd said.

The Marin County Housing Authority also:

SOIL TESTS — Approved a $1,000 contract with Soil Engineers Harding, Miller, Lawson and Associates to investigate several small landslides which have occurred near Marin City housing units.

PERSONNEL — Approved recommendations from the state personnel board to increase salary ranges for executive director (to $17,000-21,000), deputy director (to $14,000-17,000) and housing manager (to $9,000-11,000) and create a new post, tenant relations officer, with a salary from $7,800 to $9,480.

STUDY — Authorized a San Francisco consulting firm, E. M.Schaffran and Co., to study public housing needs in Marin. Cost of the survey has not been set.

LEASED — Applied to the department of housing and urban development for 300 more units of leased housing in the county.

EVICTION — Voted to evict Willie C. Smith, owner of the Marin City Coffee Shop (located in a building owned by the authority), if he fails to remove a pool table from the premises. Shepherd said installation of the table violated the terms of Smith's lease.

ART REVIEW

Why Gravestones? Ugly Ones, Too

Eight — count them — eight, small, ugly and very genuine gravestones are the sum and substance of the current College of Marin Gallery show. And to go along with them is the following explanation:

"A gallery space always influences the receptivity and understanding of the works of art within it. Each show is affected differently. A work may seem more profound or whimsical, large or small, well or poorly made, etc., than the same work located elsewhere, or, any two works of art may relate differently in one space than they do in another."

This heady hunk of language introduces a series of six College of Marin exhibitions, each lasting about a week, by the Ant Hill, a group of University of California artists.

The local group includes Ben Blackwell, Nancy Evans, Leonard Hunter, James Pomeroy and Michael Wright. Together they claim credit for collecting the eight specimens from a tombstone factory. Collecting is about as far as it goes too. Little alteration has been made other than coloring, an etched rose on one of them.

Presumably, the Ant Hill has selected the grossest samples from the factory. They are collectively and individually awful-from the huge fat marble pillow cut with flowers and the words "Eternal Rest" to a singularly bad attempt at being sculptural with big jutting geometric shapes unbelievably finalized with delicate flowers.

Another is cut with an open grand piano, the masks of comedy and tragedy and a bar of music.

Relating all this back to the group's official statement, the gravestones make their point. You just can't be "receptive" to them in a gallery the way you would be in a cemetery. They are "affected differently" and whereas graves don't usually provoke laughter, seeing them in a gallery environment makes them grotesquely funny.

But is it worth a trip to a gallery just to acknowledge a point well made or to experience this brief surprise? It would be if these were really "works of art," or otherwise worthwhile in themselves. — LD

Topless Business Under Fire

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Owner Ernie Byrd of Clancy's restaurants said it increased business 200 per cent when his waitresses started wearing see-through blouses, tights and net stockings.

But some of the waitresses revolted Friday and threw up picket lines.

"Would you want your wife or sister to go topless?" one placard read.

Mrs. Pat Shifflete, one of the pickets, said she and the other waitresses did not mind dancers at the Clancy's restaurant in southeast Washington going topless, but "waitresses get grabbed."

"Many of us are mothers and we don't want nudity shoved down our throats," she said.

The general manager of the chain of six restaurants, Joe Cannon, said the move was ordered because "we have to keep up with the times."

"They have a preference of wearing a bra or not, or wearing pasties or not," Cannon said. "This has been going on in Washington for the last several years. There's nothing immoral about it."

Rec Panel In Favor Of City-Operated Restroom

The Sausalito Recreation Commission has gone on record favoring a city-operated public restroom for the downtown area, City Engineer Norman Wohlschlaeger reported.

He said the commission, which met Thursday, will recommend to the city council that the restroom be located adjacent to the ticket booth at the entrance to municipal parking lot No. 1 — close to both Bridgeway businesses and the Golden Gate Bridge's ferry dock.

The commission will also recommend that the city council include $100,000 for a new Sausalito youth center building in its 1971-72 budget, according to Wohlschlaeger.

The youth center is now located in the Old Star of the Sea Catholic Church property which is up for sale, he said.

Two-Car Crash Injures Three

A two-car head-on crash in the 700 block of Tiburon Boulevard at 7:45 a.m. yesterday injured three persons, none seriously, Tiburon sheriff's deputies reported.

Treated at Marin General Hospital were Lyle Lang, 64, of 1401 Casa Buena Drive, Corte Madera, for face and neck cuts; Irving E. Levine, 62, of 74 San Rafael Avenue, Belvedere, for a cut and possibly broken nose, and John Levine, 16, also of the San Rafael Avenue address, for pain in both hips.

Muskie Director

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Washington attorney James S. Campbell has been named director of domestic policy development for the unannounced campaign for the presidency of Sen. Edmund S. Muskie, D-Maine.

Hughes' Wife Seeking Divorce

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Despite her refusal to answer questions, rumors continued today that Jean Peters, estranged wife of billionaire Howard Hughes, would marry 20th Century-Fox executive Stanley Hough, when she obtains a divorce.

A Hughes spokesman said the billionaire has "given his blessing" to the couple, but that no divorce had been obtained.

A friend of Miss Peters said the former actress probably will file for divorce in Nevada where it will be unnecessary for Hughes to appear in the legal action.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. THEODORE R. VAN DELLEN

Migraine Headaches May Have Allergic Or Emotional Origin

When I was in medical school, most headaches were considered to be migraine. But with each passing decade, specific forms of head pain were separated from the group and, as a result, the real (classical) migraine no longer is a common disorder. The offshoots occur more often and include cluster and stress headache.

THERE IS A possibility that migraine will be subdivided further into different classifications according to cause. Many physicians also believe that an allergic migraine exists. In these instances, chocolate, milk, wheat and pork are the most common offenders The culprit in food is thought to be tyramine, an enzyme that triggers the brain to release a chemical that constricts blood vessels initially and then dilates the arteries. The pulsating pain of migraine is caused by dilation or stretching of the vessels.

Several good reports have appeared on the beneficial effects of avoiding the foods mentioned. Chocolate is eliminated first. If headache does not develop, chocolate is not the culprit. On the other hand, if pain returns avoid milk and any item that contains milk. Next eliminate wheat, pork, etc. When headaches persist despite eliminating certain foods, allergy probably is not the culprit.

IN CERVICAL MIGRAINE, a spur on one of the vertebra presses upon a blood vessel going to the brain. A case was reported recently but it is not a common cause. Special X-rays were needed to detect the defect and surgery was followed by a cure.

Severe migraine also may be of an emotional origin, especially in women. Many victims are perfectionists and develop headache when their plans do not materialize or they undergo a heavy strain or unhappiness. Perhaps they have a hippie daughter or an alcoholic mate.

As with allergy, it is difficult to explain why chocolate or an emotional disturbance selects the vessels of one side of the brain. After all, typical migraine is one-sided.

HORMONES AND HAIR

J. J. writes: What would cause a 50-year-old woman to sprout fine white hairs all over her face and neck? She has been taking hormones for about three years.

REPLY

At this age, unwanted hair often is a problem even among women who do not take hormones. I do not know, however, what hormone was taken and in what dosage. Meanwhile, she could shave or use a bleach or a wax depilatory. Electrolysis is not practical, considering the amount of hair that is present.

HOT FLASH ON THIGH

J. D. L. writes: What causes a hot flash on the thigh? I can be sitting, standing or driving, when this hot flash or pain hits my left thigh. The minute I rub my thigh, the sensation goes away.

REPLY

Since this occurs in the same place, I assume it must come from a nerve. Causes of vague or unusual symptoms are sometimes difficult to track down.

UNTREATED BURSITIS

S. A. writes: What is the outcome if bursitis goes untreated?

REPLY

Some get better, some worse, and the remainder continue to have pain and disability. Untreated bursitis of the shoulder may be followed by a stiff or frozen shoulder. Our leaflet on bursitis can be obtained by sending stamped self-addressed envelope with request.

Venue Change Ruled Out In Ohta Killing

SANTA CRUZ, Calif. (UPI)— A superior court judge has refused a request to move the trial of John Lindley Frazier, accused killer of five persons at a mountaintop mansion.

Defense attorney James Jackson had sought the change on grounds that the shaggy ex-mechanic could not get a fair trial because of local hostility and the publicity given the case.

Superior Court Judge Charles F. Franich conceded there had been some unfortunate publicity prior to the grand jury's indictment of Frazier, 24, on charges of killing Dr. Victor Ohta, his wife, two sons, and secretary.

But Franich said he felt there was no place in California that would be any different from Santa Cruz because "in these troubled times, there is fear and emotion everywhere."

Philosophy Of Jeff Peters, And California Tax Costs

We are unfamiliar with the reading habits of Richard Milhous Nixon. None of the material about him seems to mention them. So we don't know whether he reads O. Henry.

His predecessor as President, Lyndon Baines Johnson, reportedly is an omnivorous reader. But again, we are unable to learn whether Johnson reads O. Jenry. It would seem rather likely, since William Sidney Porter — who wrote as O. Henry — spent some time in Johnson's home state of Texas and many of his short stories had Texas locales.

IF EITHER NIXON or Johnson has read O. Henry, however, he may have passed up "The Atavism of John Tom Little Bear," one of that author's Jeff Peters stories.

For those others not familiar with O. Henry, we should mention that Jeff Peters was a con man — but an amusing, even delightful one— who appeared as a principal character in quite a few O. Henry stories. He also was a philosopher.

A sample of his philosophy was used to introduce "The Atavism of John Tom Little Bear." The subject which led indirectly into the tale of Little Bear was some then-current disturbance in the Philippines. To quote the story:

"'All them tropical races,' said Jeff, 'could be run out better with their own jockeys up. The tropical man knows what he wants. All he wants is a season ticket to the cock fights and a pair of Western Union climbers to go up the bread-fruit trees. The Anglo-Saxon wants him to learn to conjugate and wear suspenders. He'll be happiest in his own way.'"

THE ASPIRATIONS of the tropical man have heightened somewhat since O. Henry wrote that story at the turn of the century. The tropical man in what was once French Indochina no doubt wants more than a cock-fight ticket and a pair of climbers. But what should be evident to President Nixon, and should have been evident to President Johnson, is that the Indochinese — be he Vietnamese, Cambodian or Laotian — does not want to be turned into a miniature imitation of American or European. He'd like to run his own affairs, in his own way.

As Jeff Peters philosophized, "All them tropical races could be run out better with their own jockeys up."

And when you get right down to the nub of the matter, the reason the United States has an army fighting in Indochina, with a weekly death toll and a host of attendant problems that wrack the United States itself, is simply because we wouldn't let them run the race that way.

We might all be a whole lot better off if Lyndon Johnson and Richard Nixon had been avid readers of the light fiction of O. Henry. They might have given thought to Jeff Peters' homely horse-sense.

AS WE HAVE remarked from time to time before, living in California costs a little extra.

We think it's worth it. The climate is grand, the scenery is wonderful.

But if California's government is superior, we have failed to notice it. However, it costs more too.

Latest testimony to this is in a table compiled by the U. S. Chamber of Commerce from Department of Commerce statistics. It shows taxes per capita and for each $1,000 of income in each state for the fiscal years 1968 and 1969 (the Department of Commerce is always a year or two behind getting these figures tabulated).

CALIFORNIA WAS second to New York in per capita taxes both years.

In 1968, New York's per capita taxes came to $503.49, and California's to $488.46. Only five states had per capita taxes over $400 that year, and the national average was $338.09.

In 1969, New York's per capita taxes went up to $575.51, and California's to $539.99. In 13 states, the per capita take exceeded $400 that year, and the national average climbed to $379.94.

In taxes per $1,000 of personal income, California was third highest both years. In 1968, Hawaii took $135.36 per capita; Wyoming, $135, and California $133.73. The national average was $108.10.

Wyoming put on the brakes the next year. Hawaii stayed in the top spot at $140.96 per $1.000 of income, followed by New York at $140.49 and California at $137.09. The national average was $112.10.

WE NOTICED that another state with a salubrious climate (though without the wide variation of scenery found in California) was well below the national average. Floridans paid $329.86 per capita, $106.79 per $1,000 of personal income, in fiscal 1969.

So it would appear it needn't cost more in taxes just because California is a nice place to live.

WHAT OUR READERS SAY

Poll Informative About Students

I have a feeling that the results of the most admired-least admired poll at Redwood H.S. told us a great deal more about the students than it did about their selections. I feel it also reflects upon the caliber of teaching there as well.

When a comedian and a draft evader rank near the top and the President and Vice President at the bottom, there is something drastically wrong with the students sense of values, their reasoning powers and their educations.

If further clues are needed, look at their views on religion and morality. If these kids are our best hope for the future, America's chances for survival are slim.

Bagley Proposal Not Tax Increase

I noticed the letter of Mr. A. Segale commenting on my AB 268 in the Feb. 2 Independent-Journal. I want to thank him for his "bouquet" to me for supporting public transportation.

But I was concerned with his "brickbat" for the "increase in gas taxes". Although some legislators feel that punitive taxes on gasoline would not be such a bad thing, AB 268 does not become involved in this issue. The proposal simply attempts to "unfreeze" $90 million for public transportation for the State Highway Fund, at local option.

The measure imposes a 4 per cent ($.04) per $1 sales tax on gasoline, but reduces the existing $.07 per gallon excise tax to $.06. According to the State Board of Equalization, a 4 per cent sales tax on the average price of gasoline amounts to $90 million. The $.01 per gallon reduction in the excise tax amounts to $90 million. Thus, the total effect of the sales tax increase is to equal the excise tax reduction. This was the genesis of the "no tax increase" statement.

The sales tax is calculated on the base price, before existing federal and state excise taxes. . .

The importance, of course, of this proposal is that we could thus "free" $90 million per year for local option use in the development of balanced transportation systems. This would give our counties and cities real transportation alternatives and would to the extent used also relieve the property taxpayer of the cost of these local systems.

I hope this information takes some of the "brick" out of his "brickbat".

Costly To Guard Marin Civic Center

I wish that we could tax the dreamers who were so determined to have this Frank Lloyd Wright Civic Center (regardless of the majority opposition) for all of the extra expense of maintenance and security.

Guarding this kind of place is almost an impossible task.

Squeeze Is On Gunnar Jarring As Cease-Fire Deadline Nears

UNITED NATIONS — The precious days are running out, with little more than two weeks before another deadline at the brink of renewed conflict in the Middle East. The man in the middle of the seesaw, Ambassador Gunnar Jarring, is more aware of the turn of the screw than perhaps even the principals in this ancient quarrel.

It is on Jarring that blame will be heaped if the fighting is resumed on the Suez Canal at the expiration of the one-month extension of the cease-fire. At the start of his fourth year as negotiator-mediator-pacifier — however his difficult role may be defined — Jarring is standing firm against the pressures playing from every side.

NOT SO LONG ago, American policy makers on the Middle East were concerned because Jarring, as they saw it, was too cautious. They were anxious for him to become more the mediator and even the initiator rather than to serve merely as a postoffice for exchange of positions between the Arabs and the Israelis.

Now that he seems to have enlarged the scope of his assignment, they are encouraged. Jarring has not, in fact, overstepped the bounds of his narrowly defined position. But if there is no movement prior to March 7, the risk of a renewed war cannot simply be brushed aside with the conviction that neither Egypt nor Israel wants to start up the shooting again, although from all reports this is true.

To break the stalemate while there is still time, Israel must make a declaration on the occupied territories. Egypt must come closer to declaring the status to be accorded Israel in a peace settlement. What Jarring seems to be saying — he has scrupulously refrained from any public statement —is that the door is open and one or the other must go first. Since the occupied territories are the end-all and be-all for Egypt, it would seem that Israel, by taking a position on the territories, however limited it might be in the first instance, could bring action.

FROM JERUSALEM have come complaints that Jarring in recent days did overstep the bounds of his mission. He is accused by Deputy Premier Ugal Allon of seeking to be a mediator whereas his job is simply that of passing messages back and forth. The complaints may be merely for the record, showing the flag over the lands held since the end of the six-day war in 1967.

But Americans at the U.N. deeply involved in the middle east tangle fear it may be more than that — heels dug in against relinquishing any of the conquered lands. It reflects almost certainly the divisions within the government of Prime Minister Golda Meir.

Consistently since the end of the war a voice of sanity has been heard. Former Prime Minister David Ben Gurion has said repeatedly that Israel must prepare to return the conquered lands — or all except portions such as the Golan Heights, clearly identified as essential to Israeli security — if there is ever to be peace in the Middle East.

But Americans at the U.N. deeply involved in the Middle East tangle fear it may be more than that — heels dug in against relinquishing any of the conquered lands. It reflects almost certainly the divisions within the government of Prime Minister Golda Meir.

THE DEADLINE may be, as most Israelis contend, of no significance. Since neither side will start the shooting, quiet will prevail, as it has for the past seven months, into the indefinite future.

Something like this conviction is shared by Asst. Secy. of State Joseph Sisco, who has played so skillful and effective a part in implementing the Rogers peace initiative. It may turn out that way — long months of no war, no peace. But there are profoundly irrational forces, pent-up frustrations, which could shatter this prospect overnight.

WINDOW ON THE WORLD

Long-Divided Pakistan Moves Nearer Collapse

By PHIL NEWSOM
UPI Foreign News Analyst

Tragedy heaped upon tragedy is bringing closer the possible break up of Pakistan.

It is a country that never should have come into being in the first place. One thousand miles of an unfriendly India separate East and West Pakistan, which have no natural bond except their Moslem religion. That is the first tragedy.

A second is an unbridled population growth which makes East Pakistan the most thickly populated place of its size on earth. It has been said that if the United States had a population of equal density, it would have 4.5 billion people.

A third was last fall's cyclone and tidal wave which officially took more than 150,000 lives and may have taken twice that, and led East Pakistanis to charge the central government with "gross neglect, callous inattention and utter indifference."

National elections last December named a new national assembly which is to meet early next month with the drafting of a new constitution its most urgent task. When that task has been completed and the new constitution "authenticated" by President Agha Mohammed Yahya Khan, the country is to return to civilian rule.

But whether such a return is possible or even whether Pakistan can continue to exist in its present form depends upon the outcome of a struggle between two men, Sheik Mujibur Rahman whose Awami League won a landslide victory in East Pakistan and more than half the seats in the 313-man national assembly, and Zulfikar Ali Bhutto, whose leftwing Pakistan People's party won 86 seats in West Pakistan.

Bhutto is a former foreign minister who favors a strong central government. Sheik Mujibur seeks full, regional autonomy for East Pakistan. Both men served time in jail for their opposition to the former strongman government of President Mohammad Ayub Khan.

THE TWO MEN appear at hopeless odds.

Sheik Mujibur has declared the Awami League will accept nothing less than his six-point program —even at the point of guns.

Bhutto said that without assurances of room for compromise his party will boycott national assembly sessions.

Sheik Mujibur's six-point program would strip the central government of authority over East Pakistan except for defense and foreign affairs.

East Pakistan would collect its own taxes and would set up currency controls to prevent a flight of capital from east to west. East Pakistan would retain all its own foreign earnings and would have its own militia.

ART BUCHWALD

Every Life Has Its Secrets — Only The Computer Knows

WASHINGTON — Somewhere in this great land of ours there is a computer stashed full of information on you. Whenever you want a bank loan, a credit card or a job, this computer will, in a matters of seconds, give some total stranger almost every detail of your life.

Unfortunately for most of us, the computer is unable to discriminate between fact and malicious gossip, and once the information is fed into it, it stays there forever.

The other day I was considering going into a car pool with three other men, Hicks, Kroll and Anderson. I have known these men casually for years, but when you join a car pool, you really want to know what they're like.

SO I ASKED a friend of mine in the retail credit business if I could use his computer for a few hours.

He agreed and I went down there and typed out: WHAT DO YOU KNOW ABOUT HICKS, AL, WHO LIVES AT 43 LOVER'S LEAP TERRACE?

The computer started chattering: HICKS, AL, BORN OCT. 23, 1925, BOTTLE-FED, BED-WETTED UNTIL 7 YEARS OLD.

I typed back: FORGET ABOUT CHILDHOOD AND GIVE ME SOME OTHER FACTS.

The computer replied: HICKS HAS A DOMINEERING WIFE WHOM THE WHOLE WORLD THINKS IS AS SWEET AS MAPLE SYRUP. WHENEVER SHE GETS MAD AT HIM, HE STARTS BITING HIS NAILS.

I typed back: I'M NOT INTERESTED IN THAT. WHAT'S THE CONDITION OF HIS CAR?

THE COMPUTER paused for a few second and then tapped out: HICKS OWNS 1957 BUICK CONVERTIBLE FOR WHICH HE IS STILL PAYING $80 A MONTH. IT HAS BEEN IN THE GARAGE 33 TIMES AND HAS COST HIM $1,500 IN REPAIRS. TWO OF THE SPRINGS IN THE BACK SEAT ARE BROKEN AND HE NEEDS NEW SNOW TIRES. HE HAS THE CAR WASHED ONCE A MONTH.

It added: HICKS NEVER CHEATS ON HIS WIFE, THOUGH HE THINKS ABOUT IT A LOT.

THAT'S ENOUGH! I told the computer. NOW GIVE ME A RUNDOWN ON KROLL, H.G., WHO LIVES AT 1 LION'S DEN CIRCLE.

The tapes in the computer started turning furiously and finally stopped. The teletype began to chatter: KROLL, H.G., HAD STRONG MOTHER WHO DRESSED HIM IN SILK SAILOR SUITS UNTIL HE WAS 13 YEARS OLD.

GET ON WITH IT, I typed impatiently.

HE OWNS 1970 MERCURY FOUR-DOOR SEDAN WHICH HAS SPECIAL SILK SEAT COVERS. LIKES TO DRESS UP IN HIS WIFE'S CLOTHES WHEN CHILDREN ARE AT CAMP.

THAT'S ENOUGH! I typed angrily. WHAT ABOUT ANDERSON, E.L., 198 DOVER CLIFFS?

ANDERSON IS HAVING A BIG THING WITH A LADY COSMETICS BUYER FROM LORD & TAYLOR.

WHAT ABOUT HIS CAR? I demanded.

THEY DON'T USE HIS CAR. THEY USE HERS.

I DIDN'T MEAN THAT. IS HIS AUTOMOBILE SAFE FOR OUR CAR POOL?

IT IS NOW, BUT IF MRS. ANDERSON EVER FINDS OUT ABOUT THE LADY BUYER . . .

THANK YOU VERY MUCH, I typed. YOU'VE BEEN MOST HELPFUL.

DON'T MENTION IT. OH, BY THE WAY, WHEN ARE YOU GOING TO STOP BEATING YOUR WIFE?

Camelot Reappraised, 10 Years After

(Reprinted from Wall Street Journal)

Ten years after the dawn of Camelot, a number of liberal commentators have been looking back on the Kennedy administration and discovering they do not like what they see. Gerald Clarke in the New Republic and Anthony Lewis in the New York Times both recall President Kennedy's "jingoistic" inaugural address, and see him making the initial mistakes that led to Vietnam and subsequent agonies.

Yet both Mr. Clarke and Mr. Lewis cling to the belief that had President Kennedy lived he would have found some way or other to lead us out of that agony. For was he not so amply endowed with vigor, grace, eloquence, idealism, flexibility, and brilliance — all of the virtues which our best people cherish?

The real question, though, is whether our best people have been taught to cherish the wrong virtues. The most fateful mistakes of the Kennedy years were made not despite that administration's virtues but because of them. They were the mistakes of too much vigor and too little restraint, too much grace and too little earthiness, too much eloquence and too little thoughtfulness, too much idealism and too little realism, too much flexibility and too little patience, too much brilliance and too little common sense.

The virtues of the Kennedy administration were the virtues of the intellectual as opposed to those of the common man, the virtues of a high civilization rather than a democratic one. Now, we happen to much admire intellectual virtues, and to sympathize with the thirst for a higher level of taste and culture. But we fear that the nation's "best people," having achieved a level of education and intellectualization that is high but not profound, have come to overlook the value of more pedestrian virtues and to ignore the dangers of the higher ones.

Precisely because we have no other choice, we must understand that rationality can mislead, that elegant logic can be fragile, that brilliance of mind is no real substitute for wisdom of experience. If we can learn that much from what we have gone through, then the torments of the '60s will not have been entirely in vain.

Government Mounts Alcoholism Program

WASHINGTON (UPI) —At long last, the U. S. government is mounting a serious attack on a disease that costs more lives each year than the Vietnam war: alcoholism.

Alcoholism afflicts an estimated 9 million Americans and causes 30,000 deaths annually. It is responsible for 37 per cent of all fatal highway accidents, a statistic that resulted in government-sponsored conferences this week on that part of the problem alone.

The cost to industry is about $4 billion a year in lost man-hours of producton.

Officials rate it the nation's No. 3 health problem, surpassed only by cancer and heart disease.

Through the National Institutes of Health, the federal government has been spending more than $1 billion a year to combat cancer, heart disease and dozens of other ailments.

Until now, however, only a relatively small sum — about $10 million a year — was available for federal support of the fight against alcoholism.

On the last day of 1970, President Nixon signed a bill that had been nursed through Congress by Sen. Harold E. Hughes, D-Iowa, a recovered alcoholic.

The Hughes Act establishes a new National Institute of Alcohol Abuse and Alcoholism, which will operate out of Bethesda, Md., under the aegis of the National Institute of Mental Health.

It authorizes the expenditure of $300 million during the next three years in federal grants to states and private institutions for treatment and rehabilitation of alcoholics, and research into the disease.

At the moment, the program exists only on paper, because Congress adjourned without acting on an appropriation for the institute. It is anticipated, however, that funds will be provided in the first supplemental appropriation bill that clears the new Congress. Thus the institute should be in business by spring.

The passage of the Hughes Act is a signal victory for groups such as the Natonal Council on Alcoholism which have been campaigning for many years for government recognition of alcoholism as a treatable disease.

Thirty years ago, there were virtually no public facilities for treatment of alcoholics. In 1943, Connecticut became the first state to provide for medical care of alcoholics. Today, 46 states and the District of Columbia have alcoholism programs. Most of them, however, are sharply circumscribed by lack of money. That's where the new federal aid program can make a difference.

It could have made even more difference had not the House made a small but significant change in the language of Hughes' bill. As passed by the Senate, it would have cut off all types of federal aid to any general hospital which refused to accept alcoholics as patients. This would have provided a mighty incentive to those hospitals — nearly two-thirds of the total-which have resisted the pleas of the American Medical Association to treat alcoholics on the same basis as other sick persons.

But the House changed a few words, so that noncooperating hospitals will be deprived only of aid under the Hughes Act itself, while continuing to receive aid under other federal programs. Since a hospital that refuses to accept alcoholics obvicusly would not be seeking Hughes Act aid in any case, the effect of this "minor amendment" was to emasculate the whole provision.

Hughes has indicated he will ask the new Congress to restore the original thrust of the cutoff clause so that alcoholics can be treated in all general hospitals. This is regarded by many medical authorities as the greatest single step that could be taken to improve the present spotty situation with regard to treatment facilities.

Although disappointed about that change, Hughes feels that what emerged from Congress is "a good bill ... not a panacea but a start toward facing realistically the dimensions of the alcoholism epidemic in this country."

New Breed Emerges Among Architects

CLEVELAND (UPI)—A college gymnasium made from a geodesic dome and a government office building with an enclosed garden instead of corridors are nearing completion in this city's downtown.

Both were designed by Thomas Zung, 36, who claims to be one of a new generation of "anonymous architects."

Zung, a native of Shanghai, grew up in New York City and trained in his profession in the studios of famed architect Edward Durrell Stone. He came to Cleveland to set up his own office after he studied the recent history of construction in about 50 cities and decided "Cleveland was so far down, it had no way to go but up."

"And evidence of that is the fact that my new Public Utilities Building is the first building the city has put up in the downtown area in 47 years," Zung said in an interview.

"It's really two buildings joined by an atrium, or a completely enclosed garden," Zung said. He said the garden would have a reflecting pool in the center under the skylight.

"The building is designed without corridors. The walls and the partitions separating working areas in the large rooms will all be of glass," Zung said.

"Sometimes to go from one office to another, the city employes will walk through a garden. And when the people come in to enjoy the garden, they can see their mayor conferring with their utilities director."

The gymnasium, part of a growing downtown campus for five-year-old Cleveland State University, is a variation on the pure geodesic dome invented by architectural pioneer Buckminster Fuller, and used in the design of the American Pavillion at Expo '67 in Montreal.

The pure geodesic dome uses hundreds of interlocking and completely interchangeable rods or tubes.

"It's a functional idea —a skin over a simple framework," Zung said. "But with a pure geodesic dome, we'd have a gym 50 feet high -and no one's going to throw a basketball that high. It's just a lot of extra air to heat or cool."

Zung's dome is made of aluminum tubes, but they are not interchangeable. The Ford Foundation has financed the research into the conversion of the dome, in hopes the form might prove economical and suitable for other colleges and universities.

The architect maintains he has no desire to be "the master builder —building monuments to himself."

"We're leaving behind the idea that you put up a building on one corner that says 'Look at me, I'm pretty!' and then go to the opposite corner and put up another building that says: 'Hey, look at me, I'm prettier!'

"That sort of thing led to a chaotic environment and an anxious architecture," Zung said.

"We're thinking now of how the building fits into the pre-existing surroundings — so much so that the city has become the building and the building is the detail."

"The anonymous architects are replacing the anxious architects."

Zung himself feels his work has fulfilled his hope for it.

"I became an architect because I wanted to perform a service related to the arts and because I felt, of all the major professions, architecture uniquely offers hope. You go to a doctor out of fear —fear of death or disease. You go to a lawyer in fear of financial loss, of death or of a suit.

"But you go to an architect out of hope —the hope you'll make money from the building he designs for you, or the hope you'll be able to build your dream house, or the hope you'll be able to enclose space, in such a way that it will uplift you."

Deputy DA Quits To Join Firm

Gary T. Ragghianti, 26, a deputy district attorney in Marin, has resigned to enter private practice.

The resignation is effective next Friday.

Ragghianti, of 201 D Street, San Rafael, will join the San Rafael law firm of Conn, Bryner and Birkie.

He joined the district attorney's staff in February 1969, replacing Robert A. Birkie, whom he now joins in private practice.

No successor to Ragghianti has been named.

Transit Issue To Get Board's Ear

A resolution urging the Golden Gate Bridge District not to use the Northwestern Pacific Railroad right-of-way through Mill Valley for a rapid transit corridor will be considered Monday when the Mill Valley School District board meets at 8 p.m. at Park School.

The board ordered the resolution prepared at a special meeting Thursday. A similar resolution will be considered by the Mill Valley City Council March 1.

Also on the school board agenda is a progress report on sale of the 1.68-acre Harvard Avenue property.

Satellites Held Pollution Weapon

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)— Spy-in-the-sky satellites can be used in the battle against air pollution, according to Air Force Secretary Robert Seamen Jr.

He told the Commonwealth Club of California Friday that military and space technology is an important national asset which can be used to provide important solutions to domestic problems.

He said that by 1973, a sophisticated satellite could be used to measure air pollution all over the world and pinpoint its causes.

Health Warning

LONDON (UPI) —A proposed bill which would compel British tobacco manufacturers to print health warnings on cigarette packs received an unopposed second reading Friday in the House of Commons.

This Week In The World

By United Press International

There are no limits on use of American air power in Indochina except for the use of nuclear weapons, President Nixon told a news conference this week.

He said the United States would not use ground forces in either Laos, Cambodia or North Vietnam, but American planes can go anywhere. He would not rule out use of South Vietnamese troops in North Vietnam and was not hopeful of much progress in the Paris talks.

The President sent Congress a health plan to provide medical insurance for virtually every American. Much of the cost for employed persons would be paid by their employers.

Britain changed its currency to the decimal system.

Poland announced that food prices raised last year would be lowered March 1. This was the issue that had set up rioting by Polish workers and brought a change in the government leadership.

Egypt was reported agreeable to a peace pact with Israel with one condition - that Israel withdraw from all the Arab territories occupied in the 1967 war.

Oil companies in the West agreed to increase payments to nations along the Persian Gulf to guarantee continued petroleum supplies. Price rises are expected in Europe and Asia, but not immediately in the United States.

The AFL-CIO Executive Council met in Bal Harbour, Fla., and union officials said they expected Nixon to impose a temporary freeze on wages and prices in the construction industry. The White House confirmed that the President was considering the move.

A federal grand jury in Los Angeles indicted William O. Woodridge, formerly sergeant major of the Army, and seven other persons on charges of plotting to defraud servicemen's clubs in Vietnam.

Col. Gerald V. Kehrli was convicted by a court-martial in Saigon and sentenced to three years in prison for using marijuana.

The trial of 1st Lt. William L. Calley Jr., charged in the massacre at My Lai, South Vietnam, resumed at Fort Benning, Ga., after an Army sanity board found him sane.

Defense Secretary Melvin R. Laird announced formation of a board dominated by civilians to control military intelligence within the United States. The armed forces were accused of invading the privacy of antiwar protesters and even political candidates in keeping track of their activities.

'IT'S THE REALITY'

Sufi Religion Attracting Youth

By FRANK FARRARA

There is something in the ancient Sufi religion founded in the Middle East that is attracting young followers in the Bay Area.

Young people seem to be seeking something they haven't been offered "in the traditional framework of religion," observed Moin-Ud-Din Jablonski, new local leader of the group.

On why Sufism attracts youths, Jablonski asserted: "It's the reality that's doing the attracting, nothing else. People will look for other explanations and succeed only in becoming further confused. It is the reality calling forth what is real in each person. The fact that mainly young people are responding simply indicates the dawning of a new age. The biblical, 'Many are called but few are chosen," may well have to be changed to 'Many are called and many are being chosen.' "

Lewis used to say "The young people want to get out of 'realism' and into reality," Jablonski recalled.

Sufism offers a chance for inner development "which most churches nowadays don't provide for," he commented recently in Novato at the Garden of Inayat, named for the founder of Sufism in the West, Hazrat Inayat Khan.

On inner development, Jablonski commented "the unfoldment of the disciple's inner being toward love, harmony and beauty is of chief importance."

These qualities are awakened through devotional practices given each pupil as well as activities "such as joyous dancing and singing which involve group participation."

With the movement expanding, Jablonski foresees the day when headquarters, now housed in an old, two-story frame structure at 910 Railroad Avenue, will be too small.

Although established in the United States in 1910, the recent impetus came about three years ago when the late master teacher Samuel Lewis, known among his followers as Murshid, sat on the edge of his bed in a small San Francisco apartment and talked with six or seven people around him, Jablonski recalled.

Since then 120 disciples have been initiated, about 100 persons attend public meetings in San Francisco, and "up to 200" have attended meetings in Sausalito, he reported.

There are many Sufi brotherhoods in the world and "upwards of 40 to 50 million followers," but the religion has made little impact in the United States until recently, Jablonski said.

"The Western cultures and the United States particularly have avoided recognizing the contributions of the Islamic world to world culture," he contended.

Jablonski, a 29-year-old native of Iowa who discovered Sufism after a Catholic up bringing and a period of being an agnostic believes Sufism has "something to offer, something that's real."

Some religions "claim inner practice, but do not instruct in it," Jablonski said. Sufism "lays stress on real experience and unfolds the inner capabilities and faculties."

He continued: "We ask where we came from, where we believe we will go or are. We believe it's here right now, as well as hereafter."

Sufism, out of the cultural background of Islam, is "not an orthodoxy," he emphasized.

Orthodox religions have their "heaven realms," Jablonski said. Sufis in repetitive dancing and chanting, an integral part of their religion, bring about "here and now the realization and joy spoken of as primarily existing in heaven," he explained.

At their gatherings Sufis open with prayers which recognize "all world scriptures," Jablonski commented. "While the Sufi traditions are largely oral," members become acquainted with the sacred literatures "of all other points of view."

In strict orthodoxy, religions adhere to one point of view, "don't appreciate other views and consider themselves alone as right," Jablonski asserted.

The young leader said he will continue the work "outlined and inspired" by the late Samuel Lewis, a pioneer of Sufism in America for 50 years, who died after a fall at his San Francisco home last month.

Lewis, who lived in San Francisco and Novato, was the force that spurred interest in the religion, resulting in centers in Cambridge, Mass., Tucson, Ariz., and Lama Mountain near Taos, N.M., where he is buried.

Sufism, a religion for individual and group development, "can bring a real balance in people's lives," Jablonski said.

"Sufism does not seek to be separate from any religious tradition," Jablonski said. The founders of the world's religions, Buddha, Moses, Jesus, Mohammed and others all taught and practiced the "oneness of God through and with his worlds of creation."

Lewis, who obviously "inherited the depth and spirit of such a message," didn't advocate separatism, Jablonski said.

Asked if there were an equivalent of Mecca in the Sufi religion, he replied: "God is in the heart of man. That's our Mecca."

Jablonski and his wife, Fatima, who teaches dervish dancing, live quietly at the Garden of Inayat, where a "silence house" is observed each day from 3:30 to 4:30 p.m.

"This house is only so big. We're keeping our eyes open for a larger one here or in Sonoma County," Jablonski said.

A stained glass window made by Jablonski signifies that it is a spiritual center, but a pottery kiln in the yard and a small print shop at the rear lend a worldly touch.

PHYSICIST-PRIEST'S VIEWS

Compatibility In Science

By LOUIS CASSELS
UPI Religion Writer

For a long time, some people have expected and others have feared that modern science eventually would discredit the basic postulates of religion.

But just the opposite is actually happening.. Instead of undermining belief in God, science is finding more and more evidence of "the existence of a reality beyond the natural order."

So says Dr. William G. Pollard, a remarkable man who has demonstrated in his own life the compatibility of science and religion. Pollard is a nuclear physicist, a pioneer in atomic research, and director of the Associated Universities of Oak Ridge, Tenn. His conviction that science cannot answer man's deepest questions led him some years ago into an exploratory relationship with the Episcopal Church. This slowly ripened to the point where he asked for and received ordination. So today he is both a physicist and a priest.

Pollard has never found it necessary to compartmentalize his mind in order to combine these two roles. On the contrary, he says, the knowledge gained from daily involvement in scientific research has deepened his religious convictions, while the insights of religion have made him better able to comprehend the workings of the natural universe.

He discusses all of this very engagingly in a new paperback book entitled "Science and Faith —Twin Mysteries" (Nelson). Although it is part of a series intended primarily for young people, this is a very adult book, and I suspect that even Ph.D.'s and theologians could learn quite a lot from it.

"The religious crisis of our age is the result of the widespread belief that science has been in the process of dispelling mystery and denying the existence of any reality except that of the natural universe of space and time and matter," Pollard writes.

But this is a layman's view, not shared by those who know "the true flavor of modern science" and "the way in which our growing knowledge of matter keeps beckoning us toward transcendent realities beyond space and time."

Instead of explaining everything as people once expected it to do, Pollard says, the science of the nuclear-space age "confronts us with mystery on many fronts."

"When we speak of 'mystery' in science, we no longer mean unknown areas or puzzles which future research may be expected to clear up. Rather we are speaking of the mysteriously amazing character of the known."

For example, he says, mathematicians and astronomers in working out the implications of Albert Einstein's theory of relativity find themselves strongly impelled toward the concept that the observable universe of space and time must be immersed in some vastly greater, totally mysterious matrix or medium which may be called, for want of a better term, "superspace."

In the known universe we recognize four dimensions — height, depth, width and time. But "superspace" conceivably could have as many as 10 dimensions, he says. And if that should be the case, "then the amount of external reality which is transcendent to us, invisible and unseen but everywhere touching us, is far vaster in extent than the world of space-time which is visible and comprehensible to us."

Pollard cites many other "mysteries" which modern science has revealed rather than dispelled —including the "striking evidences of creativity" —of a plan and purpose behind it all —which biologists have found in studying the evolutionary process.

He concludes with this comment:

"The last quarter of the Twentieth Century is going to be a greater time of crisis than the human species has ever before experienced in its history on this planet. Man's faith in what he can do on his own, and his childlike faith in the capacity of science and technology to solve every problem, is going to fade before the terrible problems of such an age.

"Man will more and more feel himself lost and helpless as he crowds together on a planet too small to hold and feed his numbers, where the byproducts of his science and technology increasingly pollute and ruin his environment. In such a time many will despair and lose hope. Only those who can find some real transcendent reference, beyond space and time, will be able to live creatively and courageously."

Therefore, he says, the "most important discovery that anyone can make today "is the discovery of the reality of God."

Lutherans Told: Help The Poor

DETROIT (LC) — Unless the "tremendous power" of the churches is mobilized effectively to help poor, dispossessed and weak people in America the prospect for the next decade is chaos, a Lutheran attorney has told a top level meeting of church officials.

Speaking to a meeting last week of nearly 100 national and area officials of three major Lutheran church bodies, Dr. William S. Ellis of New York, said churchmen at every level need to be aroused to action on behalf of the oppressed in society.

A layman of the Lutheran Church in America and a member of its executive council, Dr. Ellis is president of the Lutheran Human Relations Association of America.

Dr. Ellis emphasized that the economic and human resources of America's churches "which are enormous" must be used in the service of "those who have no power and therefore know no justice."

The rage of black Americans against oppression in the past decade, Dr. Ellis said, appears to be waning because some slight recognition has been given to their rightful dignity and identity. "But it must go much further," he added.

It was a stroke of genius to turn around the derogatory meaning of the term "black" and make it an honorable designation, Dr. Ellis declared.

ANCIENT RITUAL

Millions Of Hindus Bathe Away Sins

ALLAHABAD, India (UPI) — Every 12 and six years, on auspicious days chosen by astrologers, millions of Hindus meet at the confluence of three sacred rivers to bathe away their sins.

The ancient ritual of shedding sins by taking a holy dip at the confluence of the rivers Ganges, Yamuna and Saraswati is held in Allahabad Holy City of Sinners and is known to the 400 million Hindus as kumbh (every 12 years) and ardh-kumbh every six years.

The origin of the kumbh and arch-kumbh festivals, according to legend, has it that millions of years ago, Hindu gods and demons joined hands in churning the mighty ocean to obtain nectar. Lord Indra's son, fearing that the nectar would bring immortality to demons, picked up the pitcher kumbh of nectar and escaped.

During his flight in space, a few drops of nectar fell down at Allahabad, Haridwar, Ujjain and Nasik. It took 12 years for Indar's son to get rid of the demons trailing him around, and he took his first holiday after six more years.

Most Hindu pundits insist that Allahabad received the largest share of nectar from the leaking pitcher and thus became the most important sin-washing point.

This year's ardh-kumbh ritual is considered significant since there are a number of sacred days during the period when a single dip in the sacred river can wash away 1,001 sins.

The holiest day of the festival, mauni amawasya, coincided with India's Republic Day Jan. 26 this year, when more than two million pilgrims braved biting cold and rains to converge at the tri-junction of the holy rivers for their ritual bathing.

Authorities in charge of the festival said more than five million people had already bathed at Allahabad well before the peak bathing day Jan. 26 arrived.

Ten thousand policemen and an equal number of social volunteers worked day and night clearing passages for the human waves which surged towards the confluence of the three rivers, shouting "Ganga Maya ki jai:" Victory to the Mother Ganges.

The wailings of the rustic pilgrims lost in the 2,500-acre festival area, the blowing of conch-shells and the reverberating chanting of Hindu hymns heralded the auspicious moment when the multitudes pushed forward into the freezing waters of the sangam confluence of the three rivers.

Lent Will Open With Agape Meal

Families at San Anselmo's First Presbyterian Church will begin their Lenten observance on Ash Wednesday with a 6:30 p.m. agape meal in the church's Duncan Hall.

The meal is a reenactment of an ancient Christian custom of bringing food to be shared with others, concluding with a simple service together.

A seminary for inquirers conducted by Rev. John O. Najarian will conclude tomorrow with the Session receiving new members into the church. Their public reception is at the Feb. 28 morning service, a 10 a.m. celebration.

Served dinners are planned for each of the Wednesdays in Lent at 6:45 p.m., followed by a 7:45 to 8:15 p.m. service in the church sanctuary. The services are built around contemplative works played by organist Wilbur Russell on the Leonard Buck Memorial Organ.

Lenten Services

Shepherd of the Hills Lutheran Church in Tiburon will hold Lenten services at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday — Ash Wednesday — at 7:30 p.m. and continue them each Wednesday through March 31.

$200,000 In Relief Grants Are Approved

NEW YORK (LC) — Lutheran World Relief has approved nearly $200,000 in grants for relief, rehabilitation, and development programs in various countries in Africa, South America, and Asia.

The largest single grant — $110,000 — was made to the Department of World Service of the Lutheran World Federation for both the medical and development programs it has undertaken in the Rivers State area of Nigeria.

Indian Youth Choir Will Give Program

The First Baptist Church of San Rafael, 1411 Lincoln Avenue, will host the youth choir of the American Indian Baptist Church of Oakland at 7 p.m. today.

Representatives of 15 Indian tribes will be represented on the program which is a prelude to a planned summer tour by church members of reservations in the West.

DeMaestri Wows Crowd In Novato Cage Triumph

Hornets Bop Marin Catholic

Novato High School guard Joe DeMaestri pulled the trigger and Marin Catholic's Wildcats bit the dust last night in a Marin County Athletic League basketball game in Kentfield.

Scoring 34 points as he hit on a phenomenal per centage of his shots from the floor and the free throw line, DeMaestri led the Hornets to a 58-49 victory that moved them in a tie for fourth place with the city of Novato's other team, the San Marin Mustangs. Both are 5-7 won-lost in league play.

The Wildcats took an early lead, but saw it disappear when DeMaestri began to find the range in the second quarter. So unstoppable did the 5-foot-11 star prove to be that two players, Mick Hurley and Bill Donellan, fouled out trying to guard him, and another, Jim Sullivan, picked up four fouls.

DeMaestri, whose specialty is the long bomb, hit on 70 per cent of his shots from the floor, and at one point in the late third and early fourth quarters connected on five straight field goals. He was at his best in the final period, when he got 14 of Novato's 19 points.

No less hot on the free throw line, DeMaestri connected on 10 of 11 shots to make the bruises he got while being fouled worth while.

The Wildcats, whose record now reads 3-9, devided up their scoring pretty evenly; Jim Sullivan had 15 points, Bill Donellan 13, and Tim Stone 11.

Bruins Blank Seals

OAKLAND (UPI) — The powerful Boston Bruins crushed the California Seals, 5-0, Friday night, but Seals' owner Charles O. Finley still had something to smile about.

The Bruins brought 12,089 fans —a sellout crowd —to the Oakland Coliseum, and if the Bruins' performance didn't mean points in the win column, for the Seals, at least it meant dollar signs on the cash register.

It was the second time this season that the Bruins attracted a sellout crowd at the Coliseum.

The Bruins' scoring machine simply outclassed the Seals. Phil Esposito, the league's leading scorer, got his 49th. Bobby Orr added a goal and three assists.

The loss pushed the Seals deeper into last place of the National Hockey League West Division.

The only bright spot for the Seals was the play of Chris Worthy, who was in only his third start of the season in the California goal. Three times Worthy turned back Bruin breakaways, twice stopping Esposito on what would have been his 50th goal.

The Seals host the Philadelphia Flyers tonight in an attempt to break a five game losing streak.

Juan Gets Another Fat Pact

BUCKHORN SPA, Ariz. (UPI) — The San Francisco Giants are paying a 12-game winner $125,000 or so to pitch in 1971.

That's because the 12-game winner was Juan Marichal, who was 12-10 with 14 complete games and a 4.11 earned run mark.

A violent reaction to a penicillin shot given him in treatment of virus kept him out of action for weeks. When he returned, it took him some time to gain back his strength and control.

Terms were not disclosed of the pact announced today, but owner Horace Stoneham said Juan did not take a cut from last year, when he received an estimated $125,000.

"Juan's 1970 performance did not meet previous records and standards, but his early season illness explains that," said Stoneham.

Marichal is well on the way to mound immortality if he can regain his 20-win form. His 203-98 career record is highest of any actice pitcher.

This winter, he has been undergoing physical therapy and says he is in top condition. His weight is 195, about 10 pounds more than he hopes to weigh when the season gets going.

New San Jose Coach

SAN JOSE (UPI)—Randy Cardin, 26, former San Jose State backfield star, became the Spartans' youngest coach Friday when he was named to Dewey King's football staff as a defensive assistant.

TUCSON GOLF

Two Longshots Out In Front

TUCSON, Ariz. (UPI)—A pair of longshots who used to perform with some skill in sports other than golf shared the lead today going into the second round of the rain-delayed 72-hold $110,000 Tucson Open.

J. C. (Jesse Carlyle) Snead, 29, a former baseball player, nephew of the celebrated Sam, and Dewitt Weaver, 31, an ex-footballer, each shot 33-33—66, six under par in Friday's opening round on the Tucson National Golf Club course.

Play started Thursday but was washed out by a rainstorm.

After today's second round the field will be cut to the low 70s and ties and 36 holes will be played Sunday by the survivors.

There was a 10 per cent possibility of showers today but the weather was not expected to be wet enough to cause a serious disruption.

Two strokes back of Snead and Weaver was big George Archer, the 1971 San Diego Open champion, with 34-34—68. At 69 were five pros—defending champion Lee Trevino and Don Bies with 34-35; Dale Douglass, 37-32; Joe Kirkwood Jr., 36-33; and Paul Harney 35-34.

Snead, who played baseball for three years in the Washington Senators farm system, had his best finish in the 1969 Michigan Classic where he was tied for second. This year he has won $5,791 in six tournaments to stand No. 47 on the PGA list.

Weaver, who was a quarterback on the Southern Methodist football team before he switched to golf permanently, is No. 10 this year in money with $14,879 but has never taken a major pro tournament.

Weaver, a stocky 185-pounder, would have had the lead all alone in the first round but he bogeyed the last hole. He hit his tee shot into a bunker and then two-putted from 18 feet for a five.

Up to that point he had all pars and seven birds. His longest birdie putt was a 35-footer on the 12th hole, a par four, 420 yards.

Snead had two eagles, something few golfers achieve in one round. He got a three on the second hole, a par-five 530-yarder, when he was on the green in two with a driver and a five-iron. The ball was only six feet from the pin and he sank the putt. He got another three on the 11th hole, a par five 585-yarder, when he hit a driver and a four-wood and sank a 30-foot putt.

Snead is 6 feet 2 and 205 pounds and hits a long ball the same as Weaver.

On the 18th hole which is guarded by lakes on both sides of the fairway, Snead hit a four-wood from the tee and then dumped a five-iron on the green and two-putted from about 30 feet for a par four.

"That hole scares me to death," he said.

Archer played consistent golf for his 68. He took a bogey five on No. 18 which was his ninth since he played the back nine first but had five birdies and all pars otherwise.

On the his 13th, a par three 165-yarder, he put his tee shot only six inches from the cup and sank it for a birdie two.

"It was almost a hole-in-one," he said. "The ball hit past the pin and then pulled back and missed the flag by about two inches. I hit the ball pretty close on all the holes but the greens were a little treacherous because of the rain and footprints."

Ex-Gi Star In Marin Track Win

College of Marin Tars, sparked by a super effort by ex-GI Ted Cain, defeated Hartnell College of Salinas, 69-66, yesterday in their opening track and field meet of the season at Kentfield on a cold and windy day.

Cain, of Novato, merely contributed 26 points to Marin's score. Besides anchoring the winning mile relay team that clinched the victory, Cain won the 120-yard high hurdles in 15.7 seconds, the 440-yard run in 52.4, the intermediate hurdles in 59.7, the triple jump at 40 feet, 1½ inches and he also placed third in the long jump.

Cain's mates on the mile relay were Tom Estudillo, Todd Norris and Bob Bode.

Other Marin winners were: Seamus O'Reilly, mile, 4:33.5; Doug Best, shot put, 42-10½; Norris, 880, 2:03.2; Don James, long jump, 20-3½; and Doug Shannon, pole vault, 10-6.

Redwood Gets By Drake

The Redwood High School Giants needed every ounce of their championship poise and every inch of their considerable height last night to defeat the Drake High Pirates, 58-48 at the losers' gym in San Anselmo, before almost 1,000 fans.

In winning their 39th straight Marin County Athletic League basketball game, and 12th this year, the league leading Giants of Larkspur appeared rather lethargic, while Drake was all fired up. Not until the final quarter did Dick Hark's boys from the Larkspur school enjoy a lead of more than seven points, and at no time were they up by more than 10.

It was the awesome height advantage of the defending MCAL champs that did the job for them, as they dominated both the offensive and defensive boards. Averaging more than two inches taller per man than the Pirates, the Giants, although they seldom penetrated inside Drake's zone defense, were able to get two, three and sometimes four shots at a crack simply by pulling down offensive rebounds.

And on defense, Redwood, again by virtue of height, kept the Pirates at a distance, forcing them to take almost all their shots from way outside.

Scott Trobbe and Steve McGee, Redwood's biggest men at 6-foot-6, collected 19 and 16 points apiece to lead all scorers. Drake's offense was well balanced, if not as spectacular. Mark Daubenfeld had 11 points, Jit Singh 10, and Bob Gregg and Jim Forni nine each.

Drake's record in league play is now 4-8 won-lost.

Tam Pours It On San Rafael

The Tamalpais High School Indians are like the army of the Roman Empire. They have plenty of power, and very litte mercy. Yesterday afternoon the Mill Valley team eagerly tore apart the San Rafael High Bulldogs, 74-47 in a Marin County Athletic League basketball game at College of Marin in Kentfield.

After mounting a 13 point lead in the first quarter, and maintaining it throughout the second quarter, the Indians should by rights have taken the pressure off the much maligned and last place Bulldogs. But, perhaps because coach Bernie Schneider feels his team must get as sharp as possible for next Tuesday night's big game at league leading Redwood, Tam was still pressing, full court style, while leading by 20 in the final period.

The victory, Tam's fifth in a row since losing to Redwood, brought the Indian's MCAL record to 10-2, and kept them two games behind undefeated Redwood in second place. For San Rafael, the loss was No. 9 against three wins.

Will Garner, the league's leading scorer, struck up his average with 21 points to pace the winners, who placed 11 men in the scoring column. Nine of Garner's points came at the end of the first period, when the Indians broke a 4-4 tie and sealed San Rafael's fate by rattling off 13 straight points.

Steve Miles, Tam's center, played his best game of the season, scoring 11 points and turning in an outstanding defensive effort. He was the only Indian besides Garner in double figures.

San Rafael was led by Bill Lechner and Mark Farrar with nine points each.

All-Stars

CINCINNATI (UPI) — The Perry brothers, Gaylord of the San Francisco Giants and Jim of the Minnesota Twins, are the only brothers ever to pitch against each other in the annual major league All-Star game.

Warriors' Problems Mount

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)— The San Francisco Warriors have enough problems to drive a coach into another line of work.

Coach Al Attles' team has lost its last three games, the third one Friday night to the San Diego Rockets, who, with Seattle, are breathing hot on the Warriors' neck for second place in the NBA Pacific Division.

Another problem —Jeff Mullins, San Francisco's high scoring guard, injured his ankle in the 109-103 loss to San Diego, and did not return after leaving early in the third period.

And to add insult to misery, the Milwaukee Bucks, the hottest team in the NBA, and Lew Alcindor come to the Cow Palace tonight. Alcindor scored 42 points and pulled down a career-high of 29 rebounds as the Bucks whipped Seattle 128-112 Friday night.

The Warriors couldn't handle the 5-10 Calvin Murphy of San Diego so the 7-2 Alcindor could spell disaster tonight.

Murphy pumped in 30 points, and with the help of Elvin Hayes' 28 tallies, led the Rockets to their fifth win in their last six games.

San Francisco managed to stay in the game with hot free throw shooting, hitting 24 in a row before missing in the third period.

Nate Thurmond, who hit 14 of 14 on the charity line, led the Warriors with 29 points, and Nick Jones added 21.

'Magician' Casteel Paces Terra Linda

Joe Casteel, Terra Linda High School's magician in a basketball uniform, accounted for 25 points last night and the Trojans solidified their hold on third place in the Marin County Athletic League with a 78-68 victory over San Marin High in Novato.

A victory by the Mustangs would have lifted them into a third place tie with Terra Linda, but they settled instead for their seventh loss in 12 games, despite a 27 point performance by 6-foot-8 center Dana LaFerriere. The Trojans are now even at 6-6.

Casteel had by far his best offensive game of the year, hitting on eight field goals and nine free throws; most of his shots from the floor were circus types from underneath the basket.

San Marin, like every other team in the league, had a terrible time with Terra Linda's determined man-for-man defense, and came up with only one star performance, by the inimitable LaFerriere. The second leading scorer in the league coming into the game, he connected on nine shots from the field and a like amount from the free throw line.

La Ferriere's teammates were not so productive on the charity strip. Of 41 attempts on free throws, they made only 20, and of those they missed, 17 were in one-and-one situations.

50-Point Spree For Cleveland

By United Press International

With only 12 victories for the Cleveland Cavaliers so far this season, every one becomes memorable for Walt Wesley. However, Wesley will probably remember Friday night's vistory a little longer than all the rest.

The Cavaliers' 125-109 victory over the Cincinnati Royals Friday night was the game of a lifetime for Wesley. He scored 50 points, more than he had ever scored before in his life, by hitting 20 of 33 shots from the field and adding 10 of 14 free throws.

"The best I ever scored before was 45 at Kansas when I was a junior," Wesley said. "I feel a little more determination when I play the Royals because I once played for them. I never thought about the points during the game, and it's a great feeling to score 50, but it's even greater to get the victory."

Going into the game, Wesley was hitting 45.5 per cent of his shots from the field, and in four previous losses to Cincinnati this year, he had 76 points, an average of 19 per game. Wesley got 16 points in the first half, pacing Cleveland to a 57-54 lead, and the 6-10 center reeled off 20 in the third quarter for a 93-82 advantage to snap a 12-game losing streak. It was Cleveland's highest point total of the season, and the third time the Cavaliers beat an established NBA team.

Other NBA games also provided individual heroics with Chet Walker scoring four points in the final 38 seconds of regulation time to tie the score and then added 11 more in overtime to give the Chicago Bulls a 115-114 victory over the Detroit Pistons and Earl Monroe got 15 of his 34 points in the fourth quarter to lift the Baltimore Bullets to a 120-113 victory over the Buffalo Braves.

In other games, Milwaukee beat Seattle 128-112, San Diego topped San Francisco 109-103, Phoenix beat Boston 116-112 and Philadelphia beat Los Angeles 118-104.

Chet Walker scored 44 points as he lifted Chicago to second place in the Midwest Division with a half-game, two percentage point lead over Detroit. The Bulls, spurred on by the largest home crowd in their history with 18,545, will meet the Pistons again on Sunday at Detroit.

The Pistons trailed by 11 points early in the first quarter but came back to go ahead 93-83 with 6:11 left in the game. But Chicago came back to tie the game on Walker's heroics.

Buffalo led 98-93 with six minutes left when Monroe dropped in seven straight points and Kevin Loughery added a layup to put the Bullets ahead 102-98. The Braves cut the Baltimore lead to 102-101 when Loughery was called for a personal foul and a technical, but he followed with a jumper from the key and Jack Marin sank an 18-footer to break open the game.

Lew Alcindor scored 42 and had a career high of 29 rebounds as Milwaukee beat Seattle.

Dick VanArsdale scored 26 as Phoenix topped Boston despite a 33-point showing by Jo Jo White of the Celts.

Jim Washington scored 28 points in Philadelphia's victory over Los Angeles.

OLYMPIC MEET

Liquori, Washington Steal The Limelight

NEW YORK (UPI)—For Marty Liquori the Madison Square Garden swan song was bittersweet, but for Herb Washington, the Olympic Invitation Track Meet Friday night was the start of something big.

"I really felt nostalgic," said Liquori after winning the 1500 meters in a new meet record time of 3:44.2 for his 13th straight New York victory. The Villanova senior who has elected to pass up the final Garden meet of the season, the AAU Championships next weekend, had little trouble defeating teammate Chris Mason and Mikhail Zhelobovsky of the Soviet Union.

"I'm satisfied with the win," Liquori said, "but I really felt like attaching a sign to my back saying goodbye or thank you to these poeple."

Washington, who ended Kentucky's Jim Green's Garden unbeaten streak, almost had to pay his own way to the meet.

"I've wanted to compete in these meets all year," the NCAA 60-yard dash champ said. "I'd have paid my own way to this one but now with (John) Carlos gone, I guess I've proved I'm the fastest around after tonight."

Washington and Green got involved in a lively debate after the 50-meter dash which the Michigan State upstart captured in 5.7 seconds. At the end, it was Washington who predicted the outdoor season would decide the supremacy of the 1971 sprints.

"I'll beat you outdoors," Washington said to Green. "And then we'll know who's the best in the world."

Overshadowed by Liquori's farewell and the Washington-Green sprint duel were a trio of record breaking performances in the 1,000-meter run, the 55-meter hurdles and the high jump.

Tom Von Ruden of the Pacific Coast Track Club bettered his own meet 1000 record with a 2:20.4 time in addition to re-establishing the world's best time for the event.

"John Davies of Great Britain broke my old world's mark a few months ago," Von Ruden said after beating Ireland's Frank Murphy. "So I thought it would be nice to get the world's record back to the United States."

Leon Coleman, who finished fourth in the 1968 Olympics at Mexico City, got a magnificent start in the 55-meter hurdles and then had to stave off a sizzling finish from Penn freshman Bruce Collins. Coleman set the meet mark and equaled the world's best with a time of 7.1 seconds.

Reynaldo Brown made a vain effort to topple the world high jump mark, failing three times at 7-4 1-2, but still managed to set a new meet record of 7-2 1-2 in defeating Wisconsin's Pat Matzdorf and Kestutis Sapka of the Soviet Union.

The pole vault, which had the makings of another world record with Sweden's Kjell Isaksson competing, saw a major upset when Renato Dionisi of Italy jumped a personal high of 17-4 1-2 to beat Ksaksson on the basis of fewer misses. Dionisi's leap easily bettered the meet record of 17 1-2 set in 1970 by Sam Caruthers.

The bright spot of the evening for the nine-strong Soviet delegation came in the 800-meters when Yevgeny Arzhanov defeated defending champion Byron Dyce, the Jamaican Olympian, and Brian McElroy of the New York A.C. with a time of 1:52.

In the longer sprints, Rutgers' Tom Ulan lunged at the finish to edge Tommie Turner of Murray State in the 400 meters and Ulan's former scarlet Knights teammate Pete Schuder snared the 500 meters in 1:04.

American Upsets Aussie Net Star

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (UPI) — Unseeded Valery Ziegenfuss of San Diego pulled the first big upset of the International Tennis Championships Thursday by beating fourth-ranked Australian Karen Krantzcke 6-4, 4-6, 6-2.

The victory puts Miss Ziegenfuss, seventh-ranked U.S. player, up against second-seeded Rosemary Casals Friday in the quarter-finals of the $10,000 ladies tour event.

Miss Casals, winner of the $3,000 first prize at Philadelphia last week, defeated Tory Fretz 6-4, 6-4 in a first round match.

In another match Thursday, Kerry Melville defeated Laurie Fleming 6-2, 6-4 and advanced into a quarter-final match with third-seeded Ann Jones.

Cardinals Are Going To School

By United Press International

The St. Louis Cardinals are going back to school to learn their ABC's, and it will be very rough on those who don't do their homework.

Last season the Cardinals lost several games because they missed cut-off throws, ran bases poorly and made other basic mistakes. So the Cardinals' management announced Friday that for the next 10 days the team will work on the fundamentals of the game.

It is assumed that major leaguers know their fundamentals very well but apparently the Cardinals do not. And the management made it clear that if any player felt ridiculous by working on fundamentals then it was just too bad for him.

"If any player feels embarrassed to go over the ABC's of the game, he's just going to have to be embarrassed," said Coach Vern Benson.

The Cardinals opened their spring training camp at St. Petersburg, Fla., Friday with 15 pitchers, six catchers and rookie infielder Tom Heintzelman working out under the watchful eyes of manager Red Schoendienst. Schoendienst got out of his hotel bed after a bout with the flu to take charge,

Among the missing at the opening day workouts was star pitcher Bob Gibson. Gibson has been given permission to finish some personal business before beginning workouts Monday.

Still unsigned for the Cardinals are Joe Torre, Jose Cardenal, Julian Javier, Ted Sizemore and rookie Luis Melendez.

There were a number of signings Friday, but the three biggest names were Maury Wills of the Los Angeles Dodgers, Alex Johnson of the California Angels and Juan Marichal of the San Francisco Giants. Wills, who hit .270 last season signed for an estimated $90,000 — the same amount he received last year — while Johnson, who won the American League batting title with a .328 average, got a "substantial" raise over last year.

Marichal, who had a disappointing 12-10 record last season after an adverse reaction to penicillin severely hampered his spring training program, received an estimated $125,000.

Also agreeing to terms with the Angels were outfielders Tony Gonzalez and Billy Cowan.

The Milwaukee Brewers inked infielder Ted Kubiak, which leaves only Tommy Harper unsigned from among last year's regulars. Kubiak was the Brewers' most durable performer last year, appearing in 158 games.

The Washington Senators signed second-string catcher Jim French for an estimated $18,000. French, who held out for one day, batted only .261 last year. The Senators still have not signed first-string catcher Paul Casanova, pitcher Horatio Pina and reliever Darold Knowles. Knowles, who won only three games last year, is seeking $45,000.

Pitcher Bill Denehy, who became a trival question four years ago when he was traded from the Mets to the Washington Senators for the rights to negotiate for manager Gil Hodges, was back with the Mets Friday.

Amazing Show By Aussie In San Diego Track Meet

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (UPI)—Kerry O'Brien couldn't believe it today as he tried to come off a cloud of joy after bettering both the indoor and outdoor two-mile records with a time of 8:19.2 in the San Diego Indoor Games Friday night.

"It's unbelievable," said the veteran Australian distance runner. "I'm stunned and happy. I think I now deserve the road runner of the year title.

"The way things were moving in the race, I knew I had a chance (at the record). It was a tremendous pace and a fantastic track."

O'Brien's amazing performance came after former Kansas distance star Jim Ryun had delighted the capacity crowd of 12,007 by equalling the seven year old mile indoor record of 3:56.4.

Kerry Pearce, a fellow Australian who originally set the indoor mark of 8:27.2 here three years ago, was second to O'Brien in 8:20.6. which bettered his old record. Frank Shorter of the Florida Track and Field Club was third in 8:27.2, fast enough for a new American record.

Pearce had stayed with O'Brien until the final lap and said he was "very happy" with his performance.

"O'Brien and I did not discuss the race before we ran," Pearce said. "I lack a little experience. I didn't have it in the last quarter."

The outdoor mark for two miles is 8:19.6 which was set by another Australian, Ron Clark, in 1968,

The performances by O'Brien and Ryun overshadowed another world record in the women's 600 yard run which Maria Sykora of Austria won in 1:21.5. The old record indoors was 1:22.3 set by Cheryl Touissant of the United States last year.

Ryun credited New Zealander Dick Quax for setting up the race for him, declaring he was responsible for the ultimate time.

"Quax started picking it up and I didn't know if I could get him or not," Ryun said. "When he moved, I tried to go with him. My legs had felt a little flat while warming up. I had felt tired all week."

Ryun, however, said his real interest was in outdoor competition and he added, "If I run well indoors, fine; if I don't, fine. It's the outdoors I'm aiming for."

Ryun, who started on a comeback this outdoor season at San Francisco, laid back in fifth or sixth place until the next to last lap as Chuck LaBenz of the Pacific Coast Club set a blistering pace, running the half mile in 1:54.5 and the three-quarters in 2:57.4.

Ryun had a margin of nearly 20 yards over second place John Mason thanks to a 56.4 final quarter. But the first four finishers all bettered four minutes. It was believed the best second, third and fourth place times for an indoor mile.

Mason was second in 3:58.0, La Benz third in 3:58.1 and Quax fourth in 3:58.9 after moving up on the next to last lap in a spurt that set Ryun off with his burst of speed at the end.

Almost overlooked was Aussie Ralph Doubell's victory in the 1,000 yard run in 2:06.3, fastest indoors this year.

The distance races overshadowed the rest of the meet in which Randy Matson, making his final indoor appearance, put the shot 68 feet, 4 inches to best indoor champion Al Feuerbach who threw 66-9 1-2.

Olympian Lee Evans won the 600 yard run in 1:08.7; Lennox Miller captured the 60-yard dash in 6.1 secoonds; Willie Davenport won the 60 yard hurldes in 7-1 and Bob Seagren pole vaulted at 17-1 as Kiyoshi Niwa of Japan was second at 16-6.

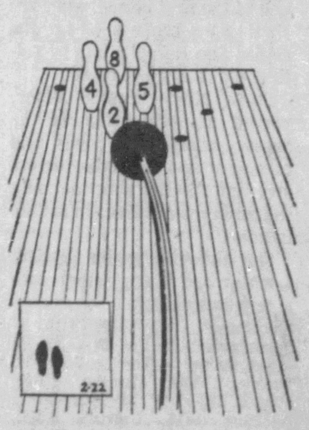
BOWLING TIPS

By DON CARTER



If you leave the 2-4-5-8 pins, don't get hurt twice. You may already have been hurt by the fact that you got a count of just six pins on a previous spare. Now you must concentrate on getting all of the remaining pins down so you won't severely damage your score.

Regard the 2-5 pins as a "pocket" and line up your feet and your spot out on the lane so you will bury the ball in that area. Don't get careless just because the 2-4-5-8 looks like a big target.

Petaluma Defeats Rancho

For both the Rancho Cotate High School Cougars and the Petaluma Trojans the basketball game was meaningless yesterday, but still important. It was a rivalry between the schools that had nothing at stake — each playing its final game of the season. It was the Trojans who were victors, 86-70, the 10th time they have beaten the Cougars since the rivalry began.

The Tojans, who finished third in North Bay League Section 1, were never really out of control. They took a commanding halftime lead of 45-30, and led by as much as 25 points at times in the second half.

The Cougars were spearheaded by their 6-foot-8-inch center Ron Seiler who scored 27 points and brought down 22 rebounds. Steve Wlodarczyk added 17 for Rancho.

Petaluma was led by its all-league candidate, Joe Rodola who scored 15 and did a tremendous job of controlling the boards as best one can against Seiler. Mike Blote, a reserve senior for the Trojans, was second in scoring for his team with 13.

Petaluma finished the season with a 19-5 overall won-lost record. The Cougars had a 10-12 overall slate, good enough for fourth place in NBL II.

Marin Gets No Rest, Faces Santa Rosa

By DAVID EINSTEIN

It took a "super effort" to beat Contra Costa, and it's going to take another one tonight to beat Santa Rosa. So says College of Marin basketball coach John Panagakis, whose Tars meet the Bear Cubs at 8 o'clock in Santa Rosa. Marin has not won a game there in three years.

Wednesday night the Tars won their 23rd game of the season, and their 14th at home without a loss, edging Contra Costa on Charlie Flynn's last second heroics. The 84-79 decision was the Kentfield team's first ever over the Comets of San pablo in a Camino Norte Conference game.

And it was a crucial win, that brought Marin up to a three way tie for second place with Contra Costa and West Valley; all are 8-3 in league play, a game behind De Anza of Cupertino. The Tars will put their 23-4 overall record and a possible post season playoff spot on the line next Wednesday when they host DeAnza. But Panagakis isn't worrying about that. He's got enough to keep him busy concerning Santa Rosa.

"Santa Rosa is playing great basketball," he said today. "I don't think they've lost any game this year by more than a half dozen points. They've just been unlucky. The ball hasn't bounced their way. Otherwise their record could be reversed."

The Bear Cubs, 2-6 in conference games and 8-13 overall, have, indeed, had their share of misfortune. The latest episode came last week in Campbell, where they lost to West Valley by two points in overtime. Twice this year they have lost to Marin by six, in the finals of the Tars' Christmas Tourney, and in the first league meeting between the teams.

Hopefully, the Tars will have enough energy left after Wednesday's game to handle Santa Rosa, a team that Panagakis describes as "very physical. They go to the boards extremely well." It remains to be seen whether Marin will be up or down psychologically. Both moods are possible.

Against the Comets, there wasn't any question but that they were up. Way up. "Any time you beat Contra Costa, it's got to be a super effort," said Panagakis. He was especially careful to note that the victory was a product of a five man effort. Everyone contributed in one way or another his best effort of the season.

Particularly heroic were Flynn, whose clean steal and subsequent foul shots with less than a minute remaining meant the victory, Herrnberger, who scored a season high of 23 points and did an outstanding job handling muscleman Ollie Ellison, and Roosevelt Green, who worked a specially designed offense to perfection.

"We were interchanging our offense," Panagakis said, explaining Green's movements throughout the game from a high post to a low post and back again. "Our whole plan was to try to get them in foul trouble. Once Ellison (one of the state's leading rebounders) got into trouble, we went at him."

So successful was the plan in application that Ellison, who seldom fouls out, did so with several minutes left to play. And even while he was in there, Green and Herrnberger combined to keep him and Comet center Floyd Allen effectively confused.

Gal's Bowl Tourney Winding Up

Women bowlers will be competing in the last two days of the Marin County Woman's Bowling Association City Tournament today and tomorrow.

The tournament started last weekend, with singles and doubles closing things this weekend. All events, team, singles and doubles are being held at Nave Lanes near Ignacio.

Leading the past week's bowling scores were Mike Weddell with a 694 three-game series at Country Club Bowl in San Rafael and Marilyn Epidendio (again) with a 622 at Greenbrae Lanes.

COUNTRY CLUB BOWL

Men — Mike Weddell, 694; Fred Ness, 682 and 659; Bob Curry, 666; Lou Eastland, 664. Women — Joan Curristan, 565 and 552; Jean Clark, 546; Leemoi Bekey, 545; Lois Schwab, 532. Juniors — Nancy McPherson, 542.

NAVE LANES

Men — Jack Vallee, 638; Ed Kirla, 608; John Hobbs, 607; Walt Moreno, 600. Women — Jan Lenci, 569; Anita Stockinger, 568; Mitzi Brown, 561; Em Smith, 557; Jean Twillman, 551.

Sonoma Does It Again

The Sonoma State College Cossacks added yet another basketball loss to their pursuit of a "perfect" season, this time falling to University of California at Davis, 91-72. They have now extended their won-lost record to 0-23.

Playing in their home court at Rohnert Park., the Cossacks were victims of a slow start matched with uninspired basketball. They fell behind at an early point 12-2, and the game could have ended right there. At the half the score was 41-30.

For Sonoma, Larry Austin had 18 points. He was followed by Mark Bucklew with 14 and Tad Wolisczko who had 15. For Davis, Steve Fletcher tallied 17. Close behind was Mark Underwood with 15 and Ron McMillan wth 13. Will Curley, a native of San Anselmo, added 8 points to the Davis cause.

The moon is between its last quarter and new phase. The morning stars are Mercury, Mars, Venus and Jupiter. The evening star is Saturn.

Those born on this date are under the sign of Pisces.

On this day in history:

In 1800 the U. S. Supreme Court ruled that the power of the federal government was no greater than that of any individual state in the Union.

In 1872 the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York City was opened to the public.

In 1938 Anthony Eden resigned as British foreign secretary to protest the "appeasement" policy of Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain toward Nazi Germany.

In 1962 astronaut John Glenn landed safely after three orbits of the earth.

A thought for today: Poet John Greenleaf Whittier said, "For all sad words of tongue and pen, the saddest are these: 'It might have been.'"

No Incensing

STOCKHOLM (UPI) — The Swedish justice ombudsman has dismissed a petition from a Greek convict who wanted to burn incense in his prison cell.

Prison authorities had refused him permission to burn the incense because they suspected it contained narcotics. The inmate asked the ombudsmen to reverse the decision but he refused on grounds that smoke pollution would be unfair to the other inmates.

HOW TO PLAY

WINNING BRIDGE

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

Always Give The Opponents A Chance To Contribute Tricks

It's all very well to be self-reliant, but only a selfish person would deprive others of the pleasure of helping him. At the bridge table, don't try to win every trick you need by your own unaided efforts; give your opponents a chance to contribute to the cause. They may not like it very much, but you can remind them that they were not put in this world just for their enjoyment.

PLAYS LOW

West opened the five of diamonds, and South played low from the dummy. East won with the queen and returned the eight of diamonds. South put up the jack, and West declined to cover with the king.

South counted eight sure tricks: two spades, two diamonds and four clubs. He cleared the top clubs out of the way, cashed the ace of spades and led a spade to try a finesse with dummy's jack. If the finesse worked, he would have nine tricks all by his own efforts.

Unfortunately for declarer, East won with the queen of spades and returned a spade to dummy's king. South still had only eight tricks, and that's all he managed to win. Down one.

LESS ACTIVE

South makes his contract if he is less active. After winning the second trick with the jack of diamonds, South cashes the king and queen of clubs, enters dummy with the ace of diamonds and returns to the ace of clubs. Then he leads the ten of diamonds, discarding a low heart from dummy.

West gets a trick with the king of diamonds, but must now lead spades or hearts. If West leads a heart, declarer can eventually win a trick with the queen of hearts. If West leads a spade, South can play low from the dummy and trap East's queen. A spade lead from West will give South a third trick in the suit if West has either the queen or the ten. This is quite a bit better than playing West for just the queen of spades.

What do you say?

ANSWER: Bid one no-trump.

This response tends to promise a fairly good hand, since you would prefer to bid a suit of your own or to raise clubs if you had a poor hand. Some experts promise eight to 10 points; others, nine to 11 points with the response of no-trump to the opening bid of one club.

Heart Fund Gets Club Drive Money

A fund drive by the Spanish Club at Marin Catholic High School has netted $130 for the 1971 Heart Fund campaign, according to Adrianne McGuire, a student who ran the program.

She said the club raised the sum by typing and delivering Valentine cards for other students Feb. 12.

State Steps To Cut Welfare Pay Errors

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —The Reagan Administration is taking steps to tighten control over procedures to determine who is eligible for welfare benefits.

State Social Welfare Director Robert Carleson said Friday the action was prompted by an administration study which showed that county mistakes in distributing welfare have resulted in $51 million in overpayments.

The steps, he said, include creation of a special department task force to combine eligibility control and financial audit activities in the welfare program.

"This will eliminate areas of overlap between the two functions and facilitate development of information more useful for solving problems of eligibility determination and grant payments," Carleson said.

The department also plans to transfer the eligibility control bureau from its field operations branch to its management services branch to give the bureau "a better organization base" to reduce eligibility errors, Carleson said.

He said the county overpayment problem resulted from a "rapidly increasing caseload and complex state regulations coupled with various administrative differences among the 58 counties."

The finance department study, made at Carleson's request, showed the error rate for determining welfare eligibility was 50 per cent in adult aid and 25 per cent in aid to dependent children. The results were made public last week.

Dope Raid In Kentfield: 2 Arrests

Two Kentfield residents were arrested yesterday on suspicion of possessing dangerous drugs, narcotics for sale and concealing stolen property following a 7 a.m. raid on their homebylaw officers.

Arrested were Gilbert Eloy Atencio, 29, and Beverly Ann DeCosta, 22, of 20 Hill Drive.

San Rafael police said today they accompanied county narcotics agents in the raid after they received a tip that a quantity of cocaine had been seen at the home.

Officers, carrying a search warrant, found a suspected bag of cocaine and one of suspected marijuana, as well as 20 items ranging from office equipment to cameras believed stolen.

The pair was released from Marin County Jail, Atencio on $5,000 bail and Miss DeCosta on $1,500 bail. They are scheduled to appear Monday in Marin Municipal Court.

Delay Urged For Peripheral Canal

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Contra Costa County officials have told the White House that construction of the $200 million peripheral canal should be postponed because of environmental dangers, according to Rep. Jerome R. Waldie, D-Calif.

Waldie said the project was criticized in a 150-page report submitted to the president's Council on Environmental Quality by the Contra Costa County water agency and the county board of supervisors.

The congressman said the report concluded environmental "evils and dangers" were such as to make the project "premature."

Southern Crossing Span Gets Go-Ahead

SACRAMENTO (UPI) --The state Toll Bridge Authority yesterday removed the last obstacle and directed construction to begin on the contrgversial Southern Crossing bridge over San Francisco Bay.

The agency adopted a report ordered by the legislature which concludes the proposed $300 million span will not despoil the environment or divert potential users of the Bay Area Rapid Transit district.

E. R. Foley, chief engineer for the state Division of Bay Toll Crossing, said initial construction of the bridge will probably begin later this year with completion targeted for "sometime in 1976."

The bridge will stretch from India Basin south of San Francisco to East Bay, with legs running to Alameda-Oakland and San Leandro.

The report prepared by Foley was ordered by a resolution authored by Assemblyman Robert Crown, D-Alameda, and adopted by the legislature last year.

It directed toll engineers to determine environmental factors and the effect it would have on rivaling the BART system for trans-bay passenger patronage.

In its report, the authority concluded that BART can expect higher than anticipated usage.

It also said the proposed new crossing will relieve the congested Bay Bridge of traffic.

Regarding the environment, the report said "there will be only minimal effect" in the areas where the bridge will be built.

"Any delay in the project will mean increased construction costs as well as continued trans-bay traffic congestion," the report said. "Delay will also cause future problems in project financing and be disruptive to the many planning programs of other agencies now in progress."

The San Francisco Board of Supervisors recently voted 6-3 to oppose the span, which prompted authority member Verne Orr, Gov. Ronald Reagan's finance director, to question the legality of beginning construction.

Foley replied that the city had already made its commitments to the state. He said construction could commence.

MD Draft Seen

WASHINGTON (UPI) —For the first time in two years the Selective Service system will be asked to draft medical doctors and dentists, Defense Department sources said Friday.

Span Lobbyist Issue Put Over

The legislation-public relations committee of the Golden Gate Bridge District has continued to Thursday at 1:30 p.m. consideration of hiring a Washington lobbyist.

The district has been trying without success for almost a year to get federal financing for its $25 million bus and ferry system. It is also planning long-range transit that could not be paid for without federal funds.

Richard C. Clark, assistant chief of administration-security for the district, said the committee announced the continuation after discussing the hiring in closed session Thursday.

CMA Sues To Stop Cut In Medi-Cal Services

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —The California Medical Association said in court yesterday that it was suing the Reagan administration over Medi-Cal cutbacks "to prevent the abandonment of patients."

The statement was made by CMA attorney David Willet in an opening statement at a hearing before Superior Court Judge William E. Gallagher on the association's attempt to get a restraining order to stop the reductions.

The CMA was joined in the action by the California Rural Legal Assistance, the California Dental Association as well as San Mateo, Alameda and Sacramento counties.

Willet told Gallagher: "This is not an action to raise the fees paid to doctors. This is not a suit to perpetuate the present Medi-Cal system. This is an action to prevent the abandonment of patients."

Deputy Attorney General John Fort, representing the Reagan administration, said the key reason for the budget problems was "the national recession and unemployment and a large increase in the number of persons eligible" for the benefits.

He also said the administration of the new regulations "has been reasonable and proper."

Lawyers estimated that the hearing would last at least a week.

The CMA asked for the restraining order in January. It sought to wipe out the Dec. 15, 10 per cent Medi-Cal reductions ordered by the state Health Care Services Department—the administrator of the health care program for California's medically indigent.

Health Care Services Director Earl Brian said the cuts were needed because of an expected multi-million-dollar deficit in the program this year.

Sacramento County went to the 3rd District Court of Appeal recently in an effort to upset the reductions but the court dismissed its action without comment. Observers felt the appellate court declined to rule on the issue because it was before Judge Gallagher.

CMA President Ralph W. Burnett, Bakersfield, and President-elect Roberta Fenson, San Francisco, said when they filed their suit that the reductions had to be stopped "to save the health—and the lives—of the state's poor."

They said that despite the fact Medi-Cal was having financial problems, "it is a fact that for the first time all the poor had access to quality care —to what doctors call 'mainstream medicine.'

"Under the severe cutbacks imposed by the Department of Health Care Services as of Dec. 15, the 'mainstream medicine' concept is out the window. Even adequate care is often impossible."

Early in January Gallagher ruled the Reagan administration did not violate the law in reducing payments for Medi-Cal patients in nursing homes. The state agency had been sued by the California Association of Nursing Homes.

Gallagher said it was legal for the state to make economy moves to help solve budget problems.

Lensman Jailed In Contempt

UKIAH (UPI)—A preliminary hearing for three relatives of militant Indian leader Richard Oakes charged with attempted murder will be held Monday. Oakes promised to be on hand to witness the court proceedings.

The suspects, Dale, Harold and Robert Marrufo, appeared before Justice Court Judge Hale McCowen Jr. Thursday to plead innocent and to have a preliminary hearing date set.

Oakes appeared in the courtroom with 20 or 25 Indian companions. Judge McCowen ruled that no photographs were to be taken in the courtroom or in the corridor outside.

Robert Curry, 25, a photographer for the Ukiah Daily Journal, took pictures of Oakes in the corridor despite the judge's order. He was arrested and jailed when he refused to surrender his films. He was released on $60 bail with a hearing on contempt charges against him to be held next Thursday.

The Marrufo trio was arrested early Sunday following a scuffle outside the Gualala Hotel in which Eugene Leighton, Point Arena, was shot and wounded twice by rifle shots. He was struck in the right arm and side, but was reported in good condition.

DR. CHARLES E. WILSON TO SPEAK TUESDAY

Wilson: Put Dental Care In Programs

Dr. Charles E. Wilson, California Dental Association president-elect will call for inclusion of dental care in all public and private health care programs when he addresses the Marin County Dental Society next week.

In a press release, Dr. Wilson said that the definition of dental health care by legislators and administrative officials as an elective rather than an essential service in health care plans is "faculty" and must be corrected.

The alternative, Dr. Wilson said, rests with legislators and government officials who must redefine dental health as a basic essential in the next health program offered to Congress.

Dr. Wilson — a Fairfield dentist — will become president of the California Dental Association in April at its annual meeting in San Francisco. His address to the Marin society is set for 6:30 p.m. Tuesday at the Meadow Club in Fairfax.

Civic Center Display Of Animal Portraits

Sixteen oil paintings by animal portrait painter Lily Fast of Fairfax are on exhibit at the Marin County Library in the Civic Center.

The exhibit may be viewed from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. weekdays until March 15.

Fall Date Liked For Novato Congress

The Novato Chamber of Commerce has decided that the Congress for Community Progress, which tentatively had been scheduled for May, will be held next fall.

With several months preparation needed and no chairman selected for the event, directors decided Thursday to postpone the all-day event, reported Billie Garl, chamber secretary.

Novato Chamber of Commerce directors also:

MILITARY — Scheduled a military-civilian dinner with 50 military officers as guests of 50 chamber members at the Alvarado Inn March 17, and a luncheon, briefing and tour at Hamilton Air Force Base on April 1.

LUNCHEON — Received notice that Supervisor Arnold M. Baptiste will speak at a general membership luncheon at noon March 4 at Sportsman's Lodge.

SELECTED — Name Robert Churchill of West America Securities as a director and Gordon L. Lee, district manager of the Western California Telephone Co., as treasurer.

Chief Firm On No-Shoot Order

OAKLAND (UPI) —Police chief Charles Gain says he'll stake his reputation on a policy forbidding police to shoot at fleeing burglars.

Gain told members of "Citizens For Law and Order" at a city council work session that his 1968 order was the "most beneficial to the social harmony" of the city.

Earl W. Huntting, president of the citizens group, had just told the councilmen Thursday his organization would "not push" for revocation of the policy at this time. The group represents businessmen and attorneys concerned about "breakdown" of law enforcement and court decisions.

Quake Damage Cuts Gas In Sylmar Area

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—Damage to gas mains in the Sylmar area from last week's earthquake has forced termination of gas service to nearly 10,000 homes in the foothill communities of Sunland and Tujunga.

A spokesman for the Southern California Gas Co. said the lines were fractured in the Feb. 9 quake, permitting dirt to enter. The dirt worked its way up to filters located at several regulator stations in the Sunland-Tujunga area, partially blocking the filters Friday.

Sally Aims To Change VD Program

Sausalito Restaurateur Sally Stanford has been appointed to Gov. Ronald Reagan's 28-member task force on venereal disease.

She replaces screen star Raquel Welch, who resigned from the committee because of film commitments.

Miss Stanford, formerly San Francisco's most famous madam, said she is eager to try to change current programs of VD treatment and education.

"There have been fantastic blunders in this area," she said. "We are more enlightened about animals than people."

Miss Stanford said she would like to see creation of free clinics where people, particularly young people, can receive treatment without identifying themselves or listing their sexual partners —two requirements she feels keep many from seeking treatment.

She is convinced VD informational classes should be taught by "people the kids can relate to with complete freedom.

Brown Says 18-Year-Olds Can Register New Voters

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Secretary of State Edmund G. Brown Jr. said yesterday that it was legal for 18-year-olds to register new voters.

Brown said his legal opinion has been sent to California's county clerks and registrars of voters. He made the finding, he said, because his office has received "many inquiries from local election officials."

Most counties have refused to name deputy voting registrars under 21 pending clarification of the matter, Brown said.

The secretary of state said, "Deputization of 18-year-olds is proper under California law and will provide a constructive outlet for the political energy of our young citizens."

He said the age of deputy registrars was not considered in the election code.

The state official said Congress in passing the Voting Rights Act giving 18-year-olds the right to participate in federal elections "considered 18-year-olds capable of understanding the oath and forms.

"It would be anomalous to take the position that 18-year-olds have these qualifications for the purpose of registering to vote but do not have the same qualifications for the purpose of being deputized to register others."

Sandstorms Lash Southland Roads

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Winds of near hurricane velocity lashed Southern California deserts into blinding sandstorms Friday, closing or restricting traffic on at least five Interstate highways.

The hardest hit area was the Mojave desert, where gusts were clocked at up to 72 miles an hour and created what some oldtimers described as the worst sandstorm in memory.

Innocent Plea In Drug Case

Peter Donald Tibbitts, 18, of Kentfield, has pleaded innocent in Marin Municipal Court to charges of possessing heroin and marijuana and a misdemeanor count of possessing a hypodermic needle.

Judge Peter Allen Smith referred the case to juvenile court, but set a preliminary hearing on the charges for March 2 if the case is not acceptable to juvenile court.

Preliminary hearings for four codefendants have already been set for the same date.

They were arrested Jan. 28 when police broke up a beer party at a Larkspur lumber yard.

Dairy Princess Blanks Ready

Applications are now available for entry in the 1971 District 3 Dairy Princess contest to be held May 8 at the Petaluma Veterans Memorial Auditorium.

The contest is open to girls at least 17 years old who live in Marin, Sonoma, Mendocino, Napa, Lake or Solano counties. The contestants must be high school seniors or graduates and have some connection with the dairy industry.

Applications may be obtained from the Petaluma Chamber of Commerce and must be returned with three wallet-size pictures. The first 12 entries will be accepted, based on the letter postmark date.

Warren's Wife Replies To Suit

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —The wife of Municipal Court Judge Earl Warren Jr., son of retired Chief Justice Earl Warren, attempted Friday to stop divorce proceedings and save their 17-year marriage.

Allen Fields, attorney for the former Cleo Patricia Kent, filed a petition for reconciliation in Superior Court. He said the matter could eventually be placed with a domestic relations counselor of the court.

Warren, 40, filed a petition Thursday for dissolution of their marriage. He listed irreconcilable differences as the reasons for the breakup.

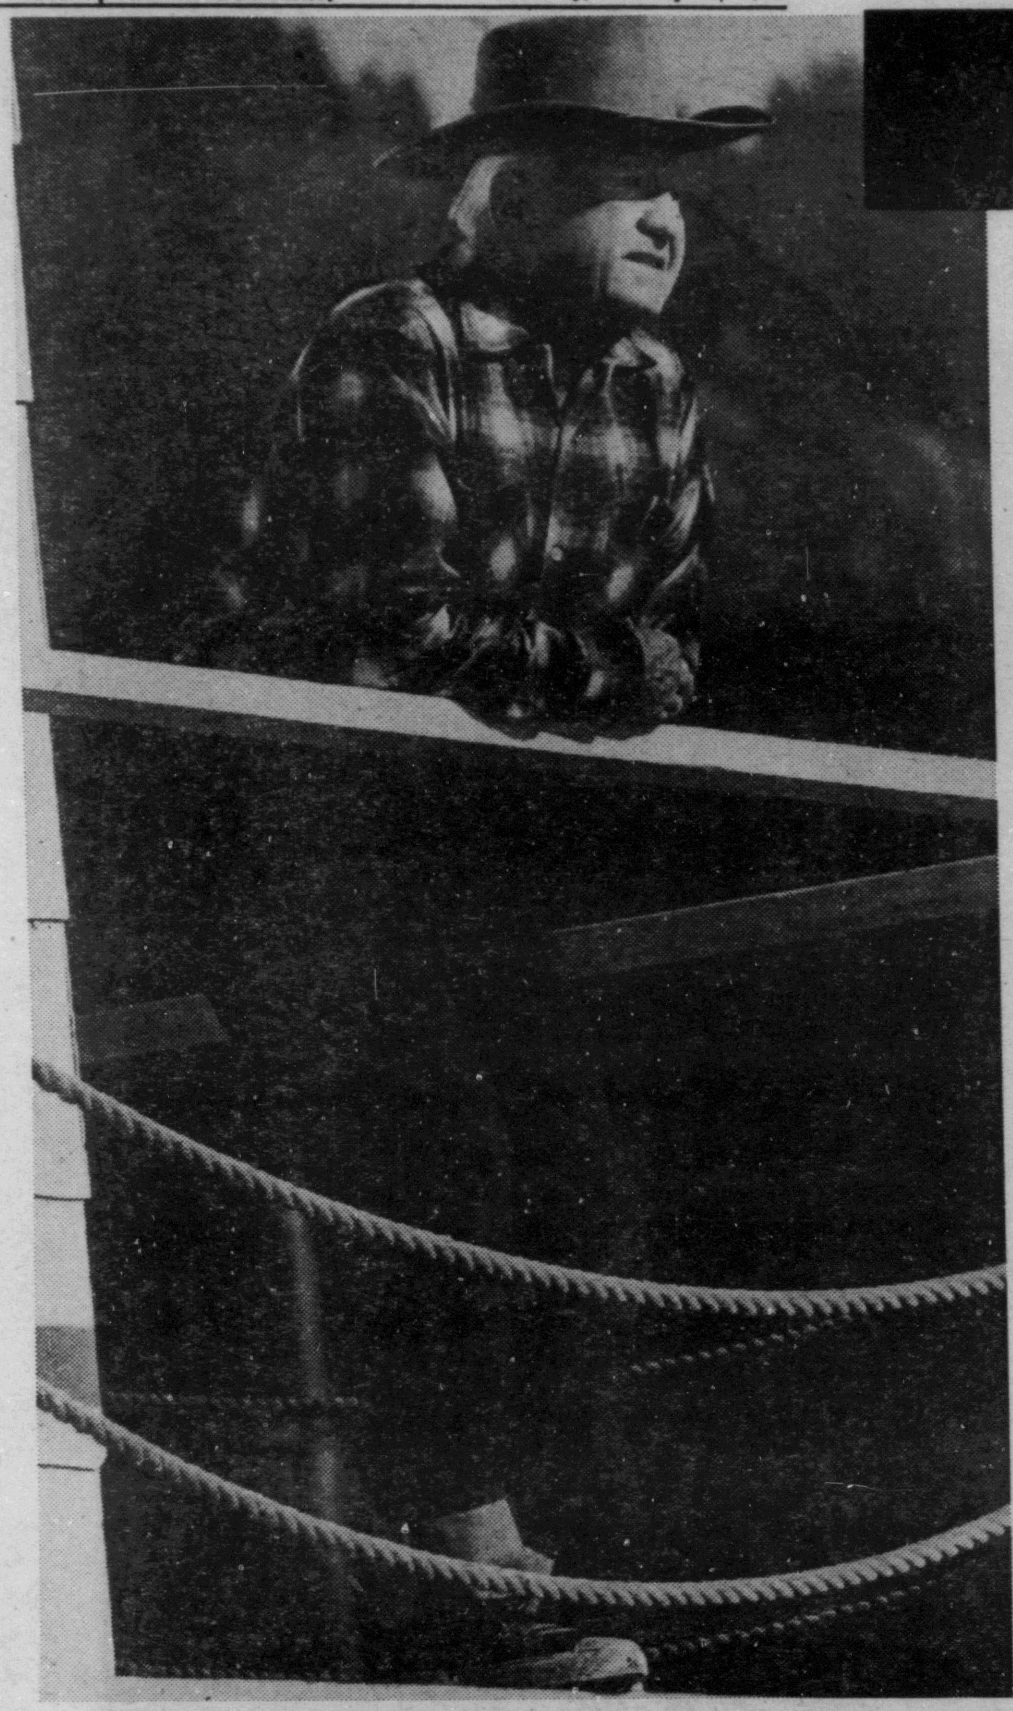
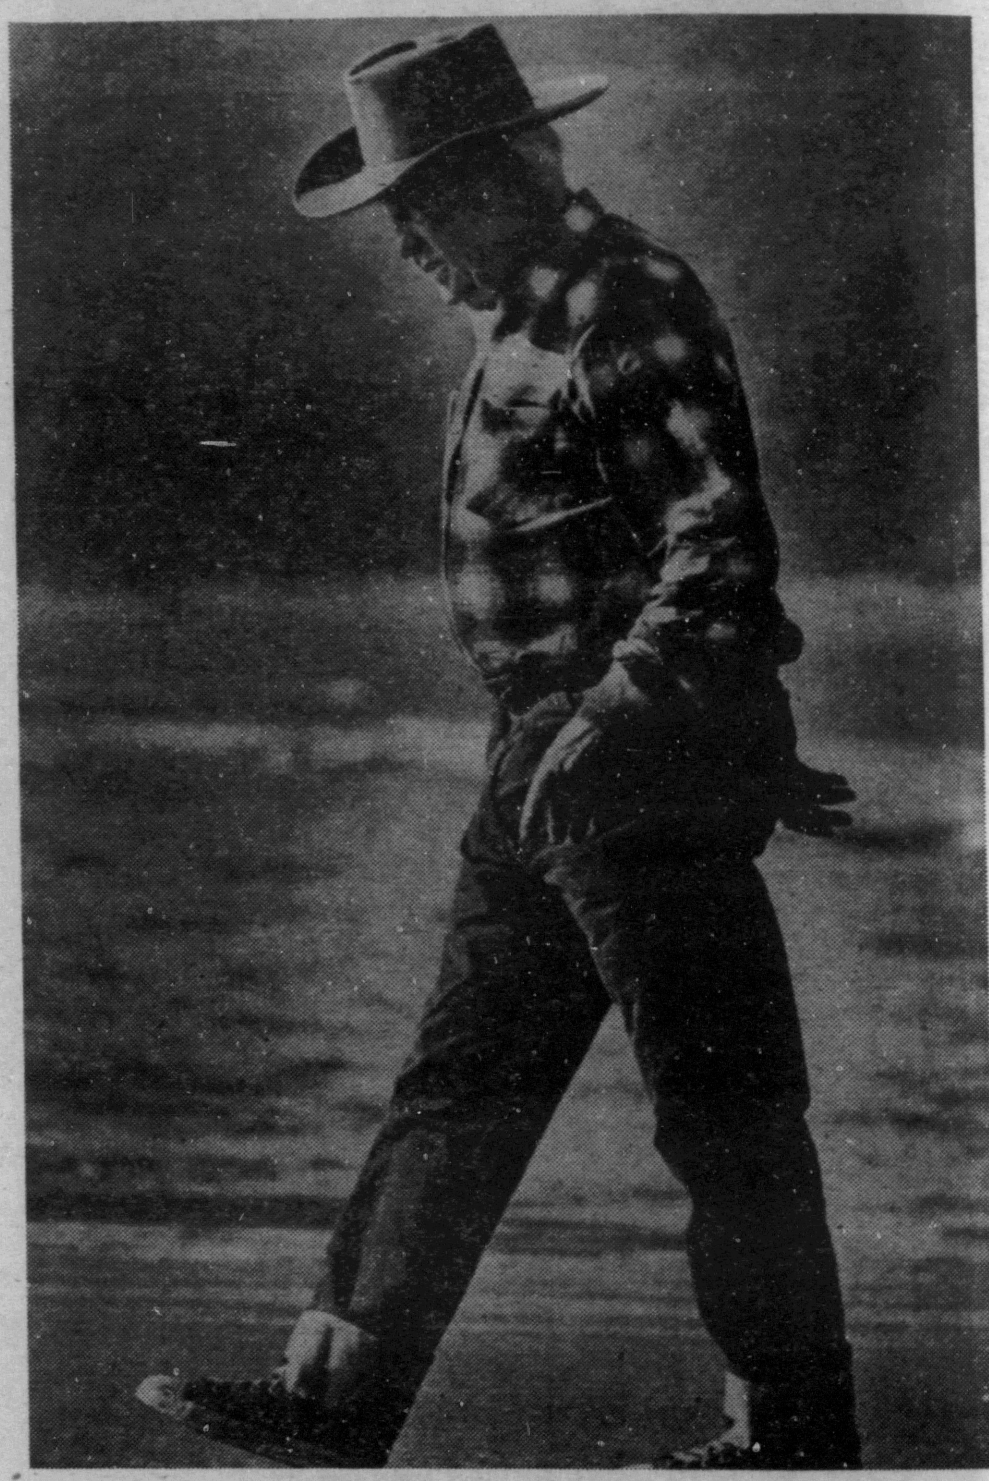
Profile Of A Marinite



FORMER LAWMAN Walter Bruno Sellmer, nearing 80 and retired, now has plenty of time for reflection, and from the porch of his home overlooking the Stinson Beach surf he ponders the new horizons that have opened to him since he began befriending the crippled and the blind.



BUT IF Walter Sellmer no longer totes the badge and gun of the lawman, he remains far from inactive. He starts each day with a brisk walk and four-mile jog to limber up the still spry legs that once chased down lawbreakers and poachers. And the rest of his day is filled with activity.

Walter Sellmer — The Last Of A Breed

Marin's Former Sheriff Has Found New Horizons

By WAT TAKESHITA

When Walter Bruno Sellmer retired as sheriff in 1955, a bit of the old West vanished from the Marin scene.

He was the last of that breed of western lawman, who relied on his star and six-shooter to protect the good guys from the bad.

Sellmer, the man, however, lives on in his beachfront home at Stinson Beach, reaching out for new horizons.

Since he hung up his gun 16 years ago, he's turned to the pen and typewriter to tackle a new field — the world of the shut-ins. Daily, he pounds out a stream of encouragement to fellow members of Handicaps Unlimited International and the National Shut-In Society. He has even mastered braille to keep in touch with the blind.

NOVATO'S FIRST speed-cop, later game warden and Marin sheriff, has turned humanitarian and poet.

The ageless wonder, who will turn 80 on May 16, has bridged the gap that separates young from old, the straights from dropouts. The sudden focus on ecology and love is nothing new to Sellmer. He's been fighting for conservation and ecology since 1914. The out-of-doors, the wonders of nature, and the marvels of Marin have been his stomping grounds for almost 60 years.

From his typewriter flow verses on peace and love, inspired by pen-pals scattered throughout the nation. One inspiration, in particular, is Miss Jean Isbell, who is confined to a wheelchair in Richfield, Utah. For the thrice-divorced Sellmer, this is his fourth romance.

TANNED FROM the sun and wind, his white hair combed straight back, Sellmer walks with the same brisk pace that old-timers still remember.

Newcomers to the beach marvel at the old gent who jogs three and four miles each morning along the roads of Stinson Beach. But few would guess that here goes a living legend who made Marin history for a half century.

Born in 1891 in San Francisco, he grew up south of the Slot (Market). Small but tough, he learned to use his fists in street fights and in the ring. As a teen-ager, he boxed at the Barbary Coast for a dollar a fight as a 122-pound featherweight.

HIS FATHER, Jacob P. Sellmer, a carpet layer and upholsterer, bought some cabins in Larkspur about the turn of the century and rented them out.

Sellmer attended schools in Corte Madera and in San Francisco, completing the sixth grade.

In 1912, his father bought a ranch in Novato and started raising chickens. Young Sellmer and his bride, Hazel, settled down to chicken ranching in Novato.

HE STUMBLED into law enforcement quite by accident. "I was driving a horse and wagon one day when a car brushed me off the road," recalls Sellmer. "I was so mad I went to Judge (Herman) Rudolph and Constable (Tom) Sutton to complain."

"What we need is a speed cop to catch those pesky autos that go over 30 miles per hour and care horses and chickens," the constable told him.

Hired on the spot, Sellmer became Novato's first speed-cop. He chugged along the roads of North Marin in a souped-up model T Ford, armed with a 30-30 rifle and a set of boxing gloves.

HE USED A stopwatch and roadside markers to clock the speeders, much as today's police use radar. "I got a dollar for each arrest. On Monday morning, I'd have a sack of money for Judge Rudolph."

Why did he carry boxing gloves?

"One day I arrested a fella, and he said if I had a pair of gloves, he'd knock hell out of me. From then on, I carried a set of gloves in the car but never had to use them."

He beefed up his patrol by getting a Harley-Davidson motorcycle, which he hid behind haystacks to nab speeders. He became so well-known that he often disguised himself as a hobo and sat around camp fires to watch for pesky drivers.

TOO MUCH dedication to law enforcement led to his downfall. Conscientious Sellmer spotted the constable's car parked on the wrong side of the road. "I called him down on it, and was fired on the spot. That was the end of Speed-Cop Sellmer."

As deputy constable and speed-cop, Sellmer had worked closely with the state game warden, the late David Hoen. When he lost his job as speed-cop, he was hired as game warden on Hoen's recommendation.

From 1916 to 1930, Sellmer was the scourge of the poacher and the fish and game violator. He won recognition statewide as the game warden with the greatest number of arrests.

HE USED HIS motorcycle, horse, car, boats and even an airplane (built by his father) to cover the county from land, air and sea.

Signs popped up in the remotest areas of Mount Tamalpais, warning hikers and hunters: "Game Warden Sellmer will be here today. He might be watching you now!"

To put teeth into those warnings, Sellmer created a system of secret agents, with 463 citizen friends to watch for violators. None of these agents knew the identity of the others.

SELLMER EVEN deputized his wife (second wife, Mary) as a game warden to help him patrol the county.

In July of 1928, Sellmer sounded an official warning on the importance of ecology. "The public has awakened to the fact that our wildlife must be protected if we would keep it from extermination," he wrote in the Marin Herald."

When he nailed citizens Jake Obitz and Pistol Smith for killing a doe, Sellmer put the carcass in a barber shop window in San Rafael with this sign: "Doe killed by Jake Obitz. Arrested today by W. B. Sellmer, game warden!"

JUDGE RUDOLPH, presiding at his cheese factory in North Marin, sentenced Obitz to 60 days in jail and $100 fine.

What he lacked in manpower and modern technology, Sellmer made up in tenacity and ingenuity.

Along Point Reyes, abalone hunters were required to bring their catch to shore before taking them out of the shell so that the game warden could measure the size.

"WHEN I questioned the size of abalones they had taken out of the shells, they'd show me the empty shells on the beach, but I began to suspect they were using the same shells over and over again."

Sellmer meticulously scoured the Point Reyes shoreline, putting small marks on every abalone shell he could find. The next time the abalone hunters pointed to their shells, Sellmer found his marks on most of them. That put a stop to undersized abalone hunting.

The incident he recalls with greatest satisfaction is the time he saved the lives of hundreds of passengers riding a train that was headed straight for a horse stuck in a trestle.

"IT WAS ON a curve near St. Vincent's orphanage north of San Rafael," recalls Sellmer. "A boy was leading a horse over the trestle when the horse's legs broke through, and it was stuck on the tracks belly deep. I could hear the train coming around the curve. I ran toward the train as fast as I could and stopped it just in time."

IN THE DISGUISE of a hobo, Walter B. Sellmer covered the roads of Marin County back in 1914, stopping any daredevil motorist who might be speeding at faster than 30 miles an hour.

A Former Sheriff Exchanges Pistol For A Typewriter

Sellmer and the train crew used ropes to hoist the horse off the tracks, as the train passengers cheered.

Sellmer had some close brushes with death while game warden.

"ONE DAY MY boat got swamped in Tomales Bay. I was out of gas, had lost the oars, and was sinking fast. Two men came by on a boat so I yelled for help. But they yelled back, 'We know you, Sellmer. You're just trying to trap us for breaking the laws.' And they took off."

He was finally rescued by Antonio Rocca of Tomales.

In 1927, he was recommended for the Carnegie Medal for heroism for stripping to his drawers and jumping into the surf at Stinson Beach to rescue a drowning man. Of 200 people on the beach, Sellmer was the only one who dared the treacherous breakers to swim to the floundering victim.

WATER POLLUTION was also one of Sellmer's concerns. One day, he spotted Fred Genazzi of Point Reyes dumping garbage into Papermill Creek. Instead of arresting the man on the spot, Sellmer hid behind bushes and shot the scene with his movie camera.

Arrested for water pollution, Genazzi told Judge Rudolph he wasn't the culprit. "Sellmer can't see straight!" Genazzi testified.

Sellmer quietly draped a bedspread against the wall and turned on his movie projector. "Thirty days in the county jail," the judge ordered.

SELLMER CARRIED his campaign for conservation statewide. For the State Fair in Sacramento, he produced an exhibit entitled "Forest Tragedy." The feature of the exhibit was a large photograph of a fallen doe, with two orphaned fawns standing helplessly by. With a flair for dramatics, Sellmer captioned the photograph: "A Mother Murdered." It got statewide publicity.

"The picture was posed," Sellmer admitted. "One fawn was a real live one, but the other two deer were stuffed."

Sellmer quit as game warden to run for county sheriff in 1930 when Sheriff Jack Keating died. He nosed out Alex McCurdy by 478 votes.

IN ALL HIS 40 years of law enforcement, the last 24 as sheriff, Sellmer never drew a gun or club in anger. "I always tried to talk to them, to calm them. Usually, if you talk to them quietly, they will cooperate."

Pointing to a broken nose which he suffered during his boxing days, Sellmer jokes: "Maybe this helped some. They'd look at the broken nose and figure this guy's been in a couple of scrapes."

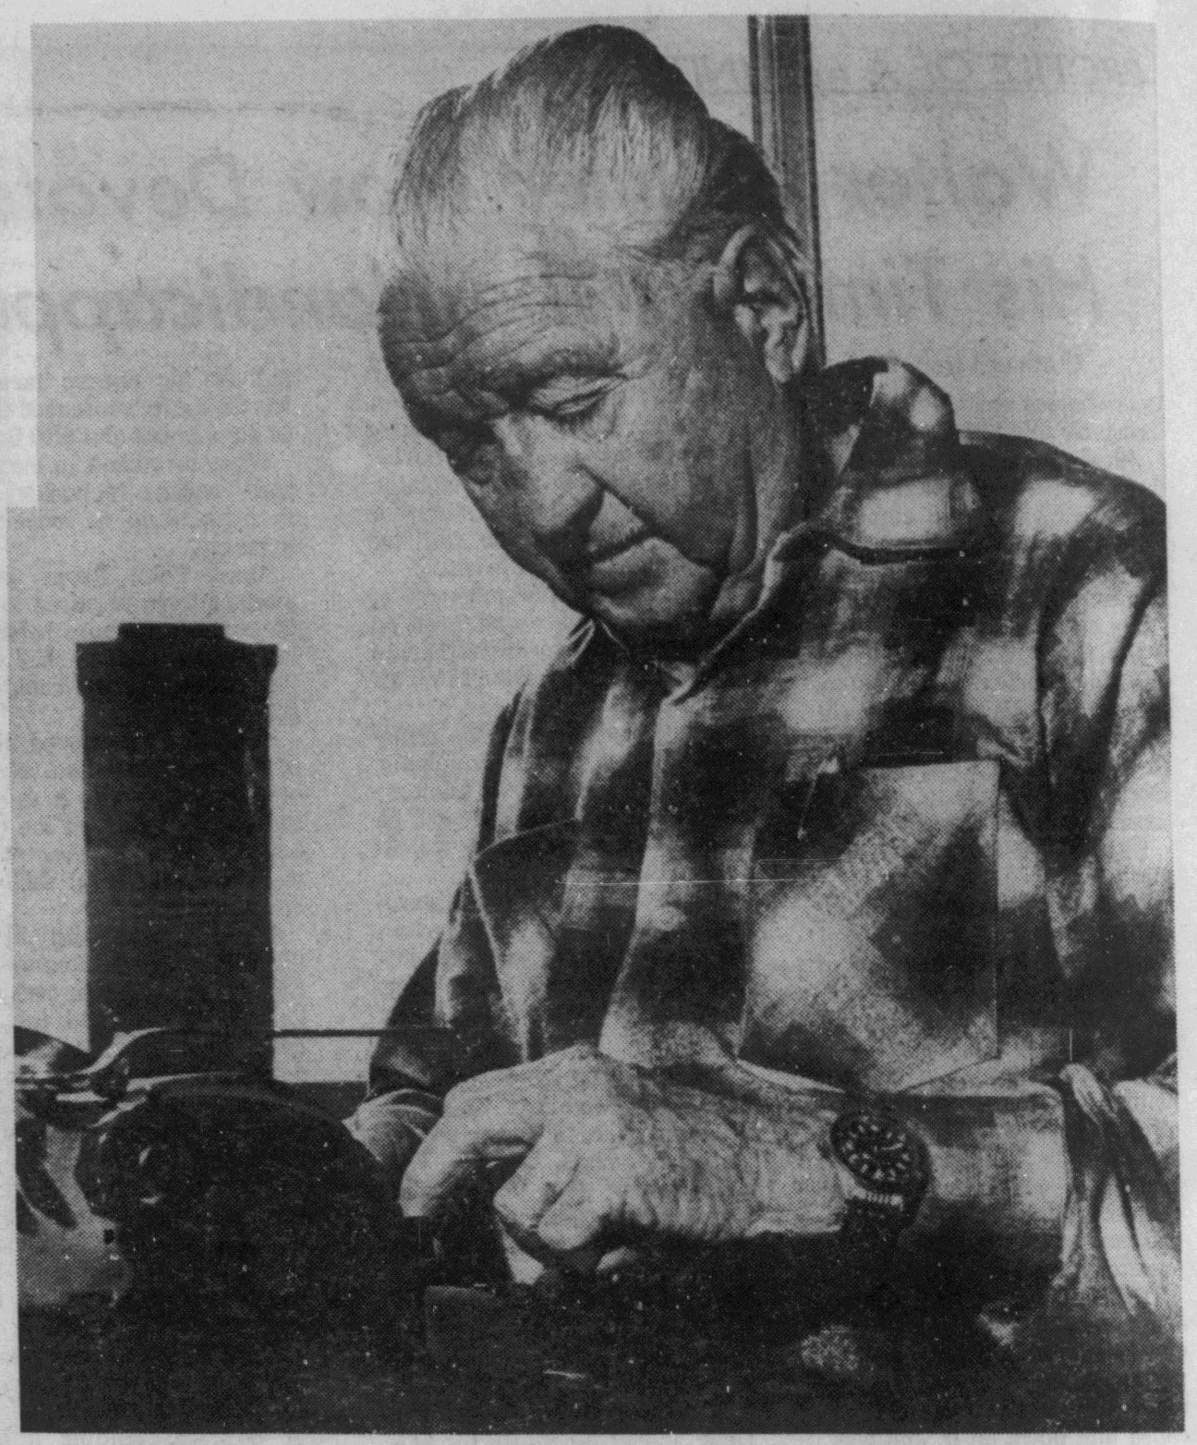
The one tragedy that brought gunfire and death erupted on Jan. 16, 1935, when four armed San Quentin desperadoes took four hostages and broke for freedom in Warden J. B. Holohan's car. The car headed north.

"I ORDERED the Black Point drawbridge raised, and we tailed them," said Sellmer. "I ordered my men not to shoot, as long as there were hostages."

Blocked at the drawbridge, the getaway car roared back toward Hicks Valley. Tomales Constable Jack Bones and his posse, including young Dist. Atty. Al Bagshaw, were waiting for them near the Valley Ford Creamery. The posse shot out one tire, and the car careened into the creamery building.

In the shootout that followed, Bagshaw dropped the ringleader with a blast from his shotgun, and the others surrendered.

In 1954, when the late David Menary Sr. outpolled him in his try for a seventh term, Sellmer dropped out of the limelite to take up a new life-style, later popularized by hippies and the love generation.



AT HIS TYPEWRITER in his Stinson Beach home, Walter B. Sellmer sits down daily to tap out messages of hope and love to his crippled and blind "pen pals" throughout the country. It has become an abiding interest with the former lawman.

HE SET UP housekeeping in a trailer at a toll gate on the road that leads through William Hall's ranch to Drake's Beach. He combed the beaches for stones, sea shells, and whalebone to sell to tourists who passed the toll gate.

Beachcombing and trailer life game him time for meditation, which opened up a new horizon that borders on the religious.

"I was never religious," admits Sellmer. "But I began to ask myself what would God want from a person like me. Then one day an old woman came along in shabby clothes. She wanted to buy a cluster of sea shells for a person in a wheel chair. But she did not have the $3.

SHE WAS ABOUT to leave when I called her back. So I said I want you to give this to the person in the wheelchair."

"That was the turning point," admitted Sellmer. "That was to be my future. I would help the handicapped. And you know, it has brought me more luck, success and happiness. The whole world seems to be opened up to me."

Divorced from his third wife, Semiana, in 1959, Sellmer dropped his beachcombing and began devoting his life to helping the old, the blind and the shut-ins, including his father, who dies in 1968 at age 98.

HE HAS THREE sons. William is a correctional officer in San Quentin, Harry is a printer in San Francisco, and Walter J. works for the telephone company in Petaluma.

His daughter is Eunice Willcutt of San Rafael, who once reigned as Miss Marin during a July Fourth celebration. Once a week, Sellmer drives in from Stinson Beach to have lunch with Eunice at the Taverna Yiasou restaurant near the Civic Center.

From his house on stilts on Calle de Resaca, which overlooks the Stinson surf, Sellmer pounds his typewriter and writes in braille, spreading cheer "to my many friends." He buys artificial limbs, wheel chairs, and other aids to shut-ins throughout the country.

FOR INCOME to supplement his social security and pension, he represents a firm that prints business and postal cards. He also sells rubber stamps and magnetic signs that fasten to automobiles.

"All I need is something to live on," said Sellmer. "The rest I'd rather give to my friends.

"All shut-ins are wonderful people. I've fallen in love with one in particular, Jean Isbell. I met her three years ago and sent her a diamond ring, so we're engaged. But the problem is, I can't take care of her. So we write to each other every day." More than 4,000 letters and poems have passed between them.

SELLMER IS California's assistant representative to the National Shut-In Society. Because of his law background, many of his shut-in friends address him as Marshal Dillon of Stinson Beach.

Walter Sellmer, for 40 years the scourge of the speeder, poacher and lawbreaker, is at peace with the world. One of his recent poems, published by the Handicaps Unlimited International, sums up his philosophy:

HAPPINESS — PEACE OF MIND

"When All the world seems blue
And others smile, but not at you,
Daily tasks, and listless days
And misery lurks in many ways.

We wonder why we feel that way
While others smile and are so gay,
A train of laughter makes us wonder
How we failed and began to blunder

We thought of God, and began to pray
He heard our plea, and showed the way
To help the handicapped, and the blind
Brought us happiness and peace of mind."

STUDENT GARY SHARP works in a chemistry laboratory in Sonoma State College's Darwin Hall at purifying a new, heat-sensitive organic compound. Sharp is just one of the Sonoma State chemistry majors who are impressed with the approachability of the faculty members and enthusiastic over the program. He is a Fairfax resident.

Involved Students, A Dedicated Faculty

These Ingredients Make Sonoma State Chemistry Department A Success

"I can't explain it, but I feel free here. There's a spirit about the place that excites me."

Nineteen-year-old Vincent Wilson of Rohnert Park is speaking about the chemistry department of Sonoma State College.

And it is the kind of remark that is echoed time and time again by other chemistry majors whose enthusiasm and dedication often keep them in the lecture halls and laboratories of Darwin Hall on the Rohnert Park campus for long, extra hours.

The involvement of the students in this relatively small department seems to be attributable to no single magic ingredient or formula.

INSTEAD, STUDENTS are inclined to credit the dedicated corps of faculty members and their commitment for the special atmosphere that flourishes in the chemistry department at Sonoma State.

"I enjoy working in the labs, and it is largely because there are always faculty members available to help me with my problems and to answer my questions," says 21-year-old James Moyer of Montclair.

The students add that their work is tough — but always interesting. And among the students there exists a comraderie that causes an exchange of views and information among them along with the dialogue between faculty and students.

"I DON'T FEEL I'm taking classes from authoritarian figures," says Gary Sharp, 28, from Fairfax. "These teachers are all approachable. I find myself chatting about some aspect of chemistry for a half hour when my original question may have taken only a minute to answer."

"It's easy to like these professors," another student said. "Most of them aren't too old and they relate well. They're athletic and mix well with college age students."

Dr. Robert E. Holmes, associate professor of chemistry, heads a department of 10 faculty members who have earned their doctorates. Almost all are under 40. At 56, Dr. Ambrose R. Nichols Jr., former Sonoma State College president, will return to teaching full-time in chemistry in the spring semester and will become the senior member.

"WE ALL HAVE different viewpoints," Dr. Holmes said, "But we talk about them and use these viewpoints to help each other. This is a major asset of the department's faculty."

Dr. Holmes, who is a physical chemist, also stated that the decision to make this a teaching department with a balanced research effort, not one which emphasized research, was made early, and the commitment to that decision is considered essential to a successful program.

"We've never added a member to our faculty who hasn't stayed, because we seek people with a certain kind of attitude: Teaching enhanced and supported by research."

"GENE (DR. Gene D. Schaumberg, associate professor of chemistry, and chairman of the division of natural sciences) and I started the chemistry major in 1956. We were faced with a building under construction and a quarter million dollar budget to outfit the chemistry section alone," Dr. Holmes related. "That was the start.

"We committed ourselves to the task with the belief that a smaller number of quality instruments was more vital than many inexpensive units. With sophisticated instruments, a student can push the level of an experiment much deeper and his understanding will be more profound."

Dr. Schaumberg, an organic chemist, says, "Students must think for themselves. We don't want them to perform just technical procedures. Science has synthesized the gene; life will be next. People must know what this means and decide whether it should be done.

"WE ARE ALL concerned with teaching," states Dr. Don Marshall, the department's analytical chemist. "The personal attention we can give students makes our department special.

"I don't want students to hesitate to see me. I have no formal teaching assignments on Wednesday, but I'm here. I enjoy what I do.

Dr. Marvin Kientz, biochemist, admits there are aspects of chemistry which, like portions of any field, can be drudgery if they are not made interesting. In his continued effort, he says, "I want to know what my students are getting out of classes, why they're having problems and what I can do to facilitate their learning; however, there are few shortcuts."

Dr. Nichols, a physical chemist, needs little introduction when it comes to teaching. He spent 22 years teaching chemistry at San Diego State before accepting an administrative post.

A QUOTATION from a former student in a recent issue of "Scientific American" attests to his teaching abilities: "I worked for eight years in the real world — as a lumberman, machinist, machine designer, loftsman — before returning to college. I turned chemist because Ambrose Nichols . . . was the best teacher I've ever met."

Dr. Dale Trowbridge, an organic chemist and one of the more recent faculty appointments, feels that, "We're fortunate. There is great rapport here.

"At larger schools students must motivate themselves to a large degree. Here, we can help a great deal. I teach a general chemistry course which has a large number of biology majors; consequently, we are trying to include more organic and biochemistry.

"I THINK MY students are now more concerned with their education than in the past. They're continually proving course content and demanding relevance . . . This is only my second year here, but the department offers me a great deal."

Dr. Les Brooks notes that the college owns an NCR Century 200 digital computer which is used extensively by faculty and students in chemistry.

Dr. Brooks says, "The chemist of today must master a growing volume of complex mathematical principles and theories. Our students take a number of courses in math, physics, and physical chemistry. By using computers and electronic calculators, sophisticated and laborious chemical calculations and statistical determinations are realizeable at the undergraduate level."

THE CHEMISTRY Department offers a course in applied computer programming. In addition, the department makes electronic calculators available to students at all levels. Students feel that "the combination of the digital computer and the electronic calculators provide a saving of time which is invaluable and allows for efficient use of their precious time."

The comments by Dr. David Eck, organic chemistry, Dr. Vincent Hoagland, biochemistry, and Dr. Douglas Rustad, inorganic chemistry, continue in the same vein.

Motivation brings most of the faculty to the campus daily, whether they are formally teaching that day or not. Evening preparation, research, faculty goverhance, curriculum development, committtee work, community service and other commitments all add to the contribution each faculty member makes.

NOT ONLY IS the faculty active academically, but it is athletically active as well.

Dr. Rustad was one of the prime distance runners in the country several years ago, and still competes in local races. He, and other professors like Drs. Brooks, Marshall, Trowbridge, and Kientz, manage to get in some running or basketball during the week. Dr. Schaumberg is one of the better basketball players on the SSC campus.

The sports activity is a minor point, but a definite part of the picture for it provides an additional interaction of faculty and students.

SINCE 1965, the Bachelor of Arts Degree in chemistry has been offered at the Sonoma State campus.

In addition, this year the college is offering the Bachelor of Science Degree in chemistry. This is the first degree of its type on the campus. It requires more course work in the chemistry major and has been sought by the faculty for several years since some 80 per cent of all chemistry graduates at SSC subsequently enroll in graduate programs in chemistry, allied sciences or professional fields.

The chemistry major in general pursues his professional training. As one student puts it, "Who would enroll in such a demanding program just to get a college degree? A chemistry degree is neither a convenient nor easy way to get through college."

THE PRIMARY focus of the department has been to prepare students to do professional

The information is then used to determine the structure of complex molecules.

DR. ROBERT E. HOLMES, head of the Sonoma State College chemistry department calibrates an infra-red spectrophotometer used in the precise determination of the minute spacings between individual atoms in gaseous molecules. The department has stressed quality over quantity in the acquisition of laboratory instruments.

work related to or supported by chemistry. Hence undergraduate research is an integral requirement for the chemistry major.

This research orientation is shown by conducting the lab portions of both the first organic course and the advanced course in modern techniques in organic chemistry as project labs with the facilities available 40 hours per week. A similar attitude is prevalent in many of the upper division courses.

The B.A. and B.S. degree offerings allow the student flexibility in tailoring the depth and breadth of his program to meet his individual goals.

THE B.A. DEGREE is a four-year program designed to provide chemical training for those wishing to obtain technical work or work allied to chemistry such as pre-professional, medicine, electronics, food processing, chemical sales, patent, safety, library, or supervisory work in the chemical industries. This degree would provide minimal preparation for graduate study should the degree holder consider continuing education toward an advanced degree.

The B.A. pattern is especially useful for credential candidates and will offer an opportunity for them to be more broadly prepared in the natural sciences.

The B.S. degree is a four-year program designed to provide an adequate and strong chemical training needed by candidates desiring to work as chemists in industrial and governmental laboratories or desiring to enter graduate programs in chemistry leading to an advanced degree. The degree is built up from the fundamental requirements of the B.A. degree coupled with more intense training in particular specialization areas.

ONE HUNDRED twenty-eight units are required for completion of the B.S. program. Since the program only requires four additional units overall, less freedom is available for choice of electives. This does not detract from the major, in that students electing this major are clearly planning for the future demands of graduate school.

The department's offerings are varied and highly professional. In the 1971-72 catalog, there will be 37 different offerings under the chemistry heading, including general introductory courses, specialized advanced topics and independent student research. Students encounter all phases of physical, organic, biochemistry, inorganic and analytical chemistry, at introductory or advanced levels.

Modification currently in progress for the first and second year programs will introduce various fields of chemistry to the major earlier than in previous years.

"WE WANT TO introduce the physical principles of chemistry early, while including analytical, organic, and biochemistry and, to a degree, the usual topics of general chemistry," Dr. Holmes said.

A special accelerated general chemistry course, 125AB, involves three hours of lecture, a problem session and six hours of lab weekly. It includes the introductory aspects of quantitative analysis, physical chemistry and instrumental analysis.

This course is so concentrated that science majors can bypass the analytical chemistry course.

THE OTHER general chemistry course, 115AB, with its high involvement of biology students, has less emphasis on physical chemistry and more stress on organic and biochemistry.

All faculty members agree there is a great deal of effort which students must make in this program. Such items as atomic structure, elements, bonding, but to name a few, must be understood at the start.

Chemistry majors work hard — they have long hours.

The discussion of, and solution to, environmental problems are of particular interest to the department and its students.

THIS YEAR in Chemistry 102, a course for non-science majors, stress is placed on methodology and the importance of chemistry in the environment. Besides learning about atomic structure, chemical bonding, acids, proteins and carbohydrates, students are shown how chemistry relates to drugs, over-population, food additives and pollution.

In 1970, a course entitled "Pollution and the Environment" was initiated. The new catalog will list it as: "A study of the problems of air, water, and land pollution with special emphasis on chemical analysis."

Another course, "Chemistry and the Environment" will look at the effects of insecticides, phosphate detergents, mercury and lead compounds on the ecology of North America and the earth, including the conflict over economic advantage versus ecological effects.

SPECIALIZED offerings include topics such as applied nuclear and radio-chemistry and an electronics class which explores basic circuit theory, operation of tube and transistor devices, analysis of typical circuits used in electronic scientific instruments. In fact, one of the surprises which greet students at SSC is the sophisticated equipment at their disposal.

"I have talked with science students at larger schools and only in the senior or graduate years are they accorded the opportunity to work with precision equipment. Here we can use any equipment, once we're checked out." This is the remark of a chemistry major who admits to being wary about attending this small state college.

He continued to say, "I wouldn't switch now."

REPRESENTATIVE instrumentation includes: Ultraviolet, infrared, atomic absorption, and X-Ray spectrometers for the determination of molecular structures, the identification of trace or large quantities of a myriad of chemical substances, and the precise determination of the concentration of the gamut of trace pollutants to "pure" products; fraction collectors and gas chromatographs for the separation and identification of mixtures of various chemicals; programmable WANG electronic calculators and an NCR Century 200 campus computer to aid in the rapid reduction of data and accurate calculation of results.

Because of their arduous schedule, chemistry majors have been accused of being different from other students. Not so, say students and faculty alike.

Most students were concerned about the Cambodian decision, but felt it was a political issue. They established priorities and did what they could in their time allotment. Their educations are vital to them, and they were determined to continue their courses.

DR. KIENTZ notes, "Perhaps our students are not as socially sensitive as students in other disciplines. They don't think about these problems as much. They're working too hard.

"As we have designed the program, with the heavy doses of chemistry, math, and physics, our students find it difficult to crusade extensively for social issues and also continue to get a proper science education."

One of the worries of the faculty is teaching load. In comparison to other institutions nationally, according to Dr. Holmes, a 12-unit teaching load in chemistry is high. Not merely lecture time is involved. Nearly every class includes laboratories which demand a great deal of preparation.

The heavy teaching load was criticized by a National Science Foundation consultant who analyzed the department: "The contact hour teaching loads are too high in the department . .. it is a load that is not conducive to the best teaching.

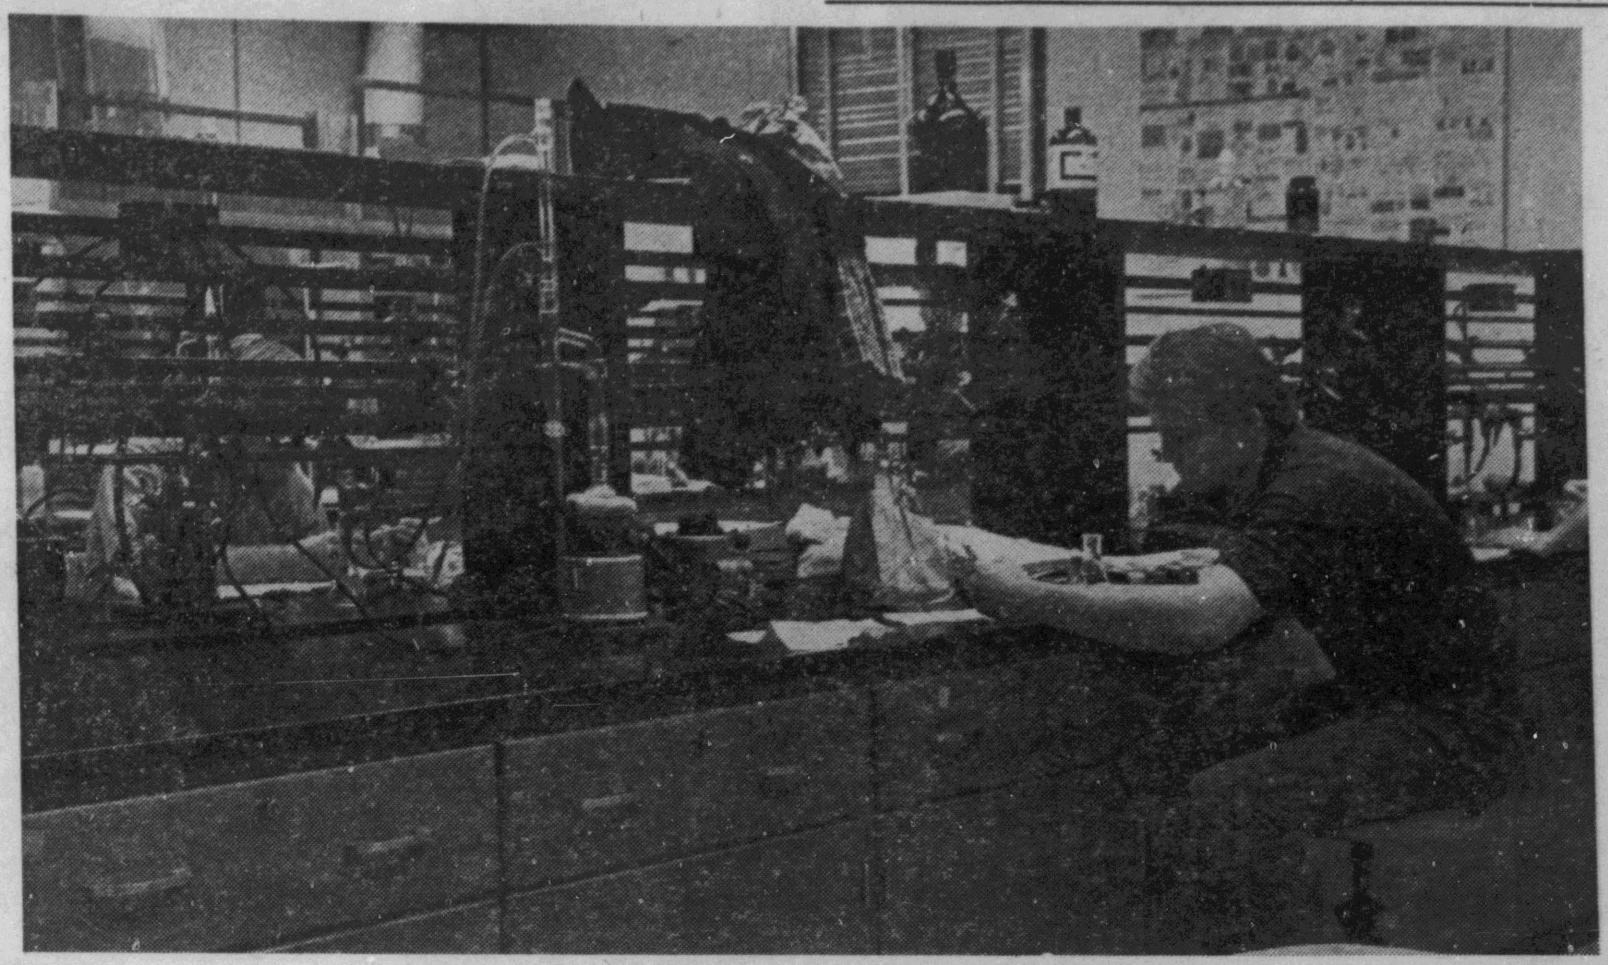
THE JOB MARKET for potential graduates fluctuates. These fluctuations are constantly reflected in the character of the departmental program.

While at the PH. D. level there is currently a surplus of pure chemists due in large part to a deflated space industry, there is a critical need for chemists with two to four years of training. There is also a need for environmental scientists at all levels of training who have an appreciation for physical solutions to environmental problems. It's a multi-faceted problem for chemists, biologists, physicists, economists and social scientists.

A crucial problem facing the department is space limitation. With all other sciences, plus art and mathematics housed in the same structure, space is at a premium, and future growth of the department will soon be dependent on the realization of more facilities.

THE CONTINUOUS task of the department is to upgrade the curriculum to keep it at a high professional level. Now that the department offers the B.S. as well as the B.A. program, scheduling for evaluation and accreditation by the American Chemical Society uses established minimum standards to evaluate the quality of a degree program. Recognition by the ACS and approval of the B.S. program will constitute significant national professional confidence in the department and its program.

Once the B.S. degree is approved by the ACS, the department will complete plans for the institution of a Masters Degree in chemistry. Although originally planned for 1971-72, the department will delay the initiation of the Masters program until a new Physical Science-Mathematics Building becomes a fact.



STUDENT ED WILLIAMS works "after hours" on an individual project in the Sonoma State College introductory organic chemistry laboratory, indicative of the special dedication and enthusiasm that both faculty and students in the department seem to generate.

Bob Fuller: 2 Hats, 2 Homes

Hospital Administrator Also Hard-Working Therapist

By DON KEOWN

A woman whose activities were once severely restricted by a back problem now not only performs her work as a housewife without fear or difficulty, but also pursues such sports as skiing and horseback riding.

A middle-aged woman immobilized by a stroke who had to be helped from place to place now transports herself, extremely mobile with the assistance of only a cane.

A victim of rheumatoid arthritis has increased the dexterity of his once crippled hands to the point where he now works at a job that requires the driving of a bus. And in the process, has replaced depression with an almost euphoric enthusiasm for life.

ALL THESE, and more, credit their progress in their struggles to resume normal living, despite their ailments, in part to the physical exercise programs they have undertaken at the direction of Bob Fuller, registered physical therapist.

Fuller is a man who not only wears two hats, but also has two "homes."

At Center Medical and Rehabilitation Hospital in Kentfield, he has been the administrator for the past two years and the head of its physical therapy program for eight years.

AND, ALSO IN Kentfield, he is the owner and proprietor of Bob Fuller's Conditioning Therapy gymnasium in the Redwood Medical Building at 1125 Drake Boulevard.

Both places have afforded Fuller with opportunities to develop his own philosophy and approaches for physical therapy work with those with physical problems.

Center Medical and Rehabilitation Center boasts on its staff four full-time physical therapists (in addition to Fuller) and two full-time occupational therapists.

"THIS IS A very large force of therapists for a 99-bed hospital," Fuller points out.

And he adds: "I think we are unique in the Bay Area in offering such an extensive therapy program. This is possible because we are so specialized. Center Medical Hospital is devoted to internal medicine and to rehabilitation."

At his private gymnasium, too, Fuller works with a good many people who are fighting back against ailments and injuries that threaten to make them invalids or partial invalids.

HE ESTIMATES that approximately one-fifth of his clients come to the gymnasium with rehabilitation as their

It makes no difference what cuased the bag to melt on your husband's suit and stained it. The problem is . . . what can be done about it.

Unless you are an expert in stain removal, I suggest you do not attempt to remove the stain yourself. The plastic stain may be removed by your drycleaner. The stained area should be soaked in perchlorethylene, brushed, then drycleaned.

A warning should be given when perchlorethylene is mentioned. It is highly toxic, especially when hot. Avoid inhaling the fumes and use it in a well-ventilated room. "Perc" is not flammable, but it is safest when used by your drycleaner.

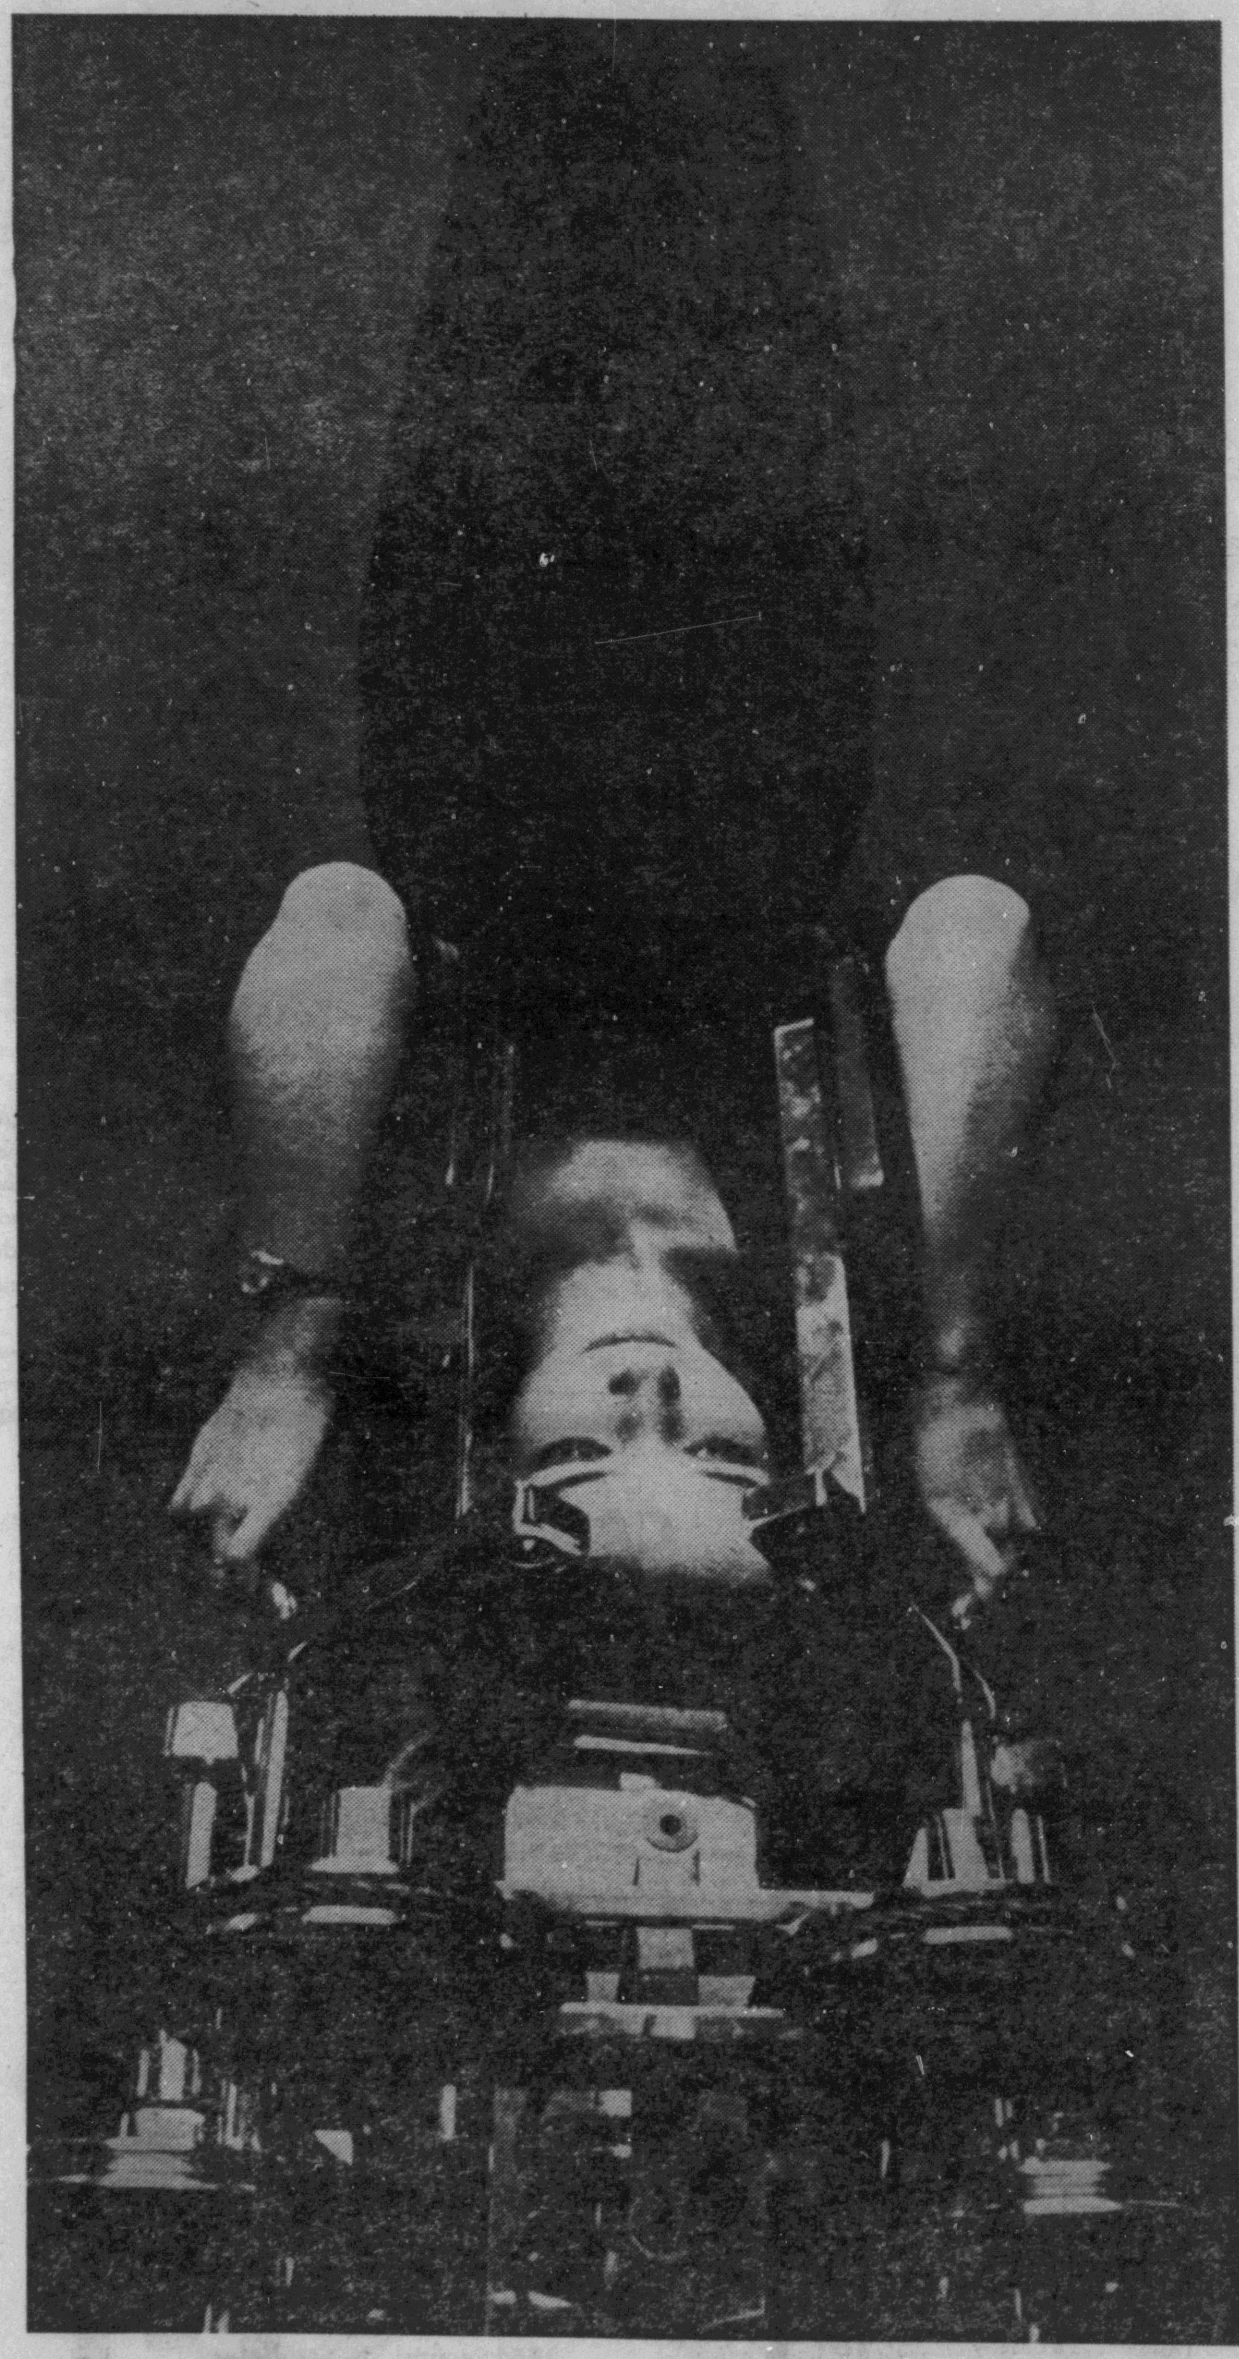
Exercise Plays Major Role In Balanced Recovery Program From Physical Disorders



THIS PHOTOGRAPH taken at an unusual angle by Independent-Journal photographer Bob Hax shows Erica Young lying on one of the exercise benches at Bob Fuller's Conditioning Therapy gym and using the special chest machine to work the pectoral muscles of her chest. principal reason for being there.

And among the other 80 per cent who come for conditioning, there are, Fuller adds, many who also have physical disorders that they hope will benefit from the exercise. "Sometimes they are not even aware of their problems," therapist Fuller adds.

Most of those with physical problems come to him in search of help because they have heard of his work from others who feel they have benefitted from his assistance, Fuller says.

BUT NO SMALL number come at the recommendation of their physicians, he adds.

Fuller stresses that he, and other physical therapists in Marin, work in close cooperation with the medical profession.

For instance, if the patient has a physical imparment and is not in the gymnasium at the instructions of his doctor, Fuller invariably contacts the physician for approval before proceeding with the exercise-therapy program.

FULLER IS the president of the Marin Registered Physical and Occupational Therapy Society of between 35 and 40 members, whose objectives, along with maintaining the high standards of the profession, include the fostering of close cooperation with the physicians and their organizations.

Fuller says his choice of physical therapy as a vocation was a natural one "since I had always been interested in and associated with athletic endeavors, especially physical education and training for sports."

Physical therapy he sees as simply "a fefinement" of that earlier interest.

EXCEPT FOR some experience as a physical education instructor in schools, he has devoted his adult life to gymnasium management and physical conditioning and therapy.

The new duties as administrator of Center Medical and Rehabilitation Hospital which he took on two years ago in no way interfere with his dedication to physical therapy and conditioning, he says. "In fact, it enables me to carry on the therapy program exactly the way I feel it should be handled."

He brings to the hospital and to his own gymnasium 20 years of experience in physical fitness, plus training at the D. T. Watson School of Physical Therapy, affiliated with the University of Pittsburgh in Pennsylvania.

HIS GYM employs a staff of eight. He has been the owner there for two years, and prior to that he managed other gyms.

Physical therapy in a non-hospital setting, he believes, is often more effective with some patients. "They find the surroundings more normal and are therefore less inhibited."

What kinds of patients come in for therapy?

"THE VAST numbers are the victims of the kinds of chronic diseases and disabilities that seem to abound in our count Fuller says. "The arthriti the post-strokes, the bad ba and shoulders, etc."

A STATIONARY bicycl exercise to her arthritic resistance of the pedc controlled.

Therapy for those afflic with back and shoulder pr lems is generally relativ simple in comparison to severe arthritics and to th who have suffered strokes, adds.

Fuller adds that his repu tion for the treatment of b and joint problems has brou sufferes from not only ot ment. The approach must be a balanced one."

While the Fuller gymnasium is a well-equipped one with exercise devices, large whirlpool baths, sauna, steam room, showers and lockers, Fuller emphasizes the absence of "gimmicky machines and quacky methods."

He is sharply critical of the practices by which he feels some health spas, physical fitness gymnasiums and reducing salons have brought public distrust upon the whole field.

FOR INSTANCE, he says, the contracts required by state law to inform the customer as to his entitlement for his money should be used for the protection of the client, not to bind him to the gym.

"Anytime conditions make it impossible for the patient to continue the exercise course, such as a move from the community, or he feels dissatisfaction with the program or his progress, he should be promptly released from the contract terms," Fuller says. "And an appropriate refund should be made."

On the other hand, Fuller believes, the gymnasium proprietor and therapist should strive faithfully to comply with each and every provision of the contract.

FOUR-FIFTHS OF the clients at Bob Fuller's Conditioning Therapy gymnasium are there primarily, not to repair the ravages of illnesses or injuries, but to lose weight or to improve their general physical fitness.

A key element for the success of such programs, Fuller says, is that the exercises and attendant procedures be selected for the specific needs of each individual client.

And such a program, properly conceived and faithfully followed, might well prove the ounce of prevention that would necessitate the therapy that others must undertake to remedy or partially correct the damages done by maladies.

"THE PHYSICALLY fit person is just naturally less susceptible to serious disease and injury," Fuller says.

That is one of the principal points made by the book, "Skiers' Exercise Manual," that Fuller co-authored with Dr. Paul Davidson, specialist in internal medicine and arthritis.

The physically fit skier who has built up his stamina and improved his flexibility and coordination is much less likely to return from the slopes with a leg or arm in a cast, they stress.

THIS SAME premise holds true for all of life's activities, Fuller adds.

And if, despite those precautions or because you failed to take them, some crippling ailment still shackles your body or limbs, then you can still fight your way back to a nearly normal way of living through a balanced program of therapy in which expertly chosen exercises play a fundamental role.

That is the philosophy and the policy of Bob Fuller, both at Center Medical and Rehabilitation Hospital and at his conditioning and therapy gymnasium.

points in the Bay Area but from the farther corners of the Far West as well to his gymnasium and to the Kentfield hospital for his expert guidance and evaluation. The ages vary from 8 to 80.

Fuller emphasizes the need for a balanced therapy program in helping such people.

"PROPER, carefully chosen exercise is important," he says. "But the emotional and social aspects of the problem must be considered as well in the treat-

Sydney — City For The Epicure

The Travel Pages

Note to Gourmets: Don't exclude the Australian metropolis of Sydney from your roster of cities whose culinary treats should be explored. You might be surprised at the variety and the quality of its gourmet restaurants.

And there are plenty of places to please persons of simpler tastes who merely want good food in interesting surroundings.

According to American Airlines, whose 707 Astrojets arrive there three times weekly from Hawaii, more than 1,100 restaurants are listed in the Sydney classified telephone directory.

Many are recognized as top-rank. Many specialize in French, Indonesian, Greek, Indian, German, Chinese, Spanish, Japanese and Italian cuisine.

Seafoods are excellent. Oysters, an expensive delicacy in many parts of the world, are abundant. They also are delicious and inexpensive, and are offered as appetizers in nearly every restaurant.

THE PRAWNS are enormous, succulent and — like the oysters — inexpensive.

Lobster, too, is excellent. And every menu offers a wide choice of fish — including, in season, burrumundi caught in Queensland and scallops from Tasmania.

Sydney has many unlicensed restaurants to which patrons may bring wine. There is an extensive variety of first-rate and inexpensive Australian wines, known by the type names used in Europe: Riesling, hock, Moselle, red and white Burgundy, Chablis, sauternes, claret, rose and champagne.

Wine-making is a major industry in Australia, and the drinking of wine with meals has become customary.

Several restaurants are of more than passing interest to visitors.

The Argyle Tavern, for instance, is in the old historic Rocks area of the city, located in a convict-built store erected in 1828. It was remodeled a few years ago as an early 19th Century colonial inn. Waitresses wear mob caps and long dresses, and waiters wear tunics and knee-breeches.

Whole lambs and pigs are roasted on a huge spit, and a house specialty is steak-and-kidney pie served in an earthenware dish for two persons. A trio plays for dancing, and patrons are urged to join in the singing of Australian bush ballads.

AN EVENING at the Argyle is a lighthearted and enjoyable one.

For elegant dining, there is the Chiswick Gardens restaurant in a beautiful old colonial house in Woollahra. It offers an international cuisine.

The Coachmen, at Redfern, is in a convict-built house. It has six dining rooms, and an area for dining outdoors in the summer (which is the season here now, exactly opposite from North America's winter). There is dancing every evening.

The restaurant has a wine museum in its cellars which patrons are invited to inspect. Selections can be made from the more than 2,000 vintage wines stored there.

ANOTHER restaurant located in a convict-built house is The Coach Inn, at Parramatta North.

Sydney's kosher restaurants include The Folk Center and The Eden, both at Woollahra. The Eden specializes in continental kosher.

The Paddington area — a sprawl of narrow streets and densely packed terrace houses, many decorated with fine iron "lacework" like that in the French Quarter of New Orleans — has some excellent continental restaurants, including The Hungry Horse, Patrick's, D'Arcy's and La Bodega.

Kings Cross is an area of nightspots and restaurants, among them Les Girls, featuring Australian food and an all-male revue; Mother's Cellar, which whips up pancakes of all kinds, and Nagoya Sukiyaki, with authentic Japanese decor and food.

VISITORS WHO are more interested in sightseeing than in seeking out gourmet meals should keep Cahill's in mind. This is a chain of low-priced restaurants, each with a distinctively different decor and atmosphere. There are seven of the restaurants and ten Cahill's self-service buffet-bistros. Nearly all are licensed and provide a selection of Australian wines.

The food is good, varied and priced at reasonable levels.

Britain Discards The Bob And Tanner

As of this week British slang lost two words, ''bob'' and "tanner," and British currency had no shilling for the first time in 484 years.

After centuries of staunch resistance to the decimal point, the British finally succumbed.

After a couple of millenia of experimentation with such terms as sceats, stycas, nobles, crosses, crowns, sovereigns, groats, guineas, broads, bonnet pieces, ryals and angels, the British are finally settling down to use nothing but pounds and pence. The official reason is to facilitate foreign trade.

THE BOB OR shilling will cease to exist and the "tanner" or sixpence will only linger on borrowed time until all vending machine makers have figured out how to convert to the new coins.

However, first-time American visitors to Britain will probably find the change a relief since the pound now has 100 pennies like our dollar.

The picturesque British coinage is going fast.

The shilling or "testoon" was made a British coin in the reign of good King Henry VII in 1487. It is being taken out of service in 1971.

The farthing was removed from currency in 1961 when it finally became too small in value to buy anything.

The 10 shilling note and the half crown have been withdrawn from currency in the past two years.

Remaining shilling coins are the same value and size as the new pence coins and will be used interchangeably until worn out.

THE BRITISH government is spending 15 million dollars in advertising alone to acquaint the British with their new coins.

The pound won't change and will still be worth $2.40, but since old King Offa in the year 775 chopped a pound of silver into 240 pieces, a pound has had 240 pennies. Now it will have 100. Each will be worth 2.4 cents.

There will be five pence, 10 pence and 50 pence coins. These have been gradually put into circulation for the past two years to replace the shilling and two shilling coins and the 10 shilling note.

The 50 penny piece retains that British zest for originality. It has flat sides, not six or eight or 12, but seven.

ANOTHER RELIC will go as the "d" is dropped. For many centuries, the Roman initial for "Denarius" has stood for penny.

British shoppers will have to learn to handle three brand new coins.

The new coins are a two penny coin (4.8 cents), a one penny coin (2.4 cents, and not to be confused with the old penny). The old monster penny will continue to open public toilets until someone figures out a better solution. There will be a new half-penny coin, worth 1.2 cents.

Pounds will be written L1 as in the past.

THE EXPERIENCED U.S. traveler to Britain may be daunted by the thought of mastering the new money. The British are just as puzzled. But the new traveler will find the money much easier, since it is divided into tens and hundreds.

If you're going to Britain this year, write for a simple conversion sheet from the British Tourist Authority, 680 Fifth Avenue, New York City, 10019.

PAT WARD OF British Overseas Airways Corp. points to one of the new 10-pence pieces that have replaced the old two-shilling coin in the United Kingdom's monetary system. At bottom right is the 50-pence piece.

An Original Thinker With Enticing Ideas

THE LONG ROAD WEST, a Journey in History, by Frank Morley; Dial, 416 pages, $7.95. Reviewed by Larry Kramer.

In reviewing a work of nonfiction this reviewer's standard technique is to begin with three questions, one of the author and two of the reviewer:

I expect the author to tell me what he is setting out to do, and then I am obligated to judge whether he has done it and at what level of competence, and finally, whether it was worth doing. In applying this tripartite yardstick to "The Long Road West" I struck out on the first question, but still felt the second and third measures had to be carefully considered.

Frank Morley is fascinated by roads. He's written an earlier book about "The Great North Road," the Roman road in England. His history begins with an anecdote about El Camino Real in San Mateo, Calif.

From this beginning at the Western edge of the North American continent, he sets out to see how civilization got here from the eastern edge of the Mediterranean. I took him so seriously at first that I fretted about the absence of a map anywhere in the book. Who ever heard of a history of anything so geographical as a road without a map to give the reader his bearings?

To make things worse I kept wanting Morley to be consistent. He kept turning north, south and even back east, when his title said plain as day that the book was about "The Long Road West." The only thing that kept me from putting the book down in disgust was that it fascinated me.

After a while I accepted the idea that Morley was only using the "road" simile as a device to let him explore ideas that turned him on. And those ideas were many and varied. He cut a broad swath through history. He was interested in the fact that each of Solomon's trade treaties brought with it a strange god. He noted that the Greeks and the Romans looked at athletics quite differently, and further that Paul must have been an athlete because his epistles are sprinkled with allusions to sports.

From the classical era through the rise of Christianity and its conflict with Mohammedanism to Spain's rise and fall in the New World, Morley led me a merry chase. But then the revelation came. I began to feel I liked the man.

His research isn't original, but he thinks originally and he has a critical eye for the best published material in each period, and he's not afraid to put his opinion on the line. I found myself going to the library shelves to renew acquaintances with old historian friends, and to meet new ones.

Morley's a refresher and an introducer. Better, he's an enticer.

I recommend "The Long Road West" for dipping into. Morley reminds me of that literate cowboy, Gene Rhodes. His writing leaves you with the feeling that you'd really enjoy sitting 'round a campfire with him discussing "cabbages and kings" until the dawn cried stop.

Lisa Hobbs Calls New Kind Of Woman

LOVE AND LIBERATION by Lisa Hobbs; McGraw-Hill, 159 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by Barbara Hosmer.

While recognizing that all women live in a male-created world, noted journalist Lisa Hobbs sees changes so radical as to constitute a revolution in women's lives in America.

With the whole traditional woman's role of producing large numbers of babies being challenged, even by government policy, woman as traditionally defined may have already become oblolete.

A new kind of woman must emerge now, contends Mrs. Hobbs in her new book, "because woman has gained no corporate strength in modern society, she faces the fundamental problem of her very existence." Shorn of her total child-producing and rearing role, she has not been trained or encouraged toward any other.

Women are realizing this, says Mrs. Hobbs, and re-defining themselves, breaking down the "false concepts of sex roles that have limited the destinies of men as well as women."

Marriage as traditionally circumscribed has to go, states the author, herself married happily to a "liberated man" for 19 years and the mother of two children. New less restrictive marriage styles with freedom for wide choices of out-in-the-world activity must replace it, she says.

An avowed Feminist who for 20 years has been a working-press reporter, Lisa Hobbs documents the crippling conditioning that women are given as children through home attitudes and especially by the education system in a brief but effective chapter of the book.

She also pounces on pronouncements of what is "masculine" and "feminine," citing anthropologists' findings that much of what is considered manly or womanly in one culture may be reversed in another. But she believes that there is a firm and critical sex difference, chromosomatically based, that is "an integral part of a person's totality."

Mrs. Hobbs describes the meaning this difference will have on the behavior of men and women and in the society to come. She adds that there are no bystanders in any revolution and "the coming revolution in the world of women will be no exception." There is a deep antagonism between the sexes now and it must be brought to the surface and examined before a new psychology of male and female relationships can come about, the author says.

And meantime women will have to fight for every inch to bring the changes that will allow them to find worthwhile places in the world, she believes.

Readable throughout, sometimes amusing, this brief book stresses humanity while it bluntly asks and discusses the basic questions about the future of men and women as people in a threatened world.

Sad And Bloody Record Of Red Man's Subjugation

BURY MY HEART AT WOUNDED KNEE by Dee Brown; Holt, Rinehart and Winston, 447 pages, $10.95. Reviewed by Bryce W. Anderson.

"So tractable, so peaceable, are these people," wrote Christopher Columbus to his Spanish sovereigns, describing the Caribs of the West Indies, "that I swear to your majesties there is not in the world a better nation."

Within a decade, whole tribes of the Caribs had been destroyed by the Spanish interlopers.

From then until the last American Indians in what became the United States were cooped up on reservations, white man and Indian were never long at peace. And though the Canadians occasionally won a battle, they never won a war.

University of Illinois and an authority on the history of the western Indian tribes, has traced the last part of that long warfare — and the treaties and promises that accompanied it, broken one after another — in "Bury My Heart at Wounded Knee."

Many others have written the history of the western Indian wars, but none as Brown has done. He has written it as viewed from the Indians' side.

It makes an intensely sad and often infuriating tale.

It begins in the Southwest, with the American capture of what is now New Mexico, and the quickly following warfare with the Navahos. It follows the three decades of war interrupted only briefly by treaty-making, as the tribes of Great Plains, Rockies and Sierra were hunted, driven, and sometimes massacred.

It ends with the massacre at Wounded Knee on Dec. 29, 1890.

The title comes from what happened to Crazy Horse, the Sioux chief who commanded under Sitting Bull at the Battle of the Little Big Horn. After he was bayoneted to death at Fort Robinson, Neb., the Sioux were ordered to a new reservation on the Missouri River. But enroute there, a band including Crazy Horse's parents slipped away and carried the slain chief's heart to a secret burial place near the creek called Wounded Knee — the place, where, 13 years later, the last bloody chapter was written in the history of the subjugation of the red man.

On Growing Up In The Brazilian Jungle

WIZARD OF THE UPPER AMAZON by Manuel Cordova-Rios and F. Bruce Lamb; Atheneum, 204 pages; $6.95. Reviewed by Jeff Greer.

Simple folk tales sometimes can be peeled like the layers of an onion, for many levels of significance. This is such a book.

On the surface, an 84-year-old Peruvian and his American friend and translator have given the reader a sort of Gulliver's Travels of the shadowy, savage jungles of Brazil not far east of the icy backbones of the Andes.

Within are treasures to enthrall a nature-lover, enchant an anthropoligist and tear away some of the wraps of the world's present-day drug culture. It's all in starkly simple, poetic language; I cannot determine how much is due the translator and how much the original story-teller.

Cordova-Rios describes his capture as a teen-ager in the rubber forests of Brazil. He was taken by a savage, naked people with a taste for cannibalism, an intensely personal knowledge of jungle and human nature, and an elaborate ritual of using hallucinatory drugs for learning and social guidance.

The youthful rubber-cutter discovered, as he learned his captors' language, that he was being groomed to become chief of the small tribe. He was carefully instructed — and severely tested — in jungle survival skills, tribal lore and drug ritual.

The descriptions of communal "trips" on the brews made of jungle plants bear striking parallels to tales of LSD users, but also involve mass hallucinations in which all partakers heard and saw the same manifestations. Overtones of psychic power also are seen in the Peruvian's adventures, and in the tribal medical lore he later used.

Views, Satirical And Serious, Of Britain's Past And Present

By DON KEOWN

RUN IT DOWN THE FLAGPOLE by Bernard Levin; Atheneum, 451 pages, $8.95.

A CONCISE HISTORY OF THE BRITISH EMPIRE by Gerald S. Graham; Viking, 288 pages, $8.50.

To London journalist-columnist Bernard Levin, the 1960s were a d e c a d e in which his native land underwent almost unbearable strain.

Tugging at the English from one side was their long dedication to the past and preoccupation with tradition. Pulling from the other side was that thing called progress and modernism, with all its benefits, and all its deficts.

The result, in Levin's view, was a decade of contradictions, confusions, paradoxes and follies unmatched in all of Britain's long h i s t o r y. He describes it, with wit and bite, in his "Run It Down the Flagpole: Britain in the Sixties," a dazzling demonstration of English satirical humor at its most literate best.

It is all there—the Profumo-Christine Keeler scandal, the funeral of Winston Churchill, the rise of David Frost to superstar status, the Beatles, Mary Quant, the Great Train Robbery, the Moors murders, Harold Macmillan and Harold Wilson, the Mods and Rockers, Bertrand Russell and the Peace Marchers, the devalued pound, Malcolm Muggeridge, the Welsh and Scottish Nationalists, Prince Charles, Enoch Powell, and much, much more.

"In truth," writes Levin," it was a very uneasy decade, and in it the whirling fragments of the almost cosmic explosion that had broken up so many of Britain's traditional attitudes and beliefs, the tensions and contradictions of these most tense and contradictory years, produced a state of national weightlessness akin to that experienced physically by astronauts o u t s i d e the earth's gravitational force."

In this tug-of-war between the new and old Levin seems generally to regard the former as the lesser of two evils. Yet the 10-year record he recites appears to speak differently. For it was when the British left the protective shell of their traditionalism that they came in for their worst troubles.

Everyone who has had a frustrating experience with those monstrous monuments of modernity, the computers, can identify with Levin's assertion that:

"Gradually more and more people came to realize not only t h a t far too many organizations, institutions and commercial bodies had i n s t a l l e d computers long before they had either the trained staff or the back-up facilities to make them work harmoniously, but that the errors of omission and commission made by the compute rs or their fallible human operators, multiplied by the extreme difficulty and even, in some cases, impossibility of tracing and correcting such errors, had led by the end of the decade to a situation that was coming to resemble E. M. Forster's short story, 'The Machine Stops'."

What Levin seems to be saying of this struggle between modernization and presentation is that there are, indeed, two sides to every question, but both of them spurious, the latter, perhaps, just a bit more spurious than the former.

To the American traveler accustomed to regarding Britain not as a looneybin, but as a bastion of the old values and a sanctuary for the sane, this jaundiced and bleak overview from a native son will come as a jolt.

If a country where courtesy still prevails, where quiet can yet be found and where there remain pockets not yet made ugly by progress can produce this kind of reaction, one wonders at the trauma that might be risked if a similar analysis were attempted of our own mad land. True, to a d e g r e e Art Hoppe, Russell Baker and others have been making just such assessments, but none has yet has done so with quite the sustained and devastingly acerbic wit with which Levin pulls off his coup. Perhaps a nation that can produce a Joe McCarthy, an Agnew, a Wallace among its national leaders, to say nothing of an Oswald, a Birch and a Rubin among its fringe, is too easy a target to invite this kind of merciless dissection.

What Levin seems to have done is to caricature his country and countrymen. And while it is much in vogue these days in portrait work to show the warts as well as the features, Levin has chosen to draw in only the warts and to omit the features. Yet, as any visitor to England quickly discovers, there is still much national substance behind the blotches that Levin has selected to emphasize and to exaggerate.

The result is a rather glib and superficial picture of Britain in the 1960s that is very cleverly done and quite funny.

For an example of Levin's wit — and insight — turn to Page 429 as he looks ahead into the 1970s and sees a decade at l e a s t as bleak and problem-fraught as the one just completed:

"In the first months of the Seventies, a significant news item was received from the United States: Groups of students, tired of burning down their colleges in the name of peace, had decided to burn them down in the name of conservation; and since the pattern in Britain throughout the Sixties had, in such matters, followed at a fairly short interval that in the United States, it seemed likely that this would be the subject to occupy the extra-curricular activities of the students here too during the dawning decade."

Perhaps Levin is right — man, be he Englishman, American or Hottentot, has lost his way, and is blundering about ludicrously. And it is best to treat the whole sad spectacle as comedy or farce.

On second thought, leave out the Hottentot. He may just know who and where he is.

FOR A MUCH more sweeping — and much more serious — summarization dealing with Britain, pick up Gerald S. Graham's scholarly "A Concise History of the British Empire."

The University of London Rhodes professor of imperial history and author tells the story of the development of the British empire, of its glory days, and of its 20th Century adjustments to fit the new realities and the r i s i n g spirit of nationalism.

For some reason the illustrations — there are a good many of them — remind us of our schoolboy history texts. But Graham's writing is by no means pedantic. He does not hesitate, for instance, to insert his own learned opinions.

The much romanticized Sir Walter Raleigh, for instance, emerges as a rather foolish adventurer. The early Massachusetts C o l o n y was not a democracy, but rather a theocracy, rigorously exercised, ironically, by the same Puritans who had fled the old country to escape r e l i g i o u s persecution. And: "All the gennine love for India manifested over the years by so many British civil servants, soldiers and missionaries did not compensate for a lack of cultural sensitivity and an aloofness that sometimes hardened into arrogance."

And finally, a major British mistake was its efforts in the 10th Century to implant the Westminister parliamentary model, a product peculiar to the time and aptitudes of a particular people, upon other lands that had neither temperament, tradition or training to make a success of it. "Events of the last few years have demonstrated only too clearly that government is not a matter of abstractions open to solutions by formulas," writes Graham.

But despite the clarity of the demonstration, have we yet all absorbed its factuality?

Graham has done an excellent job of condensing, not by the simplest expedient of summarizing or outlining, but by giving us the "sense" of history rather than all its details. It makes for a superior book, not as entertaining, of course, as Levin's, but far from dull.

THE FRONTISPIECE for Gerald S. Graham's new book, "A Concise History of the British Empire," is this reproduction of "Britannia and Her Boys" from the Illustrated London News, 1885. It is one of 250 illustrations.

THE WALTER SYNDROME by Richard Neely; McCall, 207 p a g e s, $5.95. Reviewed by Don Keown.

With his fifth novel, a psychological thriller with a wallop, Kentfield writer Richard Neely apparently has hit a jackpot.

"The Walter Syndrome," published late last fall, appeared in a condensed version in Cosmopolitan magazine, has been selected as a Literary Guild alternate for March, has been sold for paperback reprint reproduction by New American Library, and appears headed for a movie that should rival "Psycho" as a producer of gooseprimples.

Neely sets his story in New York City, where he was born and where he worked for a time on the Journal-American. The period is the depression 1930s. To work for the classified advertising department of one of the papers comes a glib young man whose psychopatic hatred of women drives him to repeated murder and mutilation.

Neely employs three narrators — the killer Charles Walter, his a l t e r ego, meek, submissive, shy Lambert Post, and star reporter Maury Ryan who strikes up a strange relationship with the latter day Jack the Ripper that permits him to remain a step ahead of the police in the desperate effort to halt the savage slayings.

Neely sets his stage, both time and place, exceptionally well, and then spins a hard, uncompromising yarn that grips the interest. His final surprise is not totally original, but it nonetheless provides a smash climax.

Some New Books For The Juniors—

Man takes great pride in the complex computers and other machines that he has developed in recent history, often overlooking the fact that nature has produced far more complicated mechanisms for many, many centuries — the human body, or the human mind, for examples.

Or something so outwardly simple as the plant leaf.

Freelance writer James Poling makes it clear that while the leaf is a model of compact efficiency that puts to shame most man-made appliances, it is by no means as undistinguished as it sometimes appears.

And, ironically, while the leaf is absolutely essential to the survival of mankind, it encounters its worst enemy in man uproots the plants and trees upon which it grows, or shrouds it in lethal smog. Paradoxically, man can also be the great perpetuator of leaf-life when he plants and cultivates.

Poling's book is "Leaves: Their Amazing Lives and Strange Behavior" (Holt, Rinehart and Winston, $4.95) and it is a superior science book for 10, 11 and 12 years olds. It tells how leaves function, follows a leaf through its brief life cycle and differentiates among the various types of leaves. There are some photographs and drawings — not many — , but here Poling's well-done text is the attraction.

Some other new books for juniors:

"I ain't gonna study war no more . . . " goes the old song that has been endorsed by many of our young, overcome by revulsion for mankind's propensity for slaughtering his own. Yet there can be a genuine good in books about war, providing the strife is treated realistically, not romantically. Honestly presented, war is unglamorous and horrifying. McGraw-Hill has issued two new books in its high-class International Library series.

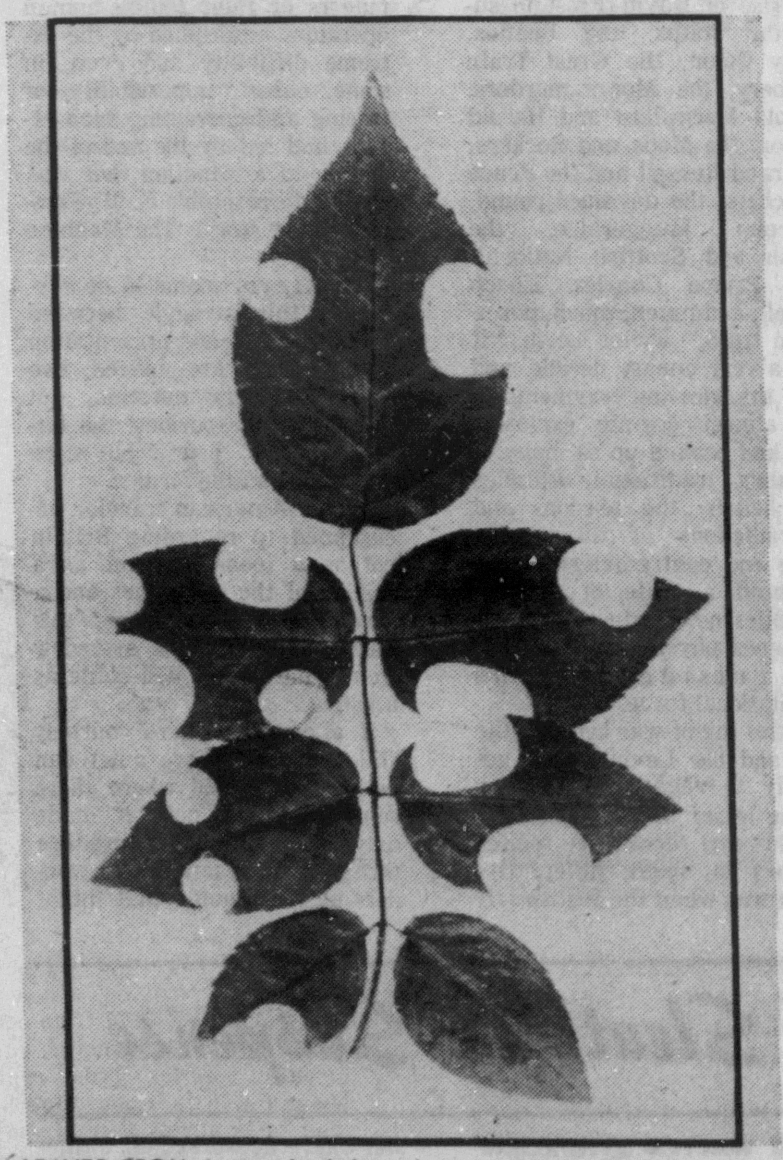
They are "Sea Fights Under Sail" by Christopher Lloyd and "Great Sieges" by Vezio Melegari, both splendidly and colorfully illustrated and handsomely designed. The Englishman Lloyd has met the historical honesty test better than the Italian Melegari, making clear the suffering strife at sea has inflicted upon sometimes heroic, sometimes terrified men. Melegari is less successful in bringing forth the famine and pestilence and maiming that have been the rotten product of sieges from Troy to Stalingrad and beyond.

"The Truth About Drugs" (Doubleday, $3.50 hardcover, $1.75 paperback) by Geoffrey Austrian, writer and editor, is an effort to appraise without hysteria or defensiveness today's drug scene. Austrian operates on the premise that there is no need for any special pleadings — that the facts about drugs speak for themselves. "Drugs must work together with something else — and that something is people," he writes. "The results of drugs seem to be as much 'people effects' as they are drug effects." While written primarily for the young, the book could serve as a primer or easy introduction for the parent or other older person anxious to acquire a better understanding of why drug usage has soared so suddenly.

Today's young people have far different interests and problems than the youth of previous generations. But one big bugaboo remains unchanged — money. There is always a need for more of that, and for better use of what is available. Mary Beery has written "Young Teens Money" (McGraw-Hill) covering how to earn, spend and save. It is in a question-and-answer format, and seems a bit simplistic. Worth the price of the book? Even with the help of Miss Beery's book, we can't advise you on that. For there's no price quoted on the dustjacket.

Literary figures with a few exceptions are "out of style" as subjects of biographies for young adults. Hilda White, nevertheless, has written "Truth Is My Country" (Doubleday, $5.95) that profiles eight New England authors — Hawthorne, Emerson, Thoreau, Stowe, Dickinson, Robinson, Millay and Frost. Unlike most such studies for juniors, Mrs. White gives in-depth attention to the literary contributions of her subjects along with the accounts of their personal lives. It is sound, unsensationalized biography.

Black author Jesse Jackson has written a novel about black boyhood, "The Sickest Don't Always Die the Quickest" (Doubleday, $3.95) that one suspects is totally honest and authentic. The problems of Stonewell Jackson and his friends such as Steeplehead and Sugarfoot, are, the reader is convinced, the very kind of problems many a black boy has faced — problems generally like those of any other youngster, and yet also to a degree peculiar to a race and its culture. It makes for an unusual story.



LEAVES FROM A rose bush have been especially fitted for a unique role in nature's grand scheme of things by rose-cutter bees who have neatly snipped them for use as building material in their nest. The illustration is from James Poling's "Leaves: Their Amazing Lives and Strange Behavior." (U.S. Department of Agriculture photo)

The Sullivan Reading Program made him a reading "all-star".

It's great to be a winner. No one wants to be a loser, yet many, many kids lose out every day in school because they can't keep up in the classroom. They just can't read adequately.

The Sullivan Reading Program has been making winners out of kids for years. In fact, more than five million school children have used nationally acclaimed Sullivan Reading Materials to improve their reading skills. Sullivan Reading Centers utilize these well-tested Sullivan materials to provide supplemental reading instruction for children at all school levels. (Ask your child's teacher about the Sullivan Reading Program.)

Sullivan Reading Centers offer personalized reading instruction and self-paced group instruction for your child. Classes are small, and a step by step Sullivan teaching program of reading success builds confidence while it improves your son or daughter's reading skills. He'll work at his own pace, competing only with himself, and he or she can come to the Center any day of the week or on Saturday morning. If he needs additional time to make sufficient progress during the course, he's given the extra time at no additional cost. Initial testing and all materials used by the students are also included in the $60 fee for the four-week course.

If your child's like most of our students, he'll enjoy the time spent at the Center as much as he does on the baseball diamond. He knows we believe in "all-stars," too.

YOU CAN RUSH the season in your garden with plants that begin their "Spring flowering" while the calendar still shows it to be winter. The India hawthorne or raphilepsis is one such. Here it is shown in use as a low, hedge-like planting, with its pink blossoms in bloom.

Plants For Early Color

Garden Page

In California the first signs of spring come early — often before winter is at its mid-point.

In many parts of the state, Marin included, the first blooms of spring come in January and February — it's common to go out one brisk day and there are buds opening on flowering quince, India hawthorne, the daphne.

One of the best bets for early color is flowering quince; the nice part is that they continue to bloom for several weeks. The colors are glorious additions to the garden — ranging from a snow white, through shades of pink and rose to deep red.

WHEN DAPHNE begins to bloom in late winter, it provides one of the most enjoyable shows in the garden world. Not only are the waxy pink blooms appealing to look at, but their fragrance is something out of this world.

The India hawthornes are as early as January in some California gardens. They produce handsome heads of pink-to-red blooms that are delicately scented. The fragrance isn't as pronounced as the bountiful color — the plants bloom and bloom, week after week.

LIKE OTHER early-flowering plants, India Hawthorne (Raphiolepis) has many uses in the landscape.

Your nurseryman can suggest planting ideas so that you can incorporate all the early-blooming specimens in your garden and enjoy their beauty year after year.

Azaleas and camellias are often considered spring blooming plants, but actually you can enjoy months of color from both — by judiciously selecting varieties. Certain types begin blooming in fall and some hit their peak at this time of year, while other varieties are still flowering in late spring.

Nurseries have azaleas and camellias in bloom now — and the colors will please the most discriminate taste. Shopping for the plants while they are in flower has its advantages, as you can select exactly the color you want to add to your garden.

A CHECKLIST FOR MARIN GARDENERS

Here is the Marin gardener's checklist for the coming week:

- Finish general dormant spraying before buds open.
- Set out artichoke plants for future crops. The bushes are attractive enough to be grown in the ornamental garden.
- Continue to plant camellias. They are in bloom in nursery containers and shopping for them while they are flowering is a fun experience for the entire family.
- The late winter is a good time to feed the lawn so that it will get off to a fast start when spring bows in.
- And if you haven't yet taken care of pruning your hydrangeas, do that, too, without further delay.
- Plant new roses while they are still available bareroot.
- Prune your fruit trees before new growth starts.

Ready to talk about DEPENDABILITY?

People often forget one important thing when buying their first washer. It's DEPENDABILITY. Consequently, they get to know the repairman pretty well. And that's expensive. With the second washer, it's different. Dependability comes first! And that's why a Speed Queen should be your No. 1 choice. Speed Queens are Designed and Built to be dependable . . . to give extra years of faithful service. We'd love to have you come in and say, "prove it."

Priced from $229 to $329

*LIFETIME WARRANTY ON STAINLESS STEEL DRUM

The Speed Queen stainless steel dryer drum is warranted for the life of the dryer by Speed Queen, A Division of McGraw-Edison Company. If the drum fails as a result of a manufacturing defect, it will be replaced. Labor charges incurred in the removal and replacement of the drum are the responsibility of the owner unless the one year warranty responsibility of the Speed Queen dealer applies.

This solid, non-perforated Stainless Steel tub is chip-proof, rust-proof and ideal for Durable Press fabrics.

*10-YEAR WARRANTY ON TRANSMISSION PARTS

Speed Queen washer transmissions consisting of the case, cover, rocker arm, link, crank gear, connecting rod, pinion and drive clutch are warranted for ten years from date of installation by Speed Queen, A Division of McGraw-Edison Company. If any of the above listed parts fail within the 10-year warranty period as a result of a manufacturing defect, they will be replaced. Labor charges incurred in the removal and replacement of such parts are the responsibility of the owner unless the one year warranty responsibility of the Speed Queen dealer applies.

A Warm Nook In The Kitchen

Wood Panels Soften Look

Women's Lib notwithstanding, the kitchen is considered a woman's domain, and it is where she spends a large part of her home time.

Kitchen decor reflects her personality and interests — or should.

In the past decade, the kitchen has been regaining its family orientation, much as it had in olden days when the wood range made it the coziest room in the house.

THIS ROOM has claimed a bigger share of the building and remodeling spotlight, too, with more emphasis on family living. In fact, kitchens are the No. 1 remodeling project, accounting for the highest dollar volume.

More attention is being lavished on kitchen conveniences and gadgetry, such as electronic ovens and ceramic top ranges. Even the ecology surge is felt, with the advent of garbage compactors.

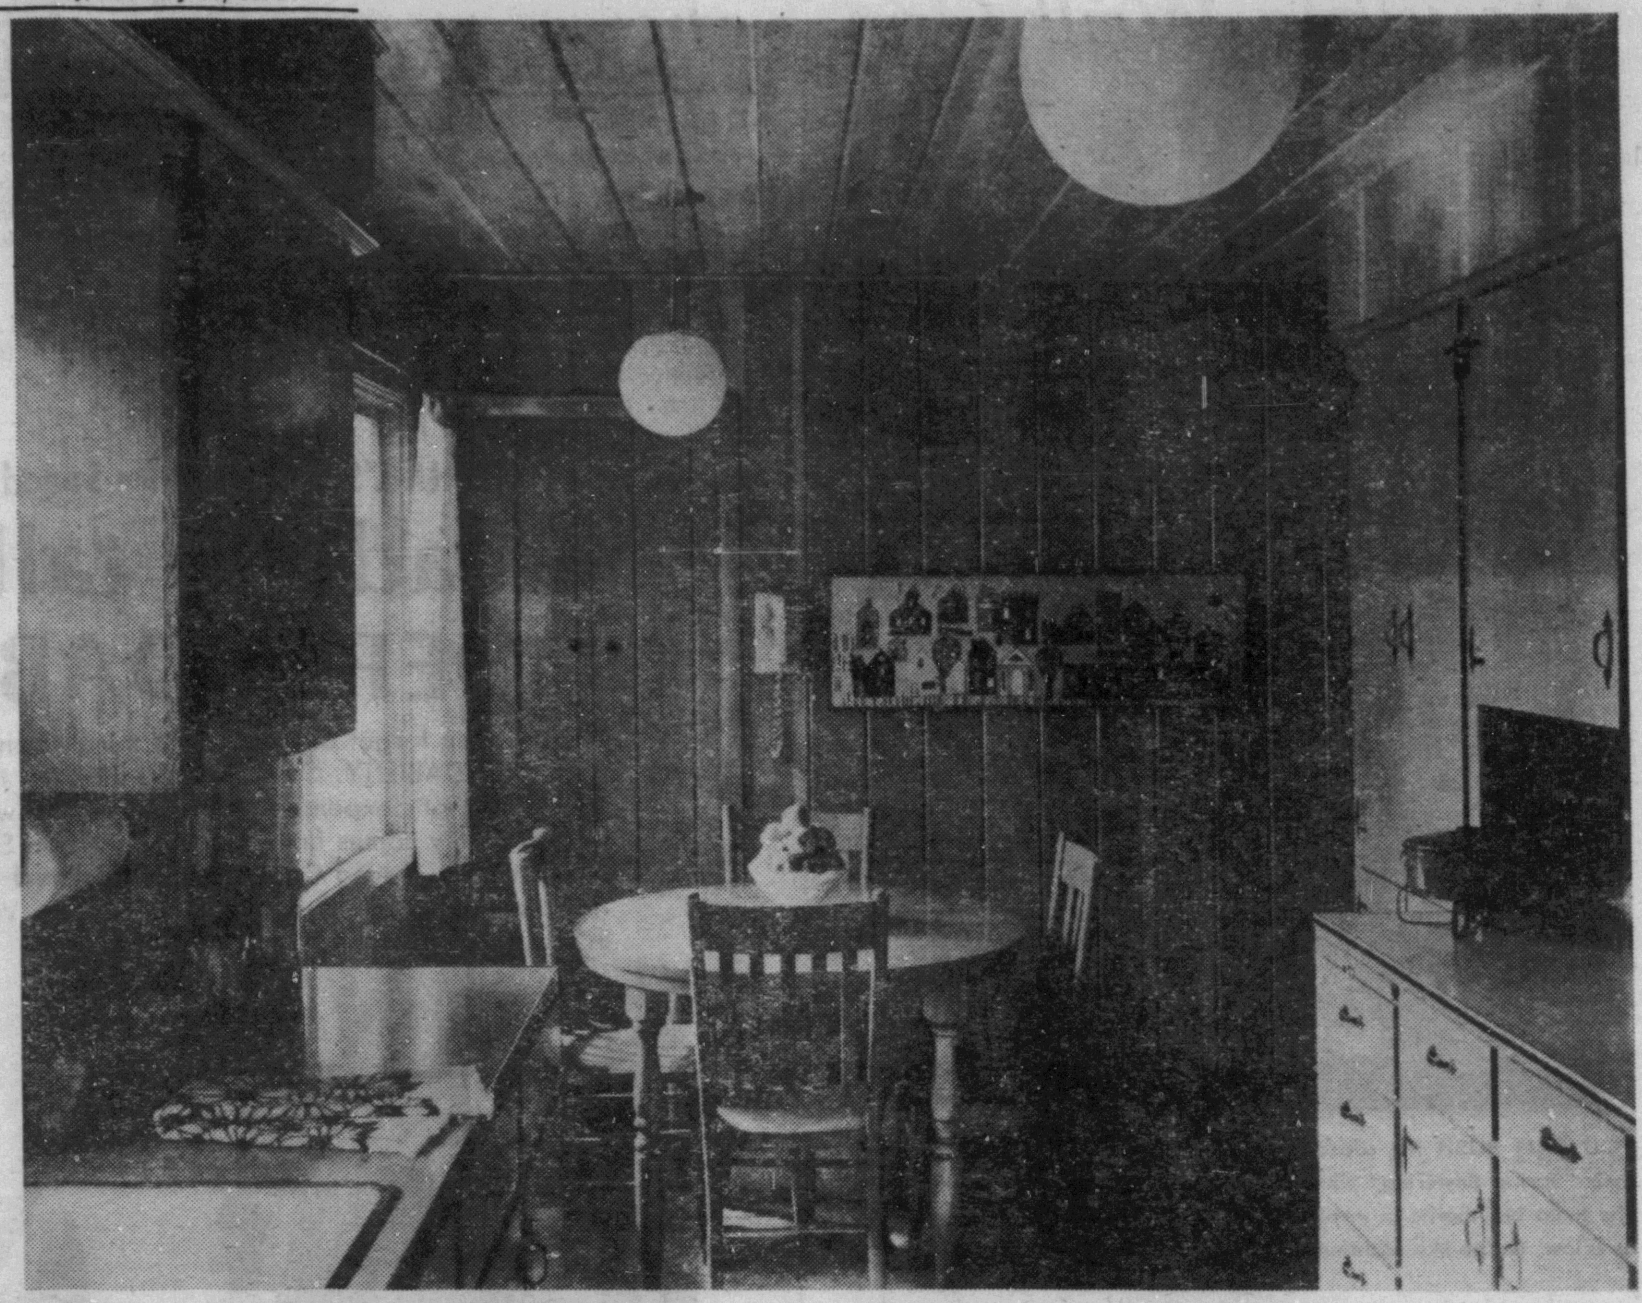
Often a kitchen renovation is more of a brightening than a major rebuilding, and this needn't be expensive.

ADDITION OF butcher block countertops or a new wall treatment of western wood paneling relieves the hard-surface look, yet is well within most family budgets, and can do wonders to improve the atmosphere of a kitchen.

One family with an older home added new life to the kitchen by paneling the ceiling and walls of the breakfast area with one-by-six -inch V-groove Douglas fir boards, finished clear to retain the warm color and grain of the wood.

Shelves in the wall were enclosed with doors of the same board paneling. Brightness was added with a large window in the eating area and new, white globe light fixtures.

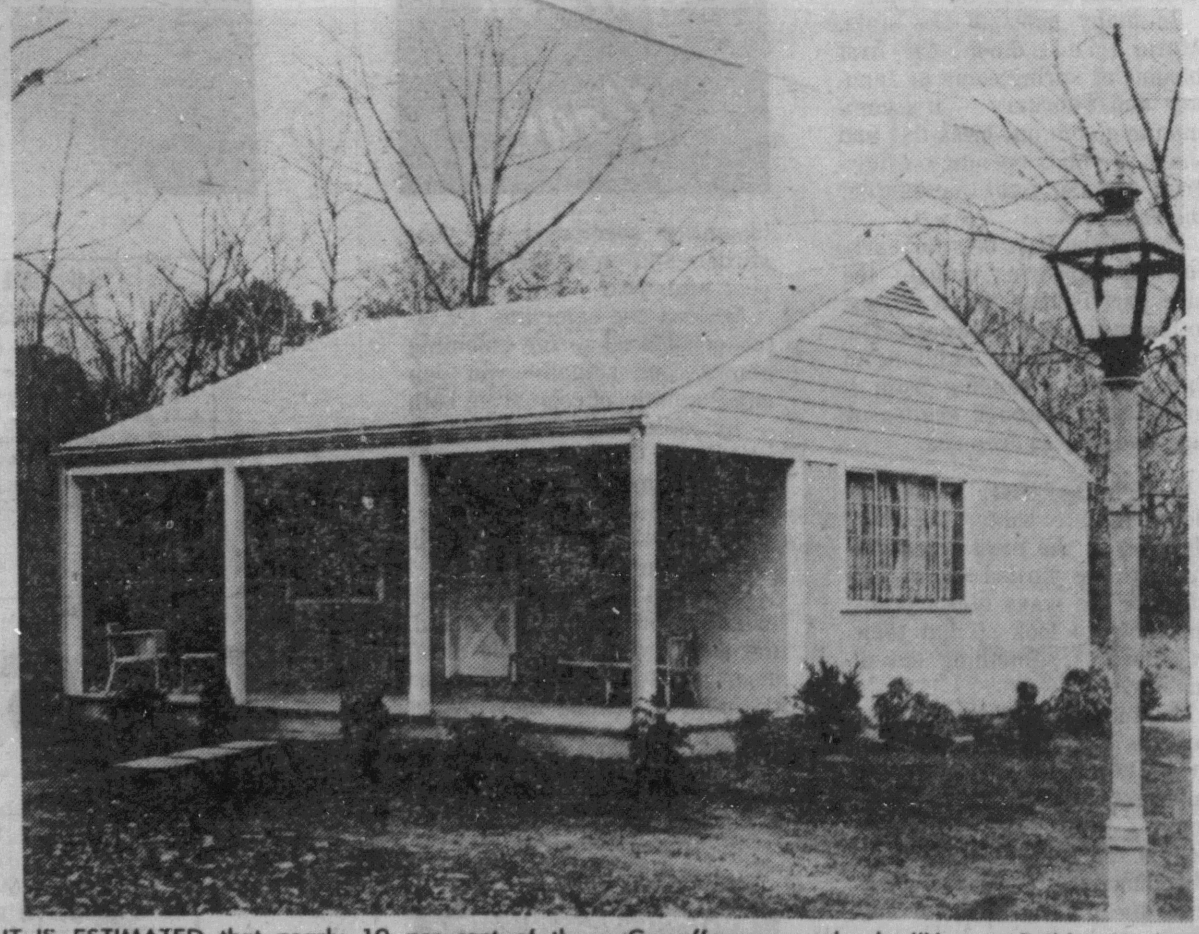
Another way to brighten the kitchen is by "going outdoors," adding a bay window with bench overlooking a flower garden, or sliding windows opening to a wood deck.



THE HIGHLY-ENAMELED kitchen is often too antiseptic. Offering a contrast is this warm nook brightened with one-by-six-inch V-groove Douglas fir paneling on the walls and ceiling. Lacquer, varnish or paste wax finish simplifies the cleaning. The eye-catching artwork offsets the strong verticals of the paneling. Table and chairs are painted green to add color accent.

(Western Wood Products Association photos)

Covered decks with table and chairs for breakfasts or barbecues extend kitchen-family room livability greatly, and for more months of the year. For decks with western exposure, a sun screen may be added for afternoon comfort.



IT IS ESTIMATED that nearly 10 per cent of th houses built in America are constructed by people working in their sparetime and for their own occupancy. Especially is the do-it-yourself approach popular on the simpler, generally smaller vacation and retirement homes. As help, Easi-Bild Pattern Co. offers a new book, "How to Build a Vacation or Retirement House," through the Independent-Journal. Send $2.50 to Independent-Journal, Post Office Box 215, Briarcliff Manor, N.Y., 10510. Include your zip code number. The book contains more than 160 illustrations plus detailed, non-technical directions.

A Movable Wall Can Solve Your Home Storage Dilemma

Portable Room Divider Will Do Multiple Service In The House

Space is a luxury in most homes, so a room divider that combines organized storage with hobby and work areas can be welcome indeed.

And for a bonus, the divider can be built so it can be moved about. Against a wall, it's floor-to-ceining storage; rolled out on casters, it's a room divider; or in the center of the room, an island for family activities.

A HANDSOME version that can be built from available plans is called the Caravan. All materials needed are available from most lumber dealers.

The project puts lazy space to work, while serving as an attractive piece of furniture.

A novel shelving arrangement is another feature of the movable Caravan. Upside-down beveled board siding acts as cleats to hold the shelves, drawers and storage "boxes," which rest on small side rails.

Handyman's Pages

A drop-down table becomes a home office, sewing area or hobby center. Drawers and slotted shelves allow orderly storage of bills, letters or patterns.

A PULL-OUT drawer-shelf in the compartment adjacent to the table provides a convenient typing area for correspondence or home office work.

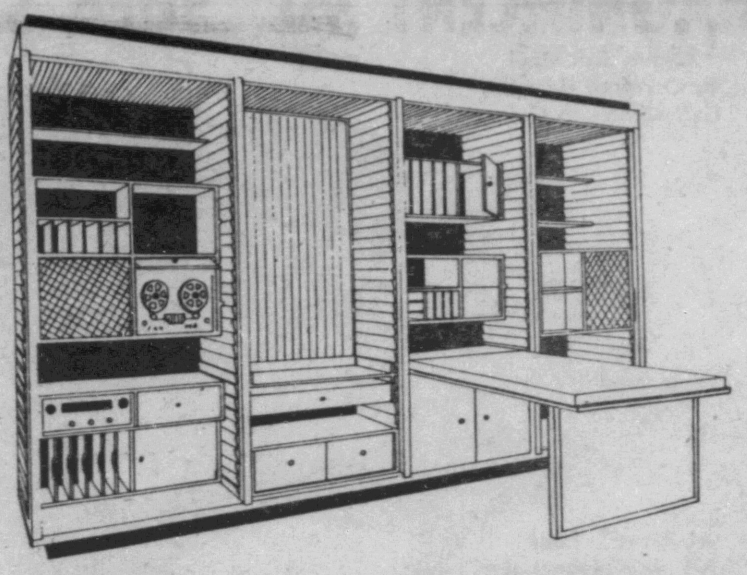
The end compartment houses a tape deck, record changer, records and small television set.

The Caravan, as designed by Melvin Kroker, a young Oregon architect, is ceiling high, has four sections, and the shelves and storage boxes are interchangeable.

BUT THE UNIT may be scaled down in size for an apartment, or expanded for a larger home. One or two such units function well as partitions for a temporary guest room.

Even if you move, the Caravan goes with you. If the wood has a natural finish, it will fit in readily with new decor and surroundings. Or it can be painted in some bright new hue.

For an eight-page color booklet on storage ideas, featuring the Caravan, and a plan sheet with construction details and materials list, send 25 cents in coin to Western Wood Products Association, Department 519-21P, Yeon Building, Portland, Ore., 97204.



THIS STORAGE WALL on wheels is truly versatile, serving equally well as room divider, activity island or just organized storage with variable shelves and cabinets. It is the Caravan, built of western lumber and paneling in various widths. Shelf areas are faced with upside down beveled siding that serves as cleats.

Special Seating For Kibitzers

Kibitzing is an art that has to be cultivated.

Like all arts, it requires a great deal of thought and the proper equipment before it can be managed in style. For those persons who refuse to do things halfway, today we introduce our genuine — official kibitzer chair, shown here with Jimmy Durante.

You'll find kibitzing to be an exciting activity, and, so far, one that the government hasn't been able to tax.

To begin with, I suppose we should say that a kibitzer chair is something like a horse. To get the most out of it you have to ride it, just the way Jimmy is doing. You will notice that it has a place to rest your elbows while your feet are solidly planted on the floor — a must for every kibitzer, and great for all armchair generals.

The chair is handy around election time in smoke-filled rooms because you can place your ashtray right in front of you on the arm rest. It also furnishes a place for a cup of coffee, some paper and a pencil or anything else you want to have handy. Photographers like it because it's an ideal chair to have pictures taken in.

Ladies with dresses, of course, ride the chair sidesaddle, or turn it around and sit on it like a conventional chair. Good for watching television too.

You'll enjoy it either indoors or out.

Building a kibitzer chair is easy when you use the full-size pattern. All you need do is trace the pattern on wood, then saw out the parts and finally put them together. Simple tools are all you will need, and the pattern lists the required materials, which are inexpensive.

To obtain the full-size kibitzer chair, pattern No. 86, send 50 cents (add 25 cents per pattern for airmail delivery) to: Steve Ellingston, San Rafael Independent-Journal Pattern Department, Post Office Box 2383, Van Nuys, Calif. 94109.

Other patterns you will enjoy: No. 250 Tool storage shed, $1; No. 217 Poker table, $1; No. 135 Trestle desk, $1; Booklet picturing 450 projects, 75 cents.

JIMMY DURANTE puts one of the kibitzer chairs built from a Steve Ellingson pattern to the relaxing use for which it is intended.

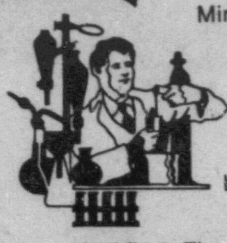
We have the new kind of Armstrong floor that hates waxing as much as you do.

It's called Solarian.™

The sunny floor that shines without wax. In fact, Solarian should not be waxed, since most household waxes will not adhere to its unique high-gloss wear surface. With no wax to buy, apply and let dry . . . you save money, time and work. No yellowing, no stripping.



The secret behind the waxless shine.

A major new development—the Mirabond™ Wear Surface—is an entirely new formulation that maintains its brilliant gloss far longer than any vinyl floor. The surface actually rejects ordinary wax, while making Solarian easier to keep clean. Even black heel marks wipe right up with a mild cleaner.

As beautiful to look at as it is to care for.

Choose Solarian in this crisp mosaic design or a gentle marble graining, both in four sunny, kitchen-perfect colors.

Let us show you this amazing new development in flooring.

The Stereo Scene — Columbia Classics

By JOHN SUNIER

Although recording of classical music by domestic companies in this country has fallen on bad times, at least one major label is keeping up a steady output of new recordings by re-pressing many of their best discs in a fine series of bargain albums.

I am speaking of Columbia Records' Odyssey series, featuring such outstanding performers as Ormandy, Szell and Oistrakh. New masters have been cut from the original stereo tapes, and with recent advances in cutting techniques the result is often startlingly improved signal-to-noise and less "scratch than the original high-priced discs.

TWO BRUNO WALTER albums are of special interest: His magnificent "Brahms Symphony No. 1" (Odyssey Y 30311) and his definitive "Mahler Symphony No. 9" (Odyssey Y2 30308). This is one of Mahler's most adventurous and at the same time most profoundly felt compositions and this version has it above all others for my ears.

"Austrian Music for Harpsichord and Clavichord" (Odyssey Y 30289) is the title of the latest album by talented harpsichordist-musicologist-writer Igor Kipnis. There are almost no recordings available of clavichord, that super-subtle tiny keyboard sound that is yet so very expressive, so the fact that one side of this LP is devoted to clavichord performances of music by Mozart, Haydn and Froberger is enough to recommend it highly.

Add the harpsichord pieces, unusual ones by rara avis such as Poglietti and Fux, Kipnis' sparkling performances and top engineering and you have a hands-down winner in this recital disc.

Columbia's Charles Ives series continues with two new albums. Paul Zukofsky, violin, and Gilbert Kalish, piano are featured with The New York String Quartet in "Charles Ives Chamber Music" (Columbia M 30230).

SEVERAL OF THESE little works are first recordings. The "Trio for Violin, Cello and Piano" is the major work here, but the listener will find some of the short pieces such as "In Re Con Moto Et Al" simply fascinating.

"American Scenes, American Poets" (Columbia M 30229) presents Evelyn Lear and Thomas Stewart, accompanied by pianist Alan Mandel, in the best album of Ives songs I have had the pleasure to hear. Ives reinterprets and preserves the songs and sounds of late-19th-century New England in these glorious little songs. "The Things Our Fathers Loved" strikes me as perhaps the most sincere and touching patriotic song ever penned in America. "They Are There" is a stirring song of the First World War. American poets such as Whitman and Thoreau provide the lyrics for the 10 songs on the second side of the album.

Ives' lovable unpredictability shines through all this music and gives it a piquancy that avoids any touch of the sentimental.

The Eric Satie bandwagon continues to roll along as pianist Philippe Entremont makes his auspicious conducting debut with the zany French composer's "Parade," "Relache" and two of the beautiful "Gymnopedies," (Columbia M 30294). The Royal Philharmonic Orchestra is on its toes and obviously has a jolly good time playing this witty and tuneful music.

Entremont also has another album in which he is heard as piano soloist in concerti by Jolivet and Milhaud, as well as a piano quartet version of Milhaud's jazzy "The Creation of the World," (Columbia MS 7432). This LP won two European recording awards, and features the two French composers conducting their own works. Unusual modern works in exciting interpretations and good sound.

ANOTHER TOPNOTCH album of music for piano and orchestra is the Rudolf Serkin/Eugene Ormandy effort (Columbia MS 7423) which showcases three showpieces: Strauss' "Burleske in D Minor," Schumann's "Introduction and Concert Allegro," and Mendelssohn's "Capriccio Brillante." The style of all three pieces can only be described as Lisztian, though that composer is not represented in the album. The Strauss is the longest work, a veritable fireworks display of wit and virtuosity.

The backing of the Philadelphia Orchestra provides its usual richness and depth, especially in the string section.

TV NOTES

By JACK GAVER

Jack Benny's second special of the season for NBC will be seen at 9 p.m. March 10.

Dr. Seuss "The Cat in the Hat" will be a new half-hour animated special on CBS March 10. This is the third video show to be based on one of the notable children's books by Ted Geisel (Dr. Seuss).

NBC has prepared a one-hour special on Scotland Yard for broadcasting in March. Producer Lucy Jarvis was permitted to take her cameras into guarded areas of London's police headquarters which have never before been open to the public.

"The Doris Mary Anne Kappelhoff Special" is a one-hour CBS program that takes a backward look at the career of — who else? — Doris Day. This will be the first video variety hour for the star, whose weekly comedy show is CBS. Perry Como will be on the special, which will be seen at 10 p.m. March 14.

A satiric but affectionate look at American marriage and togetherness in the 1970s is the aim of "Robert Young and the Family," a CBS special set for March 10. The star serves as host-narrator for the one-hour show that will employ the talents of Beau Bridges, Lee Grant, Julie Sommars, Lurene Tuttle, Jack Warden, William Windom and Dick Van Dyke.

Not much different,
leaving things behind
To decay and rot,
nuts and things,
Man's debris,

Emergency Alert Mistakenly Aired

By U. P. INTERNATIONAL

The North American Air Defense Command (NORAD) mistakenly issued an authenticated "alert" message today that led many radio and television stations across the county to leave the air as they would in event of a genuine national emergency.

The alert from NORAD headquarters near Colorado Springs, Colo., was transmitted over teletype services to the broadcast media at the start of a test that is run every Saturday at 6:30 a.m. PST.

But the wrong tape was used. The message read:

"Message authenticator: Hatefulness-hatefulness.

"This is an emergency action notification (EAN) directed by the President. Normal broadcasting will cease immediately. All stations will broadcast EAN message one preceded by the attention signal, per FCC rules. Only stations holding NDEA may stay on air in accord with their state EBS plan.

"Broadcast EAN message one.

"Message authenticator: Hatefulness-hatefulness.

"20 Feb."

Use of the code word "hatefulness" meant the alert was real rather than a test. U.S. broadcasters are given a sealed envelope every three months listing the code words that will be used each day for the coming three months. Station officials are supposed to open the envelope if an alert is issued and to check the authenticator word to verify accuracy.

The message stood without other comment from NORAD, which pre-empts the news services' teletype circuits for the tests, for six minutes.

At 9:46 a.m. ESP, United Press International and the Associated Press advised their clients that they had been informed thewrong tape was used by NORAD and that stations should disregard it. But under the provision of the emergency broadcast system, stations that are supposed to leave the air following an alert are to refrain from further broadcasting until the official "cancel" message has been received. That came 44 minutes later and read:

"Message authenticator: Impish-Impish

"Cancel message sent at 09:33 EST repeat cancel message sent at 09:33 EST

"Message authenticator: Impish-Impish -20 Feb."

However, the alert message as well as a corrected version transmitted less than an hour later via a special hookup with the wire services — United Press International and Associated Press — failed to reach some areas of the nation, including Denver, 120 miles away.

The mistake prompted hundreds of telephone calls to police and broadcast stations. Many media officials were infuriated.

"This made us just as angry as hell," said a spokesman for radio station KIXL in Dallas. "You can't play around with things like this. If we had gone on the air and broadcast the alert as being from the President of the United States, some old people would have checked it right then."

"We're considering billing NORAD for three sets of underwear," said Mike Brown of station WKJC in Bluefield, Va. "The real bad part was when we opened the envelope and the words matched."

"I thought I was gonna have

MOMENTS AFTER EXPLOSION

A volunteer runs to help as another man sprays water from a garden hose on the blazing garage of a Novato residence. The fire occurred at 2:46 p.m. yesterday at the home of Kenneth Madis of 4 Driftwood Avenue as the teen-age son of the occupant and companions were siphoning gasoline in the garage. Fumes from the gas were touched off by a water heater, causing a minor explosion. The youth escaped injury but the garage and its contents, including a car and motorcycle, suffered $10,000 damage.

Big Loss For Viet Troops

U.S. Copters Downed In Major Laos Battle

SAIGON (UPI) — A force of 3,000 North Vietnamese besieged a battered South Vietnamese outpost inside Laos with heavy artillery and tanks today in the biggest battle of Saigon's Ho Chi Minh Trail drive. Field reports said South Vietnamese casualties were "immense" and that survivors were short of food.

U.S. helicopter pilots braving withering antiaircraft fire airlifted a 150-man South Vietnamese reinforcing team into the beleaguered outpost-Landing Zone LZ Ranger-five miles inside Laos and carried wounded men out on the return flight.

Military sources said barely one-fourth of the outpost's original complement of 400 men was still able to fight after three days of North Vietnamese attacks.

The sources said at least 26 members of the South Vietnamese 39th Ranger Battalion were killed in LZ Ranger action and 110 more were wounded. Sixty soldiers were reported missing in action and an official spokesman said in Saigon that the entire unit may have been overrun.

One military source at Khe Sanh, headquarters for the American force supporting the South Vietnamese campaign, said defenders of LZ Ranger had been low on food for two days.

Reports reaching Khe Sanh said the North Vietnamese were using big howitzers and tanks, and that LZ Ranger defenders withstood three ground assaults Friday night in a three hour period. Heavy shelling began at 6 p.m. Friday and continued through midmorning today.

U. S. military sources said as many as 12,000 North Vietnamese main force troops appeared to be trying to encircle the 19,000-man South Vietnamese task force which launched an offensive against the Ho Chi Minh Trail in Laos on Feb. 8.

LZ Ranger was established to protect the South Vietnamese force.

U.S. headquarters in Saigon reported five Americans killed, 14 wounded and one missing in action in two clashes with Communist forces near Khe Sanh.

Four men of the 1st Brigade, 5th U.S. Infantry Division Mechanized were killed, seven wounded and one listed as missing in a fight Friday afternoon seven miles northwest of the Khe Sanh airstrip. Early today, Communist troops attacked a night defensive position five miles north of Khe Sanh and headquarters reported one American killed and seven wounded.

Scores of U. S. helicopters flew through a curtain of Communist antiaircraft fire in a relief effort today for LZ Ranger and finally succeeded this afternoon in setting down with a team of 150 South Vietnamese Ranger reinforcements.

One U. S. helicopter was hit and crashlanded on the base, a pilot reported, but he said a second got in and pulled "all the Americans out." However, it appeared that one U. S. helicopter crewman who was flown out of the besieged base

Fatal Nursing Home Fire Draws Serious Charges

TAFT, Calif. (UPI)—A fire that trapped seven mentally-retarded patients in a nursing home here has touched off charges that budget cuts by Gov. Ronald Reagan's administration contributed to the tragedy.

The fire broke out early Friday in the Desert Aire rest home, a 50-year-old wood frame structure where the patients were housed under the URISDICtion of the state Social Welfare Department.

The fire destroyed the building and trapped the seven patients before they could flee. Four other patients were able to make their way to safety and a fifth was burned but rescued by the nursing home attendants, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Armstrong.

The blaze occurred 11 days before the patients were to be moved on grounds the structure was a fire hazard.

Several nursing home operators and social workers put the blame on Reagan for ordering cuts in state social welfare spending. Reagan had no comment.

"I think Reagan put the match to the blanket, by ignoring urgent requests to provide money for adequate care," said Bob Anderson, executive director of Local 535 of the Social Services Union, which represents 150 psychiatric social workers.

Tom Gilliam, executive-director of the California Association of Nursing Homes, said the dead were the victims of "Reagan's drive to reduce cost in state mental hospitals."

The patients had been placed in Desert Aire, an unlicensed facility, by the Social Welfare Department while they were attending a training school in Taft.

Anderson said the Bakersfield Community Services Office of the department was supposed to find other homes for the patients, but a staff shortage had hindered the effort.

"It's the governor's fault," he said. "Those people wouldn't even have been in that building if Reagan hadn't imposed a hiring freeze on the Social Welfare Department."

Gilliam, whose organization represents 1,000 licensed California nursing homes, called the building "an unlicensed private poorhouse" and charged the patients were put there because the state government wouldn't pay for private facilities.

State Unemployment To Remain High

BERKELEY, Calif. (UPI)—A high rate of unemployment through 1971 is in prospect for California despite an overall modest expansion of the state's economy.

The prediction was contained in a report issued by the California Economic Forecasting Project at the Institute of Business and Economic Research at the University of California.

TRAINING: A MOCK EMERGENCY

Nurses and aides at Petaluma's Hillcrest Hospital give emergency treatment to the "victims" of a mock bus accident staged today. Sixteen Boy Scouts were the "victims" of the accident, staged at Highway 101 and East Washington Street. The Scouts were rushed from the scene to the hospital by the Petaluma Ambulance Co. The Civil Defense drill was aimed at preparing the hospital's staff for major emergencies.

ITU Strike Gets Grand Jury Look

I-J Special Report

SAN FRANCISCO — A newly impaneled Federal Grand Jury on Organized Crime plans to investigate the 13-month-old printers' strike against the Independent-Journal.

The scope of the probe, which came to light yesterday, was not made clear, although it was disclosed that four members of the striking union and several I-J employees whose homes have been vandalized and firebombed during the long strike have been ordered subpoenaed by the jury.

The investigation became known when former U.S. Attorney Cecil Poole filed a motion in federal court here to either quash or delay a grand jury appearance of two officers and two members of the International Typographical Union.

Members of Local 21 of the ITU struck the paper Jan. 7 of last year, and the walkout has been marked by violence. There have been clashes with police at rallies and attacks on the property of advertisers and the paper's employees. And last July, an I-J production specialist was fatally wounded in his home by two young gunmen.

The jury's subpoenas called

Fire Sweeps Nicasio Home

Fire destroyed a home nearly a century-old in Nicasio last night after the occupants had gone out for dinner.

Glenn Kerch, retired Nicasio fire chief who helped fight the blaze, said that Ed Gallagher, whose ranch is one-half mile from the house located off Point Reyes-Petaluma Road, reported the fire at 9:18 p.m.

The fire, at the home of George A. Boners, was out of control by the time Nicasio volunteer firemen arrived. Marin County firemen arrived with five trucks but could not save the old home.

Bowers told Kerch he had thrown a log in the fireplace before leaving for dinner and said the blaze may have been started by sparks or a fault in the chimney.

Kerch said the flames could be seen in the center of Nicasio, six miles away. No damage estimate was available.

Bowers and his wife and three children are staying temporily with his wife's parents in Nicasio.

WORLD NEWS IN BRIEF

Police Battle

ANKARA (UPI)—Police held controlled dormitories at Hacettepe University today following an hours-long, pitched battle with armed male and female students.

A police spokesman said at least 191 students —40 of them girls—had been arrested after the fight. He said the number of injured might rise "above 100."

Students armed with pistols, dynamite, gasoline bombs, sticks and stones opened fire Friday when helmeted police wielding aluminum shields tried to search dormitories for hidden arms and explosives.

After five hours' fighting, all women's and two of three men's dormitories were in police hands.

Moon Robot Sleeps

MOSCOW (UPI)—The Lunokhod One moon robot has completed its original exploration mission but just keeps rolling along.

The Soviets said the eight-wheeled silver buggy settled down into mechanical hibernation today to endure the punishing cold of another 14-day lunar night—its fourth in three months on the moon.

But the Soviets indicated Friday their space scientists would be thinking up new jobs for the soil-sampling, universe-scouting robot when it awakes March 6.

"The Soviet automatic vehicle Lunokhod One has completely fulfilled its planned program of three months of work on the lunar surface, and it will continue experiments in the Sea of Rains," the official news agency Tass said.

Welfare Raid

ROME (UPI)—More than 1,600 police made a lightning and coordinated raid Friday on 280 orphanages and nurseries in the Roma area. They inspected bedrooms, classrooms and kitchens, interrogated staff and children and carried off books to investigate whether the state is being defrauded.

Judge Luciano Infelisi, the man in charge of the investigation, said all the institutes house orphans or children from broken homes who are being supported at the expense of the state. He said he wanted to make sure that the support money was being put to proper use.

Results of the investigation were not immediately made public. But officials said several abuses had been turned up, including some in a boys' institution run by Roman Catholic priests which they said was almost totally lacking in hygienic requirements.

Student Uproar

PARIS (UPI)—French high school students, bolstered by a unity not seen since the near-revolution of 1968, vowed today to continue their fight against a government shaken by infighting and labor unrest.

In the face of a government ban the students massed more than 10,000 strong Friday to protest for the third time this week the three month jail sentence of Gilles Guiot, 18, accused of punching a policeman in the face. The demonstration took place during the appeal hearing of Guiot.

Suddenly the crowd, jammed onto the Boulevard St. Michel from the River Seine to the Sorbonne school, began to shout the 1968 war cry, "This is only the beginning, continue the fight."

They ran through the streets, handing out leaflets calling for continued demonstrations. "The Guiot case is only one. We'll get the police state," some pamphlets read.

Lon Nol Progress

HONOLULU (UPI) —Cambodian Premier Lon Nol has made rapid progress in his recovery from a stroke and may be able to return home next month, according to his doctors.

Cambodia's public health minister, Kang Keng, who has been with the prime minister since he came here a week ago, said Friday Lon Nol would need at least two more weeks of therapy at Tripler General Hospital, meaning he could return to Phnom Penh in early March.

The 58-year-old prime minister's stroke on Feb. 8 left him partly paralyzed on his left side, but his speech was only slightly affected. Since he has been at Tripler he has been able to move about his room with the aid of a special leg brace. Lon Nol is a diabetic who also has suffered from kidney ailments and hypertension.

"There will be no lasting effect of the stroke on his further political action." Kang said.

Textiles, tobacco items and furniture are the main products of North Carolina.

PX Witness Recalls Saigon Corruption

WASHINGTON (UPI) —A civilian who headed services for military post exchanges in Vietnam has told a Senate subcommittee probing charges of bribery and corruption in the system it was "the worst situation I've ever seen."

But the former PX official, Frank Burgess, refused to elaborate Friday when he appeared before the Senate Permanent Investigation Subcommittee. He repeatedly took the Fifth Amendment when asked if he pocketed kickbacks from U.S. corporation salesmen from whom he purchased liquor, cigarettes and other goods.

Burgess, who served as chief of services for the PX system for one year in Vietnam before retiring last month, also refused to submit his personal financial records to the subcommittee.

He was called as a surprise witness at the third day of hearings into charges of corruption in PX and service club operations in the war zone. Earlier, committee investigators submitted documents they said showed liquor, tobacco and other firms paid kickbacks to military purchasing agents in exchange for orders.

Financial records, canceled checks and affidavits from some of the men involved showed that kickbacks and gratuities to dozens of U. S. personnel ranged from direct payments ($12 per case on L&M cigarettes and $1 a case on Old Crow bourbon) to arrangements for hotel rooms, women and fancy food throughout Asia, the investigators said.

Some of the documents indicated Sgt. William Higdon, one of eight persons indicted Wednesday on charges of fraud and conspiracy in connection with service club operations, was paid thousands of dollars by Liggett & Meyers Tobacco Co. agents "as early as September, 1967" to promote L&M sales.

Homeowners Up

WASHINGTON (UPI) —When the census was taken last year, 39.9 million Americans were living in homes they owned or were buying. The figure was up 7.1 million—or 22 per cent—over 1960.

The Census Bureau said Friday 63 per cent of occupied housing units in the United States in 1970 were in the homeowner class.

Manson Power Display

LOS ANGELES — With one gesture, Charles Manson demonstrated his power over the three young women convicted with him of the seven Tate-LaBianca murders.

While Patricia Krenwinkel was on the stand during Friday's session of the penalty phase of the trial, Manson suddenly raised his left arm and pointed his index finger straight upwards toward the ceiling.

Miss Krenwinkel, 23, stared at him, halting her testimony. Then, slowly, she raised her left arm and index finger in the same gesture. Susan Atkins and Leslie Van Houten followed Manson's lead.

For 35 minutes, until Superior Court Judge Charles H. Older called a recess, Manson kept his arm extended. The girls copied him, occasionally lowering their arms when the strain became too much.

Miss Van Houten followed Miss Krenwinkel to the stand and she also was expected to confess her part in the murders while trying to clear Manson. However, she never got to that point in her testimony before the trial was recessed for the weekend.

Capone Imitator Admits Slaying Three Deputies

DALLAS (UPI)—Rene Adolfo Guzman, a scar-faced ex-convict said to be a drug addict and in imitator of Al Capone, put his signature to a confession Friday night, admitting he and another man arrested with him shot three deputy sheriffs to death beside a river bank five days ago.

Guzman, 33, and Leonardo Ramos Lopez, 25, were captured shortly after midnight Friday when 60 lawmen raided a shabby three-room flat in east Dallas, guided by a spotlight from a hovering helicopter.

Lopez was scheduled to be interrogated today by Dallas County Sheriff Clarence Jones' men.

Both Lopez and Guzman were identified as the killers by Deputy A.D. McCurley, who escaped in the confusion and darkness last Monday while three of his colleagues were being killed and another officer wounded in an execution-style shooting on the barren bottomlands of the Trinity River near downtown Dallas.

In his confession, Guzman said he and Lopez disarmed three officers who came to arrest them in a house. A short time later two more deputies knocked on the door, and they too were disarmed and tied up, Guzman said.

He said he and Lopez loaded the bound lawmen in a car and drove them to the river bottom. He said one of the officers got his hands free and took a swing at Guzman. Guzman, a pistol in each hand, fired until all the captives fell in the darkness, the statement said. Then he said he and Lopez jumped in the car and drove away.

Killed were Dallas County Deputies Samuel Garcia Infante and William Don Reese and Ellis County Deputy A. J. Robertson. The officers had tried to arrest the suspects on burglary charges.

A relative said Guzman "thinks he's Al Capone."

Sheriff Jones said both suspects are drug addicts and may have been high on heroin the night the deputies were murdered.

Guzman's brother, Moises Zuniga Guzman, 36, was arrested the night of the slayings. McCurley said the elder Guzman did not take part in the shootings but did nothing to stop the killings. He was charged with murder.

When police raided the apartment Friday they also arrested gangie Rojo Hernandez, 38, and Mary Alice Rosales, 25. They were charged with harboring fugitives and being accessories to murder.

Retired Policeman Shot Dead At Home

SEATTLE (UPI) —Hazard P. Butterfield, 56, retired Seattle policeman, was shot to death at his home here late Friday night when he answered a knock at the door.

Mrs. Butterfield said her husband, a veteran of 25 years on the force, staggered back into the house and she helped him to a chair. He had been shot once in the chest

Angela Wins Right To Visitors For Defense

Angela Y. Davis has won permission to have visitors in her jail cell who are necessary to her defense of charges stemming from the Aug. 7 shoot-out at the Marin County Civic Center.

In a ruling yesterday, Superior Court Judge Joseph G. Wilson said such persons would include material witnesses, experts or any other certified as "essential and necessary" by the defense.

Wilson also ruled that a defense attorney must certify to a sheriff's officer that the visitors are not a threat to security.

Miss Davis's defense corps swelled to six yesterday when Sheldon Otis, a Michigan attorney, was named an associate counsel in papers filed in Marin Superior Court.

Miss Davis is charged, along with San Quentin inmate Ruchell Magee, with murder, kidnapping and conspiracy in connection with an escape attempt which resulted in the death of Superior Court Judge Harold Haley and three others.

Miss Davis has petitioned the court to be allowed to represent herself. That request is still pending in superior court.

Other attorneys representing Miss Davis are Howard Moore Jr., Allan Brotsky, Dennis J. Roberts, Margaret Burnham and Michael E. Tigar.

In another development yesterday, Rev. Cecil Williams of the Glide Memorial Methodist Church in San Francisco protested his removal from the list of persons eligible to visit Miss Davis in her cell. Williams, who claims to be her "spiritual adviser," was told last Tuesday he would no longer be able to visit the prisoner except during regular visiting hours.

Corps Asked To Outline Warner Creek Flood Plan

The Novato Creek Committee asked the Army Corps of Engineers last night to submit an outline of various options to cementing Warner Creek.

Herbert W. Cook Jr., co-chairman of the committee, said the Army promised to submit the outline, with costs, in a month.

Upon receipt, Cook said, the committee will hold public hearings for property owners along the creek and then formulate an alternative plan to handle floodwaters.

The Army has proposed to leave Novato Creek in a natural state, but would build a concrete flood control channel in Warner Creek.

However, the concrete channel proposal is the least expensive at $10.2 million, Cook said, so Novato would have to try to finance the difference for a more expensive project.

Most often mentioned of the Army's original 12 options is piping floodwaters under Novato Boulevard. This project would cost more than $14 million, meaning that Novato — through bond issues and state and federal assistance — would have to raise about $4 million, Cook said.

Auto Burglary Hearing Due

Robert John Perinoni, 18, of San Rafael, has pleaded innocent in Marin Municipal Court to charges of possessing stolen property and auto burglary.

He and Russell Fred Meils, 19, also of San Rafael, were arrested Feb. 2 for allegedly breaking into an auto on Highway 37 while the motorist was away getting gasoline.

Preliminary hearings for both men were set for Thursday.

Hearing Slated On Landscaping In Belvedere

A public hearing on landscaping and redesign of the San Rafael Avenue entrance to Belvedere will be held when the city council meets Monday at 8 p.m. at city hall.

The improvements, recommended by the parks and recreation and planning commissions, include construction of a pathway below the level of San Rafael Avenue, plus surveying, grading, planting of ground cover and trees and construction of benches and irrigation and lighting systems.

A representative of M. Carlisle Becker, Tiburon city councilman and San Francisco landscape architect who designed the improvements, will attend the meeting and explain the projects and give cost estimates.

Also on the agenda is selection by the council of the type of street light standards to be used along Beach Road and the color they are to be painted.

Marijuana Case To Juvenile Court

The case of Dennis Kevin Healey, 18, of Novato, charged with possessing marijuana, has been certified to Marin Juvenile Court.

He was arrested Jan. 31 in a car leaving the Pleasant Valley School grounds.

Third Bid For Reed Board Seat

Margaret Jones, a housewife, of 270 Bay View Avenue, Belvedere, filed yesterday as a candidate for the Reed School District board in the April 20 election.

Mrs. Jones, wife of Dr. Reese T. Jones, resigned from the board of directors of the League of Women Voters of Southern Marin before filing for the school post.

It is a national policy of the league that no member can run for public office while serving on a league board.

Mrs. Jones was the third candidate to file for two seats on the board. Incumbent Leo Souza and Marie L. McLeod, a housewife, previously filed.

Dr. John J. Osborn of 2960 Paradise Drive has filed for the seat held by Gordon C. Wright, who is the target of a recall election.

Sino-Austrian Talks

VIENNA (UPI) —Austria and Communist China will open talks "in the near future" on establishment of diplomatic relations, an Austrian government spokesman said today.

Draft Defendants Get Reversal Of Bail Bar

I-J Special Report

SAN FRANCISCO — Lawyers for a Marin man and three other draft violators yesterday won a reversal from a higher court of a judge's decision which had sent their clients to jail pending sentencing.

Judge Samuel Conti on Feb. 10 found Robert E. Lopez of Sleepy Hollow guilty of refusing induction after a brief trial which he heard without a jury.

Conti, sworn in as a federal district judge in December, remanded Lopez into custody while he awaited sentencing. He also followed this same unprecedented policy with three other draft violators.

The practice of other judges in federal district court in San Francisco has been to allow draft defendants to remain free pending sentence, either with or without bail.

The judges have generally either granted straight probation to draft defendants who claimed moral objection to the Vietnam War or given them short jail sentences.

The Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals yesterday ordered that Lopez and the others be released while they await sentencing next Wednesday. Lopez was freed on his own recognizance.

His freedom will probably be short-lived, however, as Judge Conti is expected to send him and the others to prison.

Man Arraigned In Pot Case

Ricky B. Deem, 22, of Santa Venetia, was arraigned yesterday in Marin Municipal Court on misdemeanor charges of possessing narcotics paraphernalia and contributing to the delinquency of a minor.

Judge Peter Allen Smith referred his case to the probation department to see if he may be released on his own recognizance pending further court appearances. He is scheduled to return to court to plead to the charges next Friday.

Deem was arrested yesterday when San Rafael police saw him drinking malt liquor in a car with two juveniles.

was stranded at a second position nearby when his helicopter was forced down by intense antiaircraft fire.

In a radio report from his jungle entrapment, the stranded American reported that at least 65 South Vietnamese Rangers had been killed and 50 wounded in fierce combat.

Highly-placed Allied military sources said fighting raged through the night Friday and until dawn today and that some Communist attackers had been slain at the camp's barbed wire perimeter. The sources said at least 19 South Vietnamese were killed and 32 wounded in one wave of the assault with many of the casualties caused by intense mortar, rocket and artillery fire.

"It' a mess over there," a senior South Vietnamese commander told UPI tonight.

Heroic U. S. helicopter crews managed to lift some of the South Vietnamese casualties out this afternoon, military sources reported, but senior U.S. advisers on the South Vietnamese side of the border described the situation as "bad, very bad." They described South Vietnamese casualties as "immense."

At South Vietnamese headquarters in Saigon, official communiques said 40 South Vietnamese soldiers were wounded and 26 missing after a shelling attack on LZ Ranger early Friday.

"The casualties would indicate the unit may have been overrun," a spokesman at Saigon headquarters told newsmen.

Senior U.S. military advisers said air strikes, artillery and counter-attacks had inflicted hundreds of dead on the North Vietnamese attackers.

Allied military sources said a North Vietnamese defector told South Vietnamese interrogators that his regiment had moved by truck from the Mu Gia Pass to the Ho Chi Minh Trail junction of Sepone, then marched to the area of the LZ Ranger siege. Sepone, a major Ho Chi Minh Trail junction, is the main objective of South Vietnam's campaign to cut the trail.

Combat of the kind raging at LZ Ranger had been predicted by American officials who said North Vietnam would have to protect the Ho Chi Minh Trail or lose the Indochina war. The trail is Hanoi's lifeline to Commmunist troops in South Vietnam and Cambodia.

"It was 2-1-2 hours of hell," said Pfc. James C. Costello, 20, an Army medic of Bellevue, Wash. in describing the situation at the outpost Thursday when the pilot of his helicopter was wounded fatally when their chopper was hit by Communist ground fire. He was finally rescued by another U.S. helicopter.

The besieged outpost in Laos consists of two battalion-sized positions, (850 men) on hills about 1,100 yards apart and overlooks what a U.S. adviser described as "a big damn road." He said the North Vietnamese apparently had 130mm and 152mm artillery pieces in the valley.

Allied forces firing from a command post inside South Vietnam were providing constant 105mm and 155mm artillery support for LZ Ranger.

a heart attack trying to open that damn envelope," said Dave Skinner, news director of WEVA in Emporia, Va. "I haven't felt that way since John F. Kennedy was killed."

A station manager in Milwaukee wanted to know "who got their heads screwed in backwards?" Another in Minneapolis said he was "ready to put on my uniform," and across the river in St. Paul, a manager said he was about "to tell the engineer to unplug everything and go home."

Many stations did not leave the air —some because they are not required to and others because they did not notice the alert until after the news services pointed out it was erroneous.

Typical of the calls from fearful citizens was one from Corine Muldoon, 24, of Cambridge, Mass.

JURY

for the four men to appear Tuesday. Poole's motions were quickly denied yesterday by Chief U.S. District Court Judge Oliver J. Carter.

The Independent-Journal has also learned that several of its employees who have suffered property damage through strike-related vandalism have been subpoenaed.

Subpoenas have been issued for John D. Martini, vice president of ITU Local 21; George Duncan, ITU International representative of Los Angeles; Grant Anders, a member of the Mount Diablo local of the ITU, and James R. Brocato of Santa Rosa, an ITU member.

Poole said this morning that only Anders has actually been served with a subpoena. He said it was "questionable" whether the other three would be subpoenaed in time to appear Tuesday. He did not elaborate.

Poole sought to quash the subpoenas on the basis that he had not had time to discuss the case with those subpoenaed.

"We're not trying to duck anything or question the jury's right to investigate this. We just want time to discuss the aspects," Poole said today.

"I also pointed out to the judge that the subpoenas were defective in that they ordered the men to report to the offices of the Department of Justice Organized Crime Strike Force and not before the jury itself. But the judge said this could be rectified by verbal instruction to the men," Poole added.

Poole said he was leaving for Santa Barbara early Monday and would not be able to be on hand for the hearing Tuesday.

Two of the men subpoenaed — Brocato and Anders — have pleaded guilty to conspiring to break the windows of businesses who have continued to advertise in the Independent-Journal. They are scheduled to be sentenced March 5 in Solano County Superior Court.

Poole said he did not know whether Anders would appear Tuesday as ordered. "I haven't talked with him since I went before the judge Friday," Poole said.

OBITUARIES

Berryhill Memorial Rite Set

Memorial service is pending for Helen Huntington Berryhill Heilman of Berkeley, mother of the founder of San Anselmo's Festival Theater, Elizabeth Berryhill.

Mrs. Heilman died Thursday at a Marin convalescent hospital after a long illness. She was 82.

She was a pianist, singer and teacher who founded the Berkeley Musical Association and the Berkeley Music Center.

A native of Des Moines, Iowa, Mrs. Heilman taught briefly at Drake University there after graduating from the Institute of Musical Art (now the Juilliard School of Music) in New York City.

She was trained as a pianist and concert singer and, after moving to Berkeley 50 years ago, became a piano and voice teacher.

She was a member of St. John's Presbyterian Church, Berkeley, and the Berkeley Piano Club.

Also surviving are her husband, William R. Heilman of Scottsburg, Ind.; a brother, John Chadwick Huntington of Stewartsville, N.J.; a second daughter, Ann B. Angelo of Brussels, Belgium; eight grandchildren, and four great-grandchildren.

She was the daughter of Clarence W. Huntington, president of the Virginian Railway.

The family asked that contributions be made to the Berkeley Piano Club Scholarship Fund, 2724 Haste Street, Berkeley.

ALLAN CAMERON

Private funeral for Allan E. Cameron of Montreal, Canada, father of Beverley Norman of San Rafael, was today in San Anselmo.

Cameron, 64, died Wednesday at a Marin hospital after a long illness. He had been visiting Mrs. Norman the past three months.

Born in Toronto, Canada, he lived briefly in Ohio before settling in Montreal about 40 years ago.

He was foreman for a printing company until his retirement three years ago.

Surviving are his wife, Josephine Cameron of Montreal; two other daughters, Loraine Rattary and Barbara Hughes, both of Montreal, and four grandchildren.

VINCENT GINI

Vincent Gini of Mill Valley, a retired restaurant owner, died yesterday in a local hospital after a long illness. He was 75.

Gini was retired owner of the Silver Fox Cafe in San Francisco. Born in San Guisto Lucca, Italy, he lived in San Francisco before moving to Marin 10 years ago.

He lived at 407 Marin Avenue.

Surviving are his wife, Amelia; a daughter, Gina Matteucci, and a son, Robert Gina, both of San Anselmo; two sisters, Rosina Comessi and Lida Scarpellini, both of Italy, and two brothers, Gino Gini of Italy and Domenico Gini of Sebastopol, and three grandchildren.

Requiem Mass will be offered at 9:30 a.m. Monday at Our Lady of Mount Carmel Catholic Church, Mill Valley, with burial in Italian Cemetery, Colma. Rosary will be recited at 8 p.m. tomorrow at Russell and Gooch Mortuary, Mill Valley.

GLENN KELLEY

Rev. Glenn A. Kelley, assistant pastor at St. Raphael's Church in San Rafael from 1936 to 1944, died yesterday in a Daly City hospital after a long illness. He was 71.

Father Kelley was sent to Marin the year he was ordained from St. Patrick's Seminary in Menlo Park. After leaving Marin, he was with St. Paul's Catholic Church in San Francisco, then with a Rio Vista parish.

For the past 12 years, he was pastor of St. William's Catholis Church in Los Altos.

He was born in Oakland.

Surviving him is a sister, Vera K. Kwapil of San Rafael.

Requiem Mass will be said Monday at 10:30 a.m. at St. William's, El Monte at Covington, Los Altos, with burial at Gate of Heaven Cemetery, Los Altos. Rosary will be recited tomorrow at 8 p.m. at St. William's.

DORA JUDA

Private funeral for Dora Juda, mother of Mrs. Burt Capel of Larkspur, was held yesterday in San Francisco.

Mrs. Juda died Thursday in her home in San Francisco. She was 94.

A native of California, she lived in San Francisco for 76 years. She was the widow of Leon Juda.

In addition to her daughter in Larkspur, she is survived by a son, Felix Juda of Los Angeles and several grandchildren and great-grandchildren.

Burial was at the Hill of Eternity Cemetery in Colma.

Electric Jolt For Drinkers

CHICAGO (UPI) — Comment of a patron told she had just been served a computer-made martini: 'A-ar-gh!"

Not so, say the master mixer's owners, the Jolly Chef Restaurant. Ron Briskman, a proprietor, said Thursday the machine is fast, never gyps the customers and eliminates spilled booze.

The machine is not particularly obvious. Basically, it looks like an overgrown cash register, with a panel of buttons labeled for 36 drinks and a spout at the bottom.

The bartender puts a glass under the spout, punches the appropriate button and the drink is ready.

Briskman said some of the customers "realized something funny was going on."

"One customer asked why all the television cameras were here today and when I told her, she said, 'A-ar-gh.'

Briskman said the regular bartender didn't like the computer at first, either.

Prison Probe Hears Of Inmate Beatings

RAIFORD, Fla. (UPI)—Two Raiford State Prison inmates, one of them a former attorney convicted of murder, testified at a state investigation Friday that they had witnessed unprovoked beatings of prisoners.

Prison officials denied the charges during an eight-and-one-half-hour hearing conducted by two aides to Gov. Ruebin Askew.

Meanwhile, District Judge Gerald Tjoflat scheduled a hearing in Jacksonville on a suit filed by the American Civil Liberties Union (ACLU) calling for a federal takeover of the prison until the court is convinced that the prisoners' rights are not being violated.

The suit charges about 500 prisoners were fired upon "at point-blank range with automatic weapons and shotguns with lethal caliber buckshot" during an incident Feb. 12.

The two inmates told the investigators prisoners were forced to run a gauntlet of state troopers swinging nightsticks during a "show of force" by prison officials last Tuesday. The disturbance resulted in injuries to eight prisoners and four officers, capping a week-long series of confrontations at Florida's largest correctional facility.

The most serious incident was the confrontation mentioned in the ACLU's suit in which 64 inmates were wounded —all but one from gunfire— during a riot on the recreation field at the main prison unit.

Former Attorney Joseph A. Peel, 46, who was convicted in the murders of Judge C. E. Chillingworth and his wife in 1955, testified inmates were beaten without provocation as they were being removed from the ground floor of their three-tiered cellblock.

China Warns On Laos

TOKYO (UPI)—Communist China said today the Allied incursion into Laos constituted "a grave menace to China" and said through the operation President Nixon has "reached the zenith in arrogance."

Peking's Peoples Daily, the official Chinese Communist Party newspaper, rejected Nixon's statement earlier in the week that the Laotian drive does not pose a threat to Peking.

The report was broadcast by Peking Radio and heard in Tokyo.

"Laos lies not in northwest Europe or South America but in north Indochina," the newspaper said.

"Nixon should not lose his head and forget such a common knowledge in geography," the newspaper said.

"By spreading the flames of war to the door of China, U.S. imperialism is on a course posing a grave menace to China. Nixon has indeed laid bare his ferocious features and reached the zenith in arrogance," Peoples Daily said.

"We must warn Nixon once again that the 700 million Chinese people will not allow you to run amok in Indochina."

Car Flips Over, Driver Injured

A 16-year-old San Rafael youth suffered scrapes and swelling of the head and arms when his car flipped into a ditch yesterday, according to San Rafael police.

Police said a car driven by James H. McKee, Jr., 16, of 600 Idylberry Road, Marinwood, failed to negotiate a left turn from Las Pavadas Avenue onto Manuel T. Freitas Expressway at 12:14 a.m.

McKee left the car upside down in the water of the ditch and walked home, police said. He was cited at home for not have a driver's license in his possession.

Low Cost Housing Plan On Tap

headed by Margaret B. Azevedo will present a draft of a county housing policy statement. The statement is needed to qualify the county for federal aid through the Department of Housing and Urban Development. It also establishes guidelines for preparation of a countywide housing plan that will meet state requirements.

The statement suggests such techniques as offering bonuses for developers of low and moderate income housing, use of air rights over publicly owned buildings, added second units to existing single family homes, and offering tax rebates for low income homeowners.

In other matters before the commission, Charlotte Berkov will ask for a four-lot land division at Indian Valley Springs Road and Indian Valley Road in southwest Novato.

James Hall School in Los Ranchitos will seek permission to add a new classroom building and a swimming pool on the 3.3-acre school property.

Pleads Innocent To Arson Charge

Rhonda Pflaumer, 23, of San Francisco, has pleaded innocent in Marin Municipal Court to a charge of arson. A preliminary hearing was set for March 9.

She was arrested Sunday after a Sausalito man told police she had set his car on fire.

Differing Pictures Of Officer's Firing

I-J SPECIAL REPORT

SANTA ROSA — A Marin psychiatrist testified yesterday that former Petaluma policeman Robert C. Blagborne was emotionally unstable at the time his probationary status was extended.

The testimony concluded the hearing in which Blagborne sought reinstatement, charging he was fired because of participation in wage negotiations that nearly led to a police strike last summer.

Blagborne's attorney, Paul A. Neuer of San Francisco, hammered away at the testimony of Dr. Edward Shev of Greenbrae, who said he was a physician specializing in neurology and psychiatry.

Shev, who had been under contract as police psychiatrist for a year, said he interviewed Blagborne at the request of Asst. City Mgr. John T. Nolan on Sept. 16. He said he called for a second interview Sept. 22 because the officer had been uncommunicative in the first visit. He finally recommended that Blagborne's probationary status be extended for six months to work out personal problems.

Neuer questioned Dr. Shev's credentials as a psychiatrist and wondered how he could come to a conclusion about Blagborne after only two 45-minute interviews and without benefit of psychological testing.

Dr. Shev said Blagborne became angry and showed "paranoid symptoms" when questioned about personal problems relating to the illness of his father. Neuer insisted it would be natural to be angry about outside interference on such matters.

Also testifying yesterday were Lt. George Wagner and Sgt. Jimmie Matthews, who had been Blagborne's watch commanders, and Petaluma City Mgr. Robert H. Meyer.

Wagner testified that Blagborne sometimes balked at orders and disagreed with decisions of his superiors. Neuer produced efficiency reports prepared by Wagner that had described Blagborne's performance as competent overall.

Neuer pointed out that it wasn't until after the wage dispute in August that some mention was made on a report of an attitude problem.

Matthews said Blagborne was argumentative and had a demoralizing effect on other officers. Meyer testified the officer had never been involved in negotiations other than as a voting member of the Police Officers Association.

Judge Kenneth M. Eymann took the case under consideration, but gave no indication on when a decision might be reached.

Pot-Testing Youth Values Police Trust

CLEARFIELD, Utah (UPI)—When police pick up marijuana and hashish in narcotics raids, they save it for high school senior Jeff Murray, 17, who feeds it to fruit flies to study the effects of the drugs on them.

"It would be so easy to collect the marijuana and start selling it," he said, "and some of the students have asked me to. But the police trust me and I'm going to keep it that way."

HELEN HELP US!

By HELEN BOTTEL

Lovable Little Brother Tells All And Always Gets In The Way

DEAR HELEN:

Big brothers got a big hand in your column. Now let's hear it for the little guys:

What Is A Little Brother?

A little brother is one who teases you unmercifully about your boy friend but as soon as you mention another guy, he comes up with, "What's the matter with . . . ?"

Really, who else would ask your newest fella "Are you going to marry my sister?" or tell someone special, "You can't sit there, that's Larry's chair!" (Larry is your other boyfriend).

He's the one who comforts you when you're sick in bed and even brings you a library book from elementary school.

The one who begs you for a nickel, promising to give you some of what he buys. Result: He gets the five baseball cards and you get the stale piece of bubblegum (which he expects back).

He tells you that you can't do anything right when you play kickball with him, but somehow the next day his friends all pile around the fence to watch you kick that ball.

He's at the age now where he hates girls and can't stand "mush," but sometimes he'll give you a quick hug — his sister of all people. You ask "why?" and he'll say, "Because I felt like it."

Who else would tell your father you ran over all the speakers when you only grazed one at the drive-in?

He is the wonderful excuse to go on the ferry, to the zoo, out roller skating on the sidewalk, and for eating that "awful" cotton candy (you love).

A little brother is the only one possible to blame for using your hair rollers as tunnels for his electric train.

Should you have a late date and come home to find something spread-eagle across your bed —guarantee it's a little brother.

Who gets hungry late at night and wants a pizza; puts artificial bugs and worms in the ice cube tray; uses your hair dryer because his "sheets are cold?"

You guessed it: One bright, bubbly, happy, though somewhat spoiled little brother you wouldn't trade for anyone else in the world. — TWO BIG SISTERS

DEAR HELEN: I have a boy friend who talks about breaking up, and then talks about getting married. What do you think of a guy like this? — V. W.

DEAR V.;

We-l-l-l, he's either talking himself into a future (with you) or else he's talking about two different girls. — H.

DEAR HELEN:

I disagree with "Mad Student." Teachers put in as much overtime as kids do, and besides that, they have to cope with students who are so blind they can't see that school is to help them.

Too bad that so many grow up believing school work is a pain instead of a privilege. If schools were suddenly closed, maybe they'd realize how much they now take for granted. — SCHOOL LOVER

SEW SIMPLE

Methods Of Tailoring Have Changed With Softer Looks

By EUNICE FARMER

DEAR EUNICE,

I have sewed for years and always enjoyed it but never so much as I do now. The fabrics are so beautiful they are irresistible, and the ready-made clothes so ugly. I wonder if that is the reason there is so much activity in home sewing. I used to look forward to the day when I could spend any amount I chose for my ready-made clothes. Today I consider it much more of a thrill to buy the nicest fabric available and do my own sewing.

I just started a tailoring course and being curious, I went to the library and started to do some research on tailoring. Much to my amazement, the teacher I am studying with doesn't teach tailoring the way the professional books explain. Do you think I am wise in continuing my lessons?

Mrs. J.C.C.

DEAR MRS. J.C.C.,

The sign of the times seems to bring changes in every field. Tailoring was once a very laborious thing and very few women were capable of doing it themselves with any amount of success. Years ago when women's clothes resembled men's, with menswear fabric and styling, it was necessary to tailor a woman's suit or coat just exactly like a man's garment would be tailored.

Today, with the softer look in women's clothes, we find more dressmaker styling and the hard finish fabrics have been replaced by fabrics with more texture and dimension. The fabrics have also resulted in a different styling that is more appropriate. For this reason, many of the old tailoring manuals have become obsolete.

It sounds like your teacher has up-dated her methods and the results are more "au courant". If you have seen any of the garments she has made, I am sure this will convince you that she is correct. It is much simpler for the home sewer and certainly more successful for today's look.

MRS. EDNA Bollinger, Louisville, Ky, is this week's Tailor Trix pressing board winner for her sewing suggestion:

"When your dress needs gathering, I have found an accurate, simple and very controlled method which I would like to share with your readers. After the first row of machine stitching on the right side of your fabric, don't cut your thread at the end of the row. Instead, continue stitching by lifting up the pressure foot, turning it at a right angle, take two stitches, lift up the foot again and turn to another right angle and machine stitch back to where you began. The second row of stitching will appear 1/4 inch below the first row (this row should be exactly on your 5/8 inch seamline). Now when you pull the bobbin threads together to ease the necessary amount, the threads won't pull out of the opposite end and is much easier to handle"

DEAR EUNICE,

What is a LaCoste type knit? Also, I have to lengthen my dress of this knit and since I saved the extra allowance I cut off last summer, I am wondering what would be the best way to add the extra length without having it look pieced?

MRS. Y.S.

DEAR MRS. Y.S..

LaCoste type knit is a polyester knit that has been associated with a manufacturer that makes exclusive sportswear. It is a pebbly surface much like a sharkskin finish. It is now available for the home sewer and is still best suited for sportswear.

As to the piece you have cut off your dress that you now wish to re-apply, carefully pin it in the same position, lapping it very slightly to avoid a gathered look. Machine stitch the two layers of fabric together, not in a regular type seam, but simply overlapping the fabric.

There are so many attractive braids, bindings and trims of polyester today, simply apply one of these over the seam you have just joined. You could repeat the trim for a belt, outlining the collar or sleeves and it will probably be more attractive than in its original form. Many times I have noticed that a garment that you had to use some creativity on turns out to be your greatest success.

For illustrated instructions on how to make professional looking bound buttonholes send a stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request for "Bound Buttonholes" to Eunice Farmer in care of the Independent-Journal.

Marin Open House Benefit Party To Be Held Friday In Sausalito

A party to benefit Marin Open House will be held Friday from 6 to 9 p.m. in the Portal Gallery of the Village Fair Building in Sausalito.

The open house benefit for Marin's drug treatment center will feature a jazz trio, wine tasting and buffet dinner.

Dr. Roger Smith, director of the center, will speak, and posters, prints, pottery, batiks, books, leather purses and flowers will be sold.

Tickets are available at Marin Open House, 1327 Lincoln Avenue in San Rafael and will be sold at the door.

NEW OFFICERS of Woodwardia Circle, Neighbors of Woodcraft, are Mmes. Edith Godair, guardian neighbor; Frank Mattos, past guardian neighbor; Ada Earwood, magician; Kenneth Jones, attendant; Jessie Leavell, banker; Albert Sabel, clerk; Lawrence Hancock, captain of guards; Esther Lewis, musician; Josephine Bright, flag bearer; Mattos, Halsmer Ongman and Poster Lawrence, managers; Manuel Azevedo, outer sentinel; Mary Silva, inner sentinel; Rose Solari, correspondent; Ada Kane, senior guardian; and Carl Brooks, deputy clerk.

Dr. Charles Musante is advisor.

MRS. CHARLES R. Thurman of Greenbrae has been presented a certificate of appreciation by the San Francisco Bay Area Girl Scout Council.

Mrs. Thurman was honored for seven years of volunteer service as an artist and designer for the Girl Scout council.

THE FINAL program in a series of four lectures on "Man and His Neighbors," will be held at 8 p.m. Tuesday at Hill Junior High School Library in Novato. The program, featuring multi-ethnic studies in Novato, is being presented by Novato Branch of the American Association of University Women and the Marin YWCA.

Speakers will be Raleigh Floyd, president of Novatans for Racial Equality and chairman of the Citizens Multi-ethnic Studies Committee, and Mrs. Carlin Nelson, teacher at West Novato School and Kay Kaufman, a teacher at Hill Junior High School, both members of the Novato Unified School District Multi-Ethnic Studies Committee.

A TOTAL of $3,000 was raised for the Greek Orthodox Church of Marin County building fund by the recent St. Valentine's Day and Mardi Gras party at the Corte Madera Recreation Center. The party was sponsored by the Ladies Philopthos Society and the parish council.

A COUNSELING session for parents will be hosted by the Hill Junior High School Parent-Teacher Association in the school auditorium in Novato at 8 p.m. Tuesday.

"What Course For Your Student?" will be the title of the program and will give parents an opportunity to learn about required courses and electives during secondary school years in Novato for the 1971-72 year, according to Mrs. Howard Crabtree, P-TA president.

Ninth graders will meet with high school counselors Thursday, to learn more about course selections for the coming year.

FRANK TAINTER will be speaker and auctioneer for the Antique Study Group of the Novato Newcomers Club auction to be held Wednesday at 9:30 a.m. at the home of Mrs. Charles Yates in Novato.

Articles to be auctioned will be brought to Mrs. Yates' home on Tuesday. Reservations chairmen are Mmes. Edgar Garland and Yates.

OFFICERS AND trustees for Belvedere Nursery School Corporation were elected recently.

Re-elected for 1971 were Mmes. Richard Otter, president; William Hynes, vice president and Gardner Baldwin, treasurer. Mrs. Robert Flint succeeds Mrs. Harry Brownson as secretary. Mrs. Robert Bastian is executive director.

New trustees to serve three-year terms are Mmes. John Lorenzen, Charles McDaneld and Thomas Uhry. Continuing on the board are Mmes. Harry Brownson and F. J. Dreyfous. Retiring are Mmes. Mark Noble, Donald Bekins and B. G. Falk, junior past president.

THE PROBLEMS of overpopulation will be the subject of Tuesday's public meeting of the Mill Valley Branch of the American Association of University Women.

Virgil Bozarth, a representative of Zero Population Growth, will be the speaker at the gallery of the Mill Valley Library at 10 a.m. Bozarth is a retired junior high school principal from Martinez who devotes full time to the Zero Population Growth organization.

Miss Burman Is A Bride

Penelope Anne Burman and Kenneth Wayne Casey were married Feb. 11 in the home of friends in Davis.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward James Burman of Kentfield, and the bridegroom's parents are Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Leon Casey of Sacramento.

Penny was graduated from Redwood High School and the University of California at Davis. She is a kindergarten teacher in Woodland. The bride is the sister of Heidi Burman of Sun Valley, Idaho, and Gretchen Burman of Kentfield. Mrs. James A. Burman of Oakland is her local grandmother.

Kenneth was graduated from McClatchy High School in Sacramento and attended U. C. at Davis, where he is now in the educational television department.

The couple are living in Dixon.

CHRIS PILARA became the bride of Gary D. Story in a ceremony at Trinity Lutheran Church in San Rafael. Her parents are Mr. and Mrs. Leonard J. Pilara of San Anselmo, and he is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Luther C. Story of Dallas, Tex. A reception at Dominic's restaurant in San Rafael followed the ceremony.

Women Continue To Get Less Pay Than Men

NEW YORK (UPI) — The wage gap between men and women in the United States has been widening in recent years, with women getting a shorter and shorter end of the paycheck, reports a study by the Chase Manhattan Bank. The bank attributes the decline to several factors, among them that women are generally employed in lower-paying, lower-level jobs than men. Also that the marked increase of women in the labor force has created greater competition for the jobs open to them, tending to depress wages even more in those jobs.

Ballet Aquacade Tryouts Are Set

Swim tryouts for the 26th annual Marin Ballet Aquacade will be held from 1 to 3 p.m. March 6 and 13 in the girls' gymnasium at Sir Francis Drake High School.

Girls in the eighth through 12th grades wishing to try out should bring a swimsuit, bathing cap with chin strap and a towel. Swimmers are selected on their ability to perform basic stunts, strokes, sculling and endurance.

Mrs. William Randolph of Kentfield, swim coordinator, will supervise the tryouts. Judges will be the coaches for the various swim routines, Mmes. Paul Alioto, Peter J. Brajkovich, Robert Finn, William Hillebrand, Steve Minutoli, Christopher Scales, and Miss Joann Elkin.

Registration committee for tryouts will be Mmes. R. A. Bacci, Clarence Bohn, D. S. Bordner, Bryon Box, William Hillebrand and David M. Sullivan, Ballet Aquacade president.

STUDENT ARTIST — Dolph Jones, a San Rafael High School senior whose art work is on display in the city schools administration building, examines one of his creations in the high school studio.

'Turned On' To Be Just Alive

By LAURA DEVENDORF

Not all youth is infected by the "Bay Area mood," a term coined by Charles Maurice, art instructor at San Rafael High School, to cover young persons with a bored and "turned off' attitude.

And he should know. He works with a small student element whose attitudes are just the opposite.

Among them is Dolph Jones, a 17-year-old senior, whose one-man show continues through Tuesday at the San Rafael Schools Administration Building, Third and E streets.

Judged on size alone, the 51-piece show — ranging from a subtle design painted on a small ceramic tile to a painting that approaches wall size — is hardly the product of a lazy or indifferent mind. And this represents only about half his two-year output.

The ideas and techniques with which he experiments are similarly open and energetic. One canvas is done by floating machine oil in house paint. Another is partly burned away with a blow torch.

Jones may create a cool geometric design from wood chips and paint or a bizarre drawing of a figure shaped like a bowling pin with a terrifying, sawtoothed fish forming the face and head.

At one moment he may turn out a convincing bit of realism, such as the sea diver inspired by his interest in skin diving. Another time anything will do for a painting surface, such as the back of an old pull down classroom map on which Jones painted progressions of watery nudes.

Maurice describes him as "... a person who finds materials and puts them to work in unorthodox combinations. He's very innovative with supplies." And from all this you might expect a more flamboyant personality than the quiet and pleasant person you find earnestly working on an etching in the cluttered school studio.

Jones gives the impression of being much like serious artists twice his age who are too busy "doing" to do much talking about art and who would rather let their work speak for them.

Perhaps, as the saying goes, "If he could say it in words he wouldn't have to paint it." Anyway, Maurice says that Jones "disdains verbalizing about his work." And when comments from others get uncomfortably drippy with praise, "He just walks away," Maurice said.

What comes through in his painting is a talent so awakened to the many possibilities that might be achieved, that it can hardly wait to try the next thing. It's a sort of reflection of someone "turned on" to being alive and constructively enjoying it.

Marin City Development Idea To HUD

A contract which would give the Marin Urban Development Association exclusive development rights in Marin City has been referred to the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development for review.

The action was taken Wednesday at a joint meeting of the Marin County Housing Authority and Redevelopment Agency boards, according to Wallace K. Shepherd, executive director of both organizations.

The Marin City-based development group is seeking to replace the California Development Corp. which has held development rights in the community for seven years, Shepherd said.

The housing and redevelopment boards will await HUD approval before giving final authorization to the development association, Shepherd said.

The Marin County Housing Authority also:

SOIL TESTS — Approved a $1,000 contract with Soil Engineers Harding, Miller, Lawson and Associates to investigate several small landslides which have occurred near Marin City housing units.

PERSONNEL — Approved recommendations from the state personnel board to increase salary ranges for executive director (to $17,000-21,000), deputy director (to $14,000-17,000) and housing manager (to $9,000-11,000) and create a new post, tenant relations officer, with a salary from $7,800 to $9,480.

STUDY — Authorized a San Francisco consulting firm, E. M.Schaffran and Co., to study public housing needs in Marin. Cost of the survey has not been set.

LEASED — Applied to the department of housing and urban development for 300 more units of leased housing in the county.

EVICTION — Voted to evict Willie C. Smith, owner of the Marin City Coffee Shop (located in a building owned by the authority), if he fails to remove a pool table from the premises. Shepherd said installation of the table violated the terms of Smith's lease.

ART REVIEW

Why Gravestones? Ugly Ones, Too

Eight — count them — eight, small, ugly and very genuine gravestones are the sum and substance of the current College of Marin Gallery show. And to go along with them is the following explanation:

"A gallery space always influences the receptivity and understanding of the works of art within it. Each show is affected differently. A work may seem more profound or whimsical, large or small, well or poorly made, etc., etc., than the same work located elsewhere, or, any two works of art may relate differently in one space than they do in another."

This heady hunk of language introduces a series of six College of Marin exhibitions, each lasting about a week, by the Ant Hill, a group of University of California artists.

The local group includes Ben Blackwell, Nancy Evans, Leonard Hunter, James Pomeroy and Michael Wright. Together they claim credit for collecting the eight specimens from a tombstone factory. Collecting is about as far as it goes too. Little alteration has been made other than coloring, an etched rose on one of them.

Presumably, the Ant Hill has selected the grossest samples from the factory. They are collectively and individually awful-from the huge fat marble pillow cut with flowers and the words "Eternal Rest" to a singularly bad attempt at being sculptural with big jutting geometric shapes unbelievably finalized with delicate flowers.

Another is cut with an open grand piano, the masks of comedy and tragedy and a bar of music.

Relating all this back to the group's official statement, the gravestones make their point. You just can't be "receptive" to them in a gallery the way you would be in a cemetery. They are "affected differently" and whereas graves don't usually provoke laughter, seeing them in a gallery environment makes them grotesquely funny.

But is it worth a trip to a gallery just to acknowledge a point well made or to experience this brief surprise? It would be if these were really "works of art," or otherwise worthwhile in themselves. — LD

Topless Business Under Fire

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Owner Ernie Byrd of Clancy's restaurants said it increased business 200 per cent when his waitresses started wearing see-through blouses, tights and net stockings.

But some of the waitresses revolted Friday and threw up picket lines.

"Would you want your wife or sister to go topless?" one placard read.

Mrs. Pat Shifflete, one of the pickets, said she and the other waitresses did not mind dancers at the Clancy's restaurant in southeast Washington going topless, but "waitresses get grabbed."

"Many of us are mothers and we don't want nudity shoved down our throats," she said.

The general manager of the chain of six restaurants, Joe Cannon, said the move was ordered because "we have to keep up with the times."

"They have a preference of wearing a bra or not, or wearing pasties or not," Cannon said. "This has been going on in Washington for the last several years. There's nothing immoral about it."

Muskie Director

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Washington attorney James S. Campbell has been named director of domestic policy development for the unannounced campaign for the presidency of Sen. Edmund S. Muskie, D-Maine.

Rec Panel In Favor Of City-Operated Restroom

The Sausalito Recreation Commission has gone on record favoring a city-operated public restroom for the downtown area, City Engineer Norman Wohlschlaeger reported.

He said the commission, which met Thursday, will recommend to the city council that the restroom be located adjacent to the ticket booth at the entrance to municipal parking lot No. 1 — close to both Bridgeway businesses and the Golden Gate Bridge's ferry dock.

The commission will also recommend that the city council include $100,000 for a new Sausalito youth center building in its 1971-72 budget, according to Wohlschlaeger.

The youth center is now located in the Old Star of the Sea Catholic Church property which is up for sale, he said.

Two-Car Crash Injures Three

A two-car head-on crash in the 700 block of Tiburon Boulevard at 7:45 a.m. yesterday injured three persons, none seriously, Tiburon sheriff's deputies reported.

Treated at Marin General Hospital were Lyle Lang, 64, of 1401 Casa Buena Drive, Corte Madera, for face and neck cuts; Irving E. Levine, 62, of 74 San Rafael Avenue, Belvedere, for a cut and possibly broken nose, and John Levine, 16, also of the San Rafael Avenue address, for pain in both hips.

Hughes' Wife Seeking Divorce

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Despite her refusal to answer questions, rumors continued today that Jean Peters, estranged wife of billionaire Howard Hughes, would marry 20th Century-Fox executive Stanley Hough, when she obtains a divorce.

A Hughes spokesman said the billionaire has "given his blessing" to the couple, but that no divorce had been obtained.

A friend of Miss Peters said the former actress probably will file for divorce in Nevada where it will be unnecessary for Hughes to appear in the legal action.

EXEC. CAR
'70 BUICK SKYLARK
$3595

Here's as close-to-new as you can find a 1970 Buick Skylark Custom 2-Dr. sport coupe.

Driven personally by our office manager—this clean little Skylark has 10,000 miles but you'd never know it to look at the car.

Burnished brown exterior with white vinyl top and burnished brown custom interior. Fully equipped including factory air conditioning, power steering, power brakes, w/w tires and all the Skylark custom extras.

Over 40,000 miles and 4-years left on the GM new car guarantee. This car has never been registered so the purchaser will be the first and only owner of record. 0Z100243.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. THEODORE R. VAN DELLEN

Migraine Headaches May Have Allergic Or Emotional Origin

When I was in medical school, most headaches were considered to be migraine. But with each passing decade, specific forms of head pain were separated from the group and, as a result, the real (classical) migraine no longer is a common disorder. The offshoots occur more often and include cluster and stress headache.

THERE IS A possibility that migraine will be subdivided further into different classifications according to cause. Many physicians also believe that an allergic migraine exists. In these instances, chocolate, milk, wheat and pork are the most common offenders The culprit in food is thought to be tyramine, an enzyme that triggers the brain to release a chemical that constricts blood vessels initially and then dilates the arteries. The pulsating pain of migraine is caused by dilation or stretching of the vessels.

Several good reports have appeared on the beneficial effects of avoiding the foods mentioned. Chocolate is eliminated first. If headache does not develop, chocolate is not the culprit. On the other hand, if pain returns avoid milk and any item that contains milk. Next eliminate wheat, pork, etc. When headaches persist despite eliminating certain foods, allergy probably is not the culprit.

IN CERVICAL MIGRAINE, a spur on one of the vertebra presses upon a blood vessel going to the brain. A case was reported recently but it is not a common cause. Special X-rays were needed to detect the defect and surgery was followed by a cure.

Severe migraine also may be of an emotional origin, especially in women. Many victims are perfectionists and develop headache when their plans do not materialize or they undergo a heavy strain or unhappiness. Perhaps they have a hippie daughter or an alcoholic mate.

As with allergy, it is difficult to explain why chocolate or an emotional disturbance selects the vessels of one side of the brain. After all, typical migraine is one-sided.

HORMONES AND HAIR

J. J. writes: What would cause a 50-year-old woman to sprout fine white hairs all over her face and neck? She has been taking hormones for about three years.

REPLY

At this age, unwanted hair often is a problem even among women who do not take hormones. I do not know, however, what hormone was taken and in what dosage. Meanwhile, she could shave or use a bleach or a wax depilatory. Electrolysis is not practical, considering the amount of hair that is present.

HOT FLASH ON THIGH

J. D. L. writes: What causes a hot flash on the thigh? I can be sitting, standing or driving, when this hot flash or pain hits my left thigh. The minute I rub my thigh, the sensation goes away.

REPLY

Since this occurs in the same place, I assume it must come from a nerve. Causes of vague or unusual symptoms are sometimes difficult to track down.

UNTREATED BURSITIS

S. A. writes: What is the outcome if bursitis goes untreated?

REPLY

Some get better, some worse, and the remainder continue to have pain and disability. Untreated bursitis of the shoulder may be followed by a stiff or frozen shoulder. Our leaflet on bursitis can be obtained by sending stamped self-addressed envelope with request.

Venue Change Ruled Out In Ohta Killing

SANTA CRUZ, Calif. (UPI)— A superior court judge has refused a request to move the trial of John Lindley Frazier, accused killer of five persons at a mountaintop mansion.

Defense attorney James Jackson had sought the change on grounds that the shaggy ex-mechanic could not get a fair trial because of local hostility and the publicity given the case.

Superior Court Judge Charles F. Franich conceded there had been some unfortunate publicity prior to the grand jury's indictment of Frazier, 24, on charges of killing Dr. Victor Ohta, his wife, two sons, and secretary.

But Franich said he felt there was no place in California that would be any different from Santa Cruz because "in these troubled times, there is fear and emotion everywhere."

Philosophy Of Jeff Peters, And California Tax Costs

We are unfamiliar with the reading habits of Richard Milhous Nixon. None of the material about him seems to mention them. So we don't know whether he reads O. Henry.

His predecessor as President, Lyndon Baines Johnson, reportedly is an omnivorous reader. But again, we are unable to learn whether Johnson reads O. Jenry. It would seem rather likely, since William Sidney Porter — who wrote as O. Henry — spent some time in Johnson's home state of Texas and many of his short stories had Texas locales.

IF EITHER NIXON or Johnson has read O. Henry, however, he may have passed up "The Atavism of John Tom Little Bear," one of that author's Jeff Peters stories.

For those others not familiar with O. Henry, we should mention that Jeff Peters was a con man — but an amusing, even delightful one— who appeared as a principal character in quite a few O. Henry stories. He also was a philosopher.

A sample of his philosophy was used to introduce "The Atavism of John Tom Little Bear." The subject which led indirectly into the tale of Little Bear was some then-current disturbance in the Philippines. To quote the story:

"'All them tropical races,' said Jeff, 'could be run out better with their own jockeys up. The tropical man knows what he wants. All he wants is a season ticket to the cock fights and a pair of Western Union climbers to go up the bread-fruit trees. The Anglo-Saxon wants him to learn to conjugate and wear suspenders. He'll be happiest in his own way.'"

THE ASPIRATIONS of the tropical man have heightened somewhat since O. Henry wrote that story at the turn of the century. The tropical man in what was once French Indochina no doubt wants more than a cock-fight ticket and a pair of climbers. But what should be evident to President Nixon, and should have been evident to President Johnson, is that the Indochinese — be he Vietnamese, Cambodian or Laotian — does not want to be turned into a miniature imitation of American or European. He'd like to run his own affairs, in his own way.

As Jeff Peters philosophized, "All them tropical races could be run out better with their own jockeys up."

And when you get right down to the nub of the matter, the reason the United States has an army fighting in Indochina, with a weekly death toll and a host of attendant problems that wrack the United States itself, is simply because we wouldn't let them run the race that way.

We might all be a whole lot better off if Lyndon Johnson and Richard Nixon had been avid readers of the light fiction of O. Henry. They might have given thought to Jeff Peters' homely horse-sense.

AS WE HAVE remarked from time to time before, living in California costs a little extra.

We think it's worth it. The climate is grand, the scenery is wonderful.

But if California's government is superior, we have failed to notice it. However, it costs more too.

Latest testimony to this is in a table compiled by the U. S. Chamber of Commerce from Department of Commerce statistics. It shows taxes per capita and for each $1,000 of income in each state for the fiscal years 1968 and 1969 (the Department of Commerce is always a year or two behind getting these figures tabulated).

CALIFORNIA WAS second to New York in per capita taxes both years.

In 1968, New York's per capita taxes came to $503.49, and California's to $488.46. Only five states had per capita taxes over $400 that year, and the national average was $338.09.

In 1969, New York's per capita taxes went up to $575.51, and California's to $539.99. In 13 states, the per capita take exceeded $400 that year, and the national average climbed to $379.94.

In taxes per $1,000 of personal income, California was third highest both years. In 1968, Hawaii took $135.36 per capita; Wyoming, $135, and California $133.73. The national average was $108.10.

Wyoming put on the brakes the next year. Hawaii stayed in the top spot at $140.96 per $1.000 of income, followed by New York at $140.49 and California at $137.09. The national average was $112.10.

WE NOTICED that another state with a salubrious climate (though without the wide variation of scenery found in California) was well below the national average. Floridans paid $329.86 per capita, $106.79 per $1,000 of personal income, in fiscal 1969.

So it would appear it needn't cost more in taxes just because California is a nice place to live.

Camelot Reappraised, 10 Years After

(Reprinted from Wall Street Journal)

Ten years after the dawn of Camelot, a number of liberal commentators have been looking back on the Kennedy administration and discovering they do not like what they see. Gerald Clarke in the New Republic and Anthony Lewis in the New York Times both recall President Kennedy's "jingoistic" inaugural address, and see him making the initial mistakes that led to Vietnam and subsequent agonies.

Yet both Mr. Clarke and Mr. Lewis cling to the belief that had President Kennedy lived he would have found some way or other to lead us out of that agony. For was he not so amply endowed with vigor, grace, eloquence, idealism, flexibility, and brilliance — all of the virtues which our best people cherish?

The real question, though, is whether our best people have been taught to cherish the wrong virtues. The most fateful mistakes of the Kennedy years were made not despite that administration's virtues but because of them. They were the mistakes of too much vigor and too little restraint, too much grace and too little earthiness, too much eloquence and too little thoughtfulness, too much idealism and too little realism, too much flexibility and too little patience, too much brilliance and too little common sense.

The virtues of the Kennedy administration were the virtues of the intellectual as opposed to those of the common man, the virtues of a high civilization rather than a democratic one. Now, we happen to much admire intellectual virtues, and to sympathize with the thirst for a higher level of taste and culture. But we fear that the nation's "best people," having achieved a level of education and intellectualization that is high but not profound, have come to overlook the value of more pedestrian virtues and to ignore the dangers of the higher ones.

Precisely because we have no other choice, we must understand that rationality can mislead, that elegant logic can be fragile, that brilliance of mind is no real substitute for wisdom of experience. If we can learn that much from what we have gone through, then the torments of the '60s will not have been entirely in vain.

Poll Informative About Students

I have a feeling that the results of the most admired-least admired poll at Redwood H.S. told us a great deal more about the students than it did about their selections. I feel it also reflects upon the caliber of teaching there as well.

When a comedian and a draft evader rank near the top and the President and Vice President at the bottom, there is something drastically wrong with the students sense of values, their reasoning powers and their educations.

If further clues are needed, look at their views on religion and morality. If these kids are our best hope for the future, America's chances for survival are slim.

Bagley Proposal Not Tax Increase

I noticed the letter of Mr. A. Segale commenting on my AB 268 in the Feb. 2 Independent-Journal. I want to thank him for his "bouquet" to me for supporting public transportation.

But I was concerned with his "brickbat" for the "increase in gas taxes". Although some legislators feel that punitive taxes on gasoline would not be such a bad thing, AB 268 does not become involved in this issue. The proposal simply attempts to "unfreeze" $90 million for public transportation for the State Highway Fund, at local option.

The measure imposes a 4 per cent ($.04) per $1 sales tax on gasoline, but reduces the existing $.07 per gallon excise tax to $.06. According to the State Board of Equalization, a 4 per cent sales tax on the average price of gasoline amounts to $90 million. The $.01 per gallon reduction in the excise tax amounts to $90 million. Thus, the total effect of the sales tax increase is to equal the excise tax reduction. This was the genesis of the "no tax increase" statement.

The sales tax is calculated on the base price, before existing federal and state excise taxes. . .

The importance, of course, of this proposal is that we could thus "free" $90 million per year for local option use in the development of balanced transportation systems. This would give our counties and cities real transportation alternatives and would to the extent used also relieve the property taxpayer of the cost of these local systems.

I hope this information takes some of the "brick" out of his "brickbat".

ART BUCHWALD

Every Life Has Its Secrets — Only The Computer Knows

WASHINGTON — Somewhere in this great land of ours there is a computer stashed full of information on you. Whenever you want a bank loan, a credit card or a job, this computer will, in a matters of seconds, give some total stranger almost every detail of your life.

Unfortunately for most of us, the computer is unable to discriminate between fact and malicious gossip, and once the information is fed into it, it stays there forever.

The other day I was considering going into a car pool with three other men, Hicks, Kroll and Anderson. I have known these men casually for years, but when you join a car pool, you really want to know what they're like.

SO I ASKED a friend of mine in the retail credit business if I could use his computer for a few hours.

He agreed and I went down there and typed out: WHAT DO YOU KNOW ABOUT HICKS, AL, WHO LIVES AT 43 LOVER'S LEAP TERRACE?

The computer started chattering: HICKS, AL, BORN OCT. 23, 1925, BOTTLE-FED, BED-WETTED UNTIL 7 YEARS OLD.

I typed back: FORGET ABOUT CHILDHOOD AND GIVE ME SOME OTHER FACTS.

The computer replied: HICKS HAS A DOMINEERING WIFE WHOM THE WHOLE WORLD THINKS IS AS SWEET AS MAPLE SYRUP. WHENEVER SHE GETS MAD AT HIM, HE STARTS BITING HIS NAILS.

I typed back: I'M NOT INTERESTED IN THAT. WHAT'S THE CONDITION OF HIS CAR?

THE COMPUTER paused for a few second and then tapped out: HICKS OWNS 1957 BUICK CONVERTIBLE FOR WHICH HE IS STILL PAYING $80 A MONTH. IT HAS BEEN IN THE GARAGE 33 TIMES AND HAS COST HIM $1,500 IN REPAIRS. TWO OF THE SPRINGS IN THE BACK SEAT ARE BROKEN AND HE NEEDS NEW SNOW TIRES. HE HAS THE CAR WASHED ONCE A MONTH.

It added: HICKS NEVER CHEATS ON HIS WIFE, THOUGH HE THINKS ABOUT IT A LOT.

THAT'S ENOUGH! I told the computer. NOW GIVE ME A RUNDOWN ON KROLL, H.G., WHO LIVES AT 1 LION'S DEN CIRCLE.

The tapes in the computer started turning furiously and finally stopped. The teletype began to chatter: KROLL, H.G., HAD STRONG MOTHER WHO DRESSED HIM IN SILK SAILOR SUITS UNTIL HE WAS 13 YEARS OLD.

GET ON WITH IT, I typed impatiently.

HE OWNS 1970 MERCURY FOUR-DOOR SEDAN WHICH HAS SPECIAL SILK SEAT COVERS. LIKES TO DRESS UP IN HIS WIFE'S CLOTHES WHEN CHILDREN ARE AT CAMP.

THAT'S ENOUGH! I typed angrily. WHAT ABOUT ANDERSON, E.L., 198 DOVER CLIFFS?

ANDERSON IS HAVING A BIG THING WITH A LADY COSMETICS BUYER FROM LORD & TAYLOR.

WHAT ABOUT HIS CAR? I demanded.

THEY DON'T USE HIS CAR. THEY USE HERS.

I DIDN'T MEAN THAT. IS HIS AUTOMOBILE SAFE FOR OUR CAR POOL?

IT IS NOW, BUT IF MRS. ANDERSON EVER FINDS OUT ABOUT THE LADY BUYER . . .

THANK YOU VERY MUCH, I typed. YOU'VE BEEN MOST HELPFUL.

DON'T MENTION IT. OH, BY THE WAY, WHEN ARE YOU GOING TO STOP BEATING YOUR WIFE?

Squeeze Is On Gunnar Jarring As Cease-Fire Deadline Nears

UNITED NATIONS — The precious days are running out, with little more than two weeks before another deadline at the brink of renewed conflict in the Middle East. The man in the middle of the seesaw, Ambassador Gunnar Jarring, is more aware of the turn of the screw than perhaps even the principals in this ancient quarrel.

It is on Jarring that blame will be heaped if the fighting is resumed on the Suez Canal at the expiration of the one-month extension of the cease-fire. At the start of his fourth year as negotiator-mediator-pacifier — however his difficult role may be defined — Jarring is standing firm against the pressures playing from every side.

NOT SO LONG ago, American policy makers on the Middle East were concerned because Jarring, as they saw it, was too cautious. They were anxious for him to become more the mediator and even the initiator rather than to serve merely as a postoffice for exchange of positions between the Arabs and the Israelis.

Now that he seems to have enlarged the scope of his assignment, they are encouraged. Jarring has not, in fact, overstepped the bounds of his narrowly defined position. But if there is no movement prior to March 7, the risk of a renewed war cannot simply be brushed aside with the conviction that neither Egypt nor Israel wants to start up the shooting again, although from all reports this is true.

To break the stalemate while there is still time, Israel must make a declaration on the occupied territories. Egypt must come closer to declaring the status to be accorded Israel in a peace settlement. What Jarring seems to be saying — he has scrupulously refrained from any public statement —is that the door is open and one or the other must go first. Since the occupied territories are the end-all and be-all for Egypt, it would seem that Israel, by taking a position on the territories, however limited it might be in the first instance, could bring action.

FROM JERUSALEM have come complaints that Jarring in recent days did overstep the bounds of his mission. He is accused by Deputy Premier Ugal Allon of seeking to be a mediator whereas his job is simply that of passing messages back and forth. The complaints may be merely for the record, showing the flag over the lands held since the end of the six-day war in 1967.

But Americans at the U.N. deeply involved in the middle east tangle fear it may be more than that — heels dug in against relinquishing any of the conquered lands. It reflects almost certainly the divisions within the government of Prime Minister Golda Meir.

Consistently since the end of the war a voice of sanity has been heard. Former Prime Minister David Ben Gurion has said repeatedly that Israel must prepare to return the conquered lands — or all except portions such as the Golan Heights, clearly identified as essential to Israeli security — if there is ever to be peace in the Middle East.

But Americans at the U.N. deeply involved in the Middle East tangle fear it may be more than that — heels dug in against relinquishing any of the conquered lands. It reflects almost certainly the divisions within the government of Prime Minister Golda Meir.

THE DEADLINE may be, as most Israelis contend, of no significance. Since neither side will start the shooting, quiet will prevail, as it has for the past seven months, into the indefinite future.

Something like this conviction is shared by Asst. Secy. of State Joseph Sisco, who has played so skillful and effective a part in implementing the Rogers peace initiative. It may turn out that way — long months of no war, no peace. But there are profoundly irrational forces, pent-up frustrations, which could shatter this prospect overnight.

WINDOW ON THE WORLD

Long-Divided Pakistan Moves Nearer Collapse

By PHIL NEWSOM
UPI Foreign News Analyst

Tragedy heaped upon tragedy is bringing closer the possible break up of Pakistan.

It is a country that never should have come into being in the first place. One thousand miles of an unfriendly India separate East and West Pakistan, which have no natural bond except their Moslem religion. That is the first tragedy.

A second is an unbridled population growth which makes East Pakistan the most thickly populated place of its size on earth. It has been said that if the United States had a population of equal density, it would have 4.5 billion people.

A third was last fall's cyclone and tidal wave which officially took more than 150,000 lives and may have taken twice that, and led East Pakistanis to charge the central government with "gross neglect, callous inattention and utter indifference."

National elections last December named a new national assembly which is to meet early next month with the drafting of a new constitution its most urgent task. When that task has been completed and the new constitution "authenticated" by President Agha Mohammed Yahya Khan, the country is to return to civilian rule.

But whether such a return is possible or even whether Pakistan can continue to exist in its present form depends upon the outcome of a struggle between two men, Sheik Mujibur Rahman whose Awami League won a landslide victory in East Pakistan and more than half the seats in the 313-man national assembly, and Zulfikar Ali Bhutto, whose leftwing Pakistan People's party won 86 seats in West Pakistan.

Bhutto is a former foreign minister who favors a strong central government. Sheik Mujibur seeks full, regional autonomy for East Pakistan. Both men served time in jail for their opposition to the former strongman government of President Mohammad Ayub Khan.

THE TWO MEN appear at hopeless odds.

Sheik Mujibur has declared the Awami League will accept nothing less than his six-point program —even at the point of guns.

Bhutto said that without assurances of room for compromise his party will boycott national assembly sessions.

Sheik Mujibur's six-point program would strip the central government of authority over East Pakistan except for defense and foreign affairs.

East Pakistan would collect its own taxes and would set up currency controls to prevent a flight of capital from east to west. East Pakistan would retain all its own foreign earnings and would have its own militia.

REMEMBER WHEN?

20 YEARS AGO

Feb. 20, 1951

Marin County supervisors fired County Fire Chief Camillo Mello and hired Charles R. Reilley as his replacement.

Sausalito School District board voted to hire Paul J. Leonard, president of San Francisco State College, to make an instructional survey of the school system for a $1,500 fee.

New Breed Emerges Among Architects

CLEVELAND (UPI)—A college gymnasium made from a geodesic dome and a government office building with an enclosed garden instead of corridors are nearing completion in this city's downtown.

Both were designed by Thomas Zung, 36, who claims to be one of a new generation of "anonymous architects."

Zung, a native of Shanghai, grew up in New York City and trained in his profession in the studios of famed architect Edward Durrell Stone. He came to Cleveland to set up his own office after he studied the recent history of construction in about 50 cities and decided "Cleveland was so far down, it had no way to go but up."

"And evidence of that is the fact that my new Public Utilities Building is the first building the city has put up in the downtown area in 47 years," Zung said in an interview.

"It's really two buildings joined by an atrium, or a completely enclosed garden," Zung said. He said the garden would have a reflecting pool in the center under the skylight.

"The building is designed without corridors. The walls and the partitions separating working areas in the large rooms will all be of glass," Zung said.

"Sometimes to go from one office to another, the city employes will walk through a garden. And when the people come in to enjoy the garden, they can see their mayor conferring with their utilities director."

The gymnasium, part of a growing downtown campus for five-year-old Cleveland State University, is a variation on the pure geodesic dome invented by architectural pioneer Buckminster Fuller, and used in the design of the American Pavilion at Expo '67 in Montreal.

The pure geodesic dome uses hundreds of interlocking and completely interchangeable rods or tubes.

"It's a functional idea —a skin over a simple framework," Zung said. "But with a pure geodesic dome, we'd have a gym 50 feet high -and no one's going to throw a basketball that high. It's just a lot of extra air to heat or cool."

Zung's dome is made of aluminum tubes, but they are not interchangeable. The Ford Foundation has financed the research into the conversion of the dome, in hopes the form might prove economical and suitable for other colleges and universities.

The architect maintains he has no desire to be "the master builder —building monuments to himself."

"We're leaving behind the idea that you put up a building on one corner that says 'Look at me, I'm pretty!' and then go to the opposite corner and put up another building that says: 'Hey, look at me, I'm prettier!'

"That sort of thing led to a chaotic environment and an anxious architecture," Zung said.

"We're thinking now of how the building fits into the pre-existing surroundings — so much so that the city has become the building and the building is the detail."

"The anonymous architects are replacing the anxious architects."

Zung himself feels his work has fulfilled his hope for it.

"I became an architect because I wanted to perform a service related to the arts and because I felt, of all the major professions, architecture uniquely offers hope. You go to a doctor out of fear —fear of death or disease. You go to a lawyer in fear of financial loss, of death or of a suit.

"But you go to an architect out of hope —the hope you'll make money from the building he designs for you, or the hope you'll be able to build your dream house, or the hope you'll be able to enclose space, in such a way that it will uplift you."

Deputy DA Quits To Join Firm

Gary T. Ragghianti, 26, a deputy district attorney in Marin, has resigned to enter private practice.

The resignation is effective next Friday.

Ragghianti, of 201 D Street, San Rafael, will join the San Rafael law firm of Conn, Bryner and Birkie.

He joined the district attorney's staff in February 1969, replacing Robert A. Birkie, whom he now joins in private practice.

No successor to Ragghianti has been named.

Transit Issue To Get Board's Ear

A resolution urging the Golden Gate Bridge District not to use the Northwestern Pacific Railroad right-of-way through Mill Valley for a rapid transit corridor will be considered Monday when the Mill Valley School District board meets at 8 p.m. at Park School.

The board ordered the resolution prepared at a special meeting Thursday. A similar resolution will be considered by the Mill Valley City Council March 1.

Also on the school board agenda is a progress report on sale of the 1.68-acre Harvard Avenue property.

Satellites Held Pollution Weapon

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—Spy-in-the-sky satellites can be used in the battle against air pollution, according to Air Force Secretary Robert Seamen Jr.

He told the Commonwealth Club of California Friday that military and space technology is an important national asset which can be used to provide important solutions to domestic problems.

He said that by 1973, a sophisticated satellite could be used to measure air pollution all over the world and pinpoint its causes.

Health Warning

LONDON (UPI) —A proposed bill which would compel British tobacco manufacturers to print health warnings on cigarette packs received an unopposed second reading Friday in the House of Commons.

Government Mounts Alcoholism Program

WASHINGTON (UPI) —At long last, the U. S. government is mounting a serious attack on a disease that costs more lives each year than the Vietnam war: alcoholism.

Alcoholism afflicts an estimated 9 million Americans and causes 30,000 deaths annually. It is responsible for 37 per cent of all fatal highway accidents, a statistic that resulted in government-sponsored conferences this week on that part of the problem alone.

The cost to industry is about $4 billion a year in lost man-hours of producton.

Officials rate it the nation's No. 3 health problem, surpassed only by cancer and heart disease.

Through the National Institutes of Health, the federal government has been spending more than $1 billion a year to combat cancer, heart disease and dozens of other ailments.

Until now, however, only a relatively small sum — about $10 million a year — was available for federal support of the fight against alcoholism.

On the last day of 1970, President Nixon signed a bill that had been nursed through Congress by Sen. Harold E. Hughes, D-Iowa, a recovered alcoholic.

The Hughes Act establishes a new National Institute of Alcohol Abuse and Alcoholism, which will operate out of Bethesda, Md., under the aegis of the National Institute of Mental Health.

It authorizes the expenditure of $300 million during the next three years in federal grants to states and private institutions for treatment and rehabilitation of alcoholics, and research into the disease.

At the moment, the program exists only on paper, because Congress adjourned without acting on an appropriation for the institute. It is anticipated, however, that funds will be provided in the first supplemental appropriation bill that clears the new Congress. Thus the institute should be in business by spring.

The passage of the Hughes Act is a signal victory for groups such as the Natonal Council on Alcoholism which have been campaigning for many years for government recognition of alcoholism as a treatable disease.

Thirty years ago, there were virtually no public facilities for treatment of alcoholics. In 1943, Connecticut became the first state to provide for medical care of alcoholics. Today, 46 states and the District of Columbia have alcoholism programs. Most of them, however, are sharply circumscribed by lack of money. That's where the new federal aid program can make a difference.

It could have made even more difference had not the House made a small but significant change in the language of Hughes' bill. As passed by the Senate, it would have cut off all types of federal aid to any general hospital which refused to accept alcoholics as patients. This would have provided a mighty incentive to those hospitals — nearly two-thirds of the total-which have resisted the pleas of the American Medical Association to treat alcoholics on the same basis as other sick persons.

But the House changed a few words, so that noncooperating hospitals will be deprived only of aid under the Hughes Act itself, while continuing to receive aid under other federal programs. Since a hospital that refuses to accept alcoholics obviously would not be seeking Hughes Act aid in any case, the effect of this "minor amendment" was to emasculate the whole provision.

Hughes has indicated he will ask the new Congress to restore the original thrust of the cutoff clause so that alcoholics can be treated in all general hospitals. This is regarded by many medical authorities as the greatest single step that could be taken to improve the present spotty situation with regard to treatment facilities.

Although disappointed about that change, Hughes feels that what emerged from Congress is "a good bill ... not a panacea but a start toward facing realistically the dimensions of the alcoholism epidemic in this country."

This Week In The World

By United Press International

There are no limits on use of American air power in Indochina except for the use of nuclear weapons, President Nixon told a news conference this week.

He said the United States would not use ground forces in either Laos, Cambodia or North Vietnam, but American planes can go anywhere. He would not rule out use of South Vietnamese troops in North Vietnam and was not hopeful of much progress in the Paris talks.

The President sent Congress a health plan to provide medical insurance for virtually every American. Much of the cost for employed persons would be paid by their employers.

Britain changed its currency to the decimal system.

Poland announced that food prices raised last year would be lowered March 1. This was the issue that had set up rioting by Polish workers and brought a change in the government leadership.

Egypt was reported agreeable to a peace pact with Israel with one condition - that Israel withdraw from all the Arab territories occupied in the 1967 war.

Oil companies in the West agreed to increase payments to nations along the Persian Gulf to guarantee continued petroleum supplies. Price rises are expected in Europe and Asia, but not immediately in the United States.

The AFL-CIO Executive Council met in Bal Harbour, Fla., and union officials said they expected Nixon to impose a temporary freeze on wages and prices in the construction industry. The White House confirmed that the President was considering the move.

A federal grand jury in Los Angeles indicted William O. Woodridge, formerly sergeant major of the Army, and seven other persons on charges of plotting to defraud servicemen's clubs in Vietnam.

Col. Gerald V. Kehrli was convicted by a court-martial in Saigon and sentenced to three years in prison for using marijuana.

The trial of 1st Lt. William L. Calley Jr., charged in the massacre at My Lai, South Vietnam, resumed at Fort Benning, Ga., after an Army sanity board found him sane.

Defense Secretary Melvin R. Laird announced formation of a board dominated by civilians to control military intelligence within the United States. The armed forces were accused of invading the privacy of antiwar protesters and even political candidates in keeping track of their activities.

Harvard University scientists found that a jawbone of a human-like being found in northern Kenya was about 5.5 million years old. This is believed to be the oldest pre-human fragment ever discovered.

'IT'S THE REALITY'

Sufi Religion Attracting Youth

By FRANK FARRARA

There is something in the ancient Sufi religion founded in the Middle East that is attracting young followers in the Bay Area.

Young people seem to be seeking something they haven't been offered "in the traditional framework of religion," observed Moin-Ud-Din Jablonski, new local leader of the group.

On why Sufism attracts youths, Jablonski asserted: "It's the reality that's doing the attracting, nothing else. People will look for other explanations and succeed only in becoming further confused. It is the reality calling forth what is real in each person. The fact that mainly young people are responding simply indicates the dawning of a new age. The biblical, 'Many are called but few are chosen,' may well have to be changed to 'Many are called and many are being chosen.'"

Lewis used to say "The young people want to get out of 'realism' and into reality," Jablonski recalled.

Sufism offers a chance for inner development "which most churches nowadays don't provide for," he commented recently on Novato at the Garden of Inayat, named for the founder of Sufism in the West, Hazrat Inayat Khan.

On inner development, Jablonski commented "the unfoldment of the disciple's inner being toward love, harmony and beauty is of chief importance."

These qualities are awakened through devotional practices given each pupil as well as activities "such as joyous dancing and singing which involve group participation."

With the movement expanding, Jablonski foresees the day when headquarters, now housed in an old, two-story frame structure at 910 Railroad Avenue, will be too small.

Although established in the United States in 1910, the recent impetus came about three years ago when the late master teacher Samuel Lewis, known among his followers as Murshid, sat on the edge of his bed in a small San Francisco apartment and talked with six or seven people around him, Jablonski recalled.

Since then 120 disciples have been initiated, about 100 persons attend public meetings in San Francisco, and "up to 200" have attended meetings in Sausalito, he reported.

There are many Sufi brotherhoods in the world and "upwards of 40 to 50 million followers," but the religion has made little impact in the United States until recently, Jablonski said.

"The Western cultures and the United States particularly have avoided recognizing the contributions of the Islamic world to world culture," he contended.

Jablonski, a 29-year-old native of Iowa who discovered Sufism after a Catholic up bringing and a period of being an agnostic believes Sufism has "something to offer, something that's real."

Some religions "claim inner practice, but do not instruct in it," Jablonski said. Sufism "lays stress on real experience and unfolds the inner capabilities and faculties."

He continued: "We ask where we came from, where we believe we will go or are. We believe it's here right now, as well as hereafter."

Sufism, out of the cultural background of Islam, is "not an orthodoxy," he emphasized.

Orthodox religions have their "heaven realms," Jablonski said. Sufis in repetitive dancing and chanting, an integral part of their religion, bring about "here and now the realization and joy spoken of as primarily existing in heaven," he explained.

At their gatherings Sufis open with prayers which recognize "all world scriptures," Jablonski commented. "While the Sufi traditions are largely oral," members become acquainted with the sacred literatures "of all other points of view."

In strict orthodoxy, religions adhere to one point of view, "don't appreciate other views and consider themselves alone as right," Jablonski asserted.

The young leader said he will continue the work "outlined and inspired" by the late Samuel Lewis, a pioneer of Sufism in America for 50 years, who died after a fall at his San Francisco home last month.

Lewis, who lived in San Francisco and Novato, was the force that spurred interest in the religion, resulting in centers in Cambridge, Mass., Tucson, Ariz., and Lama Mountain near Taos, N.M., where he is buried.

Sufism, a religion for individual and group development, "can bring a real balance in people's lives," Jablonski said.

"Sufism does not seek to be separate from any religious tradition," Jablonski said. The founders of the world's religions, Buddha, Moses, Jesus, Mohammed and others all taught and practiced the "oneness of God through and with his worlds of creation."

Lewis, who obviously "inherited the depth and spirit of such a message," didn't advocate separatism, Jablonski said.

Asked if there were an equivalent of Mecca in the Sufi religion, he replied: "God is in the heart of man. That's our Mecca."

Jablonski and his wife, Fatima, who teaches dervish dancing, live quietly at the Garden of Inayat, where a "silence house" is observed each day from 3:30 to 4:30 p.m.

"This house is only so big. We're keeping our eyes open for a larger one here or in Sonoma County," Jablonski said.

A stained glass window made by Jablonski signifies that it is a spiritual center, but a pottery kiln in the yard and a small print shop at the rear lend a worldly touch.

PHYSICIST-PRIEST'S VIEWS

Compatibility In Science

By LOUIS CASSELS
UPI Religion Writer

For a long time, some people have expected and others have feared that modern science eventually would discredit the basic postulates of religion.

But just the opposite is actually happening.. Instead of undermining belief in God, science is finding more and more evidence of "the existence of a reality beyond the natural order."

So says Dr. William G. Pollard, a remarkable man who has demonstrated in his own life the compatibility of science and religion. Pollard is a nuclear physicist, a pioneer in atomic research, and director of the Associated Universities of Oak Ridge, Tenn. His conviction that science cannot answer man's deepest questions led him some years ago into an exploratory relationship with the Episcopal Church. This slowly ripened to the point where he asked for and received ordination. So today he is both a physicist and a priest.

Pollard has never found it necessary to compartmentalize his mind in order to combine these two roles. On the contrary, he says, the knowledge gained from daily involvement in scientific research has deepened his religious convictions, while the insights of religion have made him better able to comprehend the workings of the natural universe.

He discusses all of this very engagingly in a new paperback book entitled "Science and Faith —Twin Mysteries" (Nelson). Although it is part of a series intended primarily for young people, this is a very adult book, and I suspect that even Ph.D.'s and theologians could learn quite a lot from it.

"The religious crisis of our age is the result of the widespread belief that science has been in the process of dispelling mystery and denying the existence of any reality except that of the natural universe of space and time and matter," Pollard writes.

But this is a layman's view, not shared by those who know "the true flavor of modern science" and "the way in which our growing knowledge of matter keeps beckoning us toward transcendent realities beyond space and time."

Instead of explaining everything as people once expected it to do, Pollard says, the science of the nuclear-space age "confronts us with mystery on many fronts."

"When we speak of 'mystery' in science, we no longer mean unknown areas or puzzles which future research may be expected to clear up. Rather we are speaking of the mysteriously amazing character of the known."

For example, he says, mathematicians and astronomers in working out the implications of Albert Einstein's theory of relativity find themselves strongly impelled toward the concept that the observable universe of space and time must be immersed in some vastly greater, totally mysterious matrix or medium which may be called, for want of a better term, "superspace."

In the known universe we recognize four dimensions — height, depth, width and time. But "superspace" conceivably could have as many as 10 dimensions, he says. And if that should be the case, "then the amount of external reality which is transcendent to us, invisible and unseen but everywhere touching us, is far vaster in extent than the world of space-time which is visible and comprehensible to us."

Pollard cites many other "mysteries" which modern science has revealed rather than dispelled —including the "striking evidences of creativity" —of a plan and purpose behind it all —which biologists have found in studying the evolutionary process.

He concludes with this comment:

"The last quarter of the Twentieth Century is going to be a greater time of crisis than the human species has ever before experienced in its history on this planet. Man's faith in what he can do on his own, and his childlike faith in the capacity of science and technology to solve every problem, is going to fade before the terrible problems of such an age.

"Man will more and more feel himself lost and helpless as he crowds together on a planet too small to hold and feed his numbers, where the byproducts of his science and technology increasingly pollute and ruin his environment. In such a time many will despair and lose hope. Only those who can find some real transcendent reference, beyond space and time, will be able to live creatively and courageously."

Therefore, he says, the "most important discovery that anyone can make today "is the discovery of the reality of God."

ANCIENT RITUAL

Millions Of Hindus Bathe Away Sins

ALLAHABAD, India (UPI) — Every 12 and six years, on auspicious days chosen by astrologers, millions of Hindus meet at the confluence of three sacred rivers to bathe away their sins.

The ancient ritual of shedding sins by taking a holy dip at the confluence of the rivers Ganges, Yamuna and Saraswati is held in Allahabad Holy City of Sinners and is known to the 400 million Hindus as kumbh (every 12 years) and ardh-kumbh every six years.

The origin of the kumbh and arch-kumbh festivals, according to legend, has it that millions of years ago, Hindu gods and demons joined hands in churning the mighty ocean to obtain nectar. Lord Indra's son, fearing that the nectar would bring immortality to demons, picked up the pitcher kumbh of nectar and escaped.

During his flight in space, a few drops of nectar fell down at Allahabad, Haridwar, Ujjain and Nasik. It took 12 years for Indar's son to get rid of the demons trailing him around, and he took his first holiday after six more years.

Most Hindu pundits insist that Allahabad received the largest share of nectar from the leaking pitcher and thus became the most important sin-washing point.

This year's ardh-kumbh ritual is considered significant since there are a number of sacred days during the period when a single dip in the sacred river can wash away 1,001 sins.

The holiest day of the festival, mauni amawasya, coincided with India's Republic Day Jan. 26 this year, when more than two million pilgrims braved biting cold and rains to converge at the tri-junction of the holy rivers for their ritual bathing.

Authorities in charge of the festival said more than five million people had already bathed at Allahabad well before the peak bathing day Jan. 26 arrived.

Ten thousand policemen and an equal number of social volunteers worked day and night clearing passages for the human waves which surged towards the confluence of the three rivers, shouting "Ganga Maya ki jai:" Victory to the Mother Ganges.

The wailings of the rustic pilgrims lost in the 2,500-acre festival area, the blowing of conch-shells and the reverberating chanting of Hindu hymns heralded the auspicious moment when the multitudes pushed forward into the freezing waters of the sangam confluence of the three rivers.

Lent Will Open With Agape Meal

Families at San Anselmo's First Presbyterian Church will begin their Lenten observance on Ash Wednesday with a 6:30 p.m. agape meal in the church's Duncan Hall.

The meal is a reenactment of an ancient Christian custom of bringing food to be shared with others, concluding with a simple service together.

A seminary for inquirers conducted by Rev. John O. Najarian will conclude tomorrow with the Session receiving new members into the church. Their public reception is at the Feb. 28 morning service, a 10 a.m. celebration.

Served dinners are planned for each of the Wednesdays in Lent at 6:45 p.m., followed by a 7:45 to 8:15 p.m. service in the church sanctuary. The services are built around contemplative works played by organist Wilbur Russell on the Leonard Buck Memorial Organ.

Lenten Services

Shepherd of the Hills Lutheran Church in Tiburon will hold Lenten services at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday — Ash Wednesday — at 7:30 p.m. and continue them each Wednesday through March 31.

$200,000 In Relief Grants Are Approved

NEW YORK (LC) — Lutheran World Relief has approved nearly $200,000 in grants for relief, rehabilitation, and development programs in various countries in Africa, South America, and Asia.

The largest single grant — $110,000 — was made to the Department of World Service of the Lutheran World Federation for both the medical and development programs it has undertaken in the Rivers State area of Nigeria.

Lutherans Told: Help The Poor

DETROIT (LC) — Unless the "tremendous power" of the churches is mobilized effectively to help poor, dispossessed and weak people in America the prospect for the next decade is chaos, a Lutheran attorney has told a top level meeting of church officials.

Speaking to a meeting last week of nearly 100 national and area officials of three major Lutheran church bodies, Dr. William S. Ellis of New York, said churchmen at every level need to be aroused to action on behalf of the oppressed in society.

A layman of the Lutheran Church in America and a member of its executive council, Dr. Ellis is president of the Lutheran Human Relations Association of America.

Dr. Ellis emphasized that the economic and human resources of America's churches "which are enormous" must be used in the service of "those who have no power and therefore know no justice."

The rage of black Americans against oppression in the past decade, Dr. Ellis said, appears to be waning because some slight recognition has been given to their rightful dignity and identity. "But it must go much further," he added.

It was a stroke of genius to turn around the derogatory meaning of the term "black" and make it an honorable designation, Dr. Ellis declared.

GUEST SPEAKER — Marin Broones, a Christian Science teacher, will discuss "Is There a Way Out?" at a 3 p.m. public lecture tomorrow at the First Church Christ, Scientist, 1 Magnolia Avenue in Larkspur.

Rock Musical To Be Given Tomorrow

The New Minds, a singing group from the First Baptist Church of South San Francisco, will present a musical, "Tell It Like It Is" at 7 p.m. tomorrow in the Mill Valley Masonic Hall.

Hosting the Christian rock group will be the First Southern Baptist Church of Mill Valley. The musical is open to the public.

Indian Youth Choir Will Give Program

The First Baptist Church of San Rafael, 1411 Lincoln Avenue, will host the youth choir of the American Indian Baptist Church of Oakland at 7 p.m. today.

Representatives of 15 Indian tribes will be represented on the program which is a prelude to a planned summer tour by church members of reservations in the West.

DeMaestri Wows Crowd In Novato Cage Triumph

Hornets Bop Marin Catholic

Novato High School guard Joe DeMaestri pulled the trigger and Marin Catholic's Wildcats bit the dust last night in a Marin County Athletic League basketball game in Kentfield.

Scoring 34 points as he hit on a phenomenal per centage of his shots from the floor and the free throw line, DeMaestri led the Hornets to a 58-49 victory that moved them in a tie for fourth place with the city of Novato's other team, the San Marin Mustangs. Both are 5-7 won-lost in league play.

The Wildcats took an early lead, but saw it disappear when DeMaestri began to find the range in the second quarter. So unstoppable did the 5-foot-11 star prove to be that two players, Mick Hurley and Bill Donellan, fouled out trying to guard him, and another, Jim Sullivan, picked up four fouls.

DeMaestri, whose specialty is the long bomb, hit on 70 per cent of his shots from the floor, and at one point in the late third and early fourth quarters connected on five straight field goals. He was at his best in the final period, when he got 14 of Novato's 19 points.

No less hot on the free throw line, DeMaestri connected on 10 of 11 shots to make the bruises he got while being fouled worth while.

The Wildcats, whose record now reads 3-9, devided up their scoring pretty evenly; Jim Sullivan had 15 points, Bill Donellan 13, and Tim Stone 11.

Bruins Blank Seals

OAKLAND (UPI) — The powerful Boston Bruins crushed the California Seals, 5-0, Friday night, but Seals' owner Charles O. Finley still had something to smile about.

The Bruins brought 12,089 fans —a sellout crowd —to the Oakland Coliseum, and if the Bruins' performance didn't mean points in the win column, for the Seals, at least it meant dollar signs on the cash register.

It was the second time this season that the Bruins attracted a sellout crowd at the Coliseum.

The Bruins' scoring machine simply outclassed the Seals. Phil Esposito, the league's leading scorer, got his 49th. Bobby Orr added a goal and three assists.

The loss pushed the Seals deeper into last place of the National Hockey League West Division.

The only bright spot for the Seals was the play of Chris Worthy, who was in only his third start of the season in the California goal. Three times Worthy turned back Bruin breakaways, twice stopping Esposito on what would have been his 50th goal.

The Seals host the Philadelphia Flyers tonight in an attempt to break a five game losing streak.

Juan Gets Another Fat Pact

BUCKHORN SPA, Ariz. (UPI) — The San Francisco Giants are paying a 12-game winner $125,000 or so to pitch in 1971.

That's because the 12-game winner was Juan Marichal, who was 12-10 with 14 complete games and a 4.11 earned run mark.

A violent reaction to a penicillin shot given him in treatment of virus kept him out of action for weeks. When he returned, it took him some time to gain back his strength and control.

Terms were not disclosed of the pact announced today, but owner Horace Stoneham said Juan did not take a cut from last year, when he received an estimated $125,000.

"Juan's 1970 performance did not meet previous records and standards, but his early season illness explains that," said Stoneham.

Marichal is well on the way to mound immortality if he can regain his 20-win form. His 203-98 career record is highest of any actice pitcher.

This winter, he has been undergoing physical therapy and says he is in top condition. His weight is 195, about 10 pounds more than he hopes to weigh when the season gets going.

New San Jose Coach

SAN JOSE (UPI)—Randy Cardin, 26, former San Jose State backfield star, became the Spartans' youngest coach Friday when he was named to Dewey King's football staff as a defensive assistant.

TUCSON GOLF

Two Longshots Out In Front

TUCSON, Ariz. (UPI)—A pair of longshots who used to perform with some skill in sports other than golf shared the lead today going into the second round of the rain-delayed 72-hold $110,000 Tucson Open.

J. C. (Jesse Carlyle) Snead, 29, a former baseball player, nephew of the celebrated Sam, and Dewitt Weaver, 31, an ex-footballer, each shot 33-33—66, six under par in Friday's opening round on the Tucson National Golf Club course.

Play started Thursday but was washed out by a rainstorm.

After today's second round the field will be cut to the low 70s and ties and 36 holes will be played Sunday by the survivors.

There was a 10 per cent possibility of showers today but the weather was not expected to be wet enough to cause a serious disruption.

Two strokes back of Snead and Weaver was big George Archer, the 1971 San Diego Open champion, with 34-34—68. At 69 were five pros—defending champion Lee Trevino and Don Bies with 34-35; Dale Douglass, 37-32; Joe Kirkwood Jr., 36-33; and Paul Harney 35-34.

Snead, who played baseball for three years in the Washington Senators farm system, had his best finish in the 1969 Michigan Classic where he was tied for second. This year he has won $5,791 in six tournaments to stand No. 47 on the PGA list.

Weaver, who was a quarterback on the Southern Methodist football team before he switched to golf permanently, is No. 10 this year in money with $14,879 but has never taken a major pro tournament.

Weaver, a stocky 185-pounder, would have had the lead all alone in the first round but he bogeyed the last hole. He hit his tee shot into a bunker and then two-putted from 18 feet for a five.

Up to that point he had all pars and seven birds. His longest birdie putt was a 35-footer on the 12th hole, a par four, 420 yards.

Snead had two eagles, something few golfers achieve in one round. He got a three on the second hole, a par-five 530-yarder, when he was on the green in two with a driver and a five-iron. The ball was only six feet from the pin and he sank the putt. He got another three on the 11th hole, a par five 585-yarder, when he hit a driver and a four-wood and sank a 30-foot putt.

Snead is 6 feet 2 and 205 pounds and hits a long ball the same as Weaver.

On the 18th hole which is guarded by lakes on both sides of the fairway, Snead hit a four-wood from the tee and then dumped a five-iron on the green and two-putted from about 30 feet for a par four.

"That hole scares me to death," he said.

Archer played consistent golf for his 68. He took a bogey five on No. 18 which was his ninth since he played the back nine first but had five birdies and all pars otherwise.

On the his 13th, a par three 165-yarder, he put his tee shot only six inches from the cup and sank it for a birdie two.

"It was almost a hole-in-one," he said. "The ball hit past the pin and then pulled back and missed the flag by about two inches. I hit the ball pretty close on all the holes but the greens were a little treacherous because of the rain and footprints."

Ex-Gi Star In Marin Track Win

College of Marin Tars, sparked by a super effort by ex-GI Ted Cain, defeated Hartnell College of Salinas, 69-66, yesterday in their opening track and field meet of the season at Kentfield on a cold and windy day.

Cain, of Novato, merely contributed 26 points to Marin's score. Besides anchoring the winning mile relay team that clinched the victory, Cain won the 120-yard high hurdles in 15.7 seconds, the 440-yard run in 52.4, the intermediate hurdles in 59.7, the triple jump at 40 feet, 1½ inches and he also placed third in the long jump.

Cain's mates on the mile relay were Tom Estudillo, Todd Norris and Bob Bode.

Other Marin winners were: Seamus O'Reilly, mile, 4:33.5; Doug Best, shot put, 42-10½; Norris, 880, 2:03.2; Don James, long jump, 20-3½; and Doug Shannon, pole vault, 10-6.

Redwood Gets By Drake

The Redwood High School Giants needed every ounce of their championship poise and every inch of their considerable height last night to defeat the Drake High Pirates, 58-48 at the losers' gym in San Anselmo, before almost 1,000 fans.

In winning their 39th straight Marin County Athletic League basketball game, and 12th this year, the league leading Giants of Larkspur appeared rather lethargic, while Drake was all fired up. Not until the final quarter did Dick Hark's boys from the Larkspur school enjoy a lead of more than seven points, and at no time were they up by more than 10.

It was the awesome height advantage of the defending MCAL champs that did the job for them, as they dominated both the offensive and defensive boards. Averaging more than two inches taller per man than the Pirates, the Giants, although they seldom penetrated inside Drake's zone defense, were able to get two, three and sometimes four shots at a crack simply by pulling down offensive rebounds.

And on defense, Redwood, again by virtue of height, kept the Pirates at a distance, forcing them to take almost all their shots from way outside.

Scott Trobbe and Steve McGee, Redwood's biggest men at 6-foot-6, collected 19 and 16 points apiece to lead all scorers. Drake's offense was well balanced, if not as spectacular. Mark Daubenfeld had 11 points, Jit Singh 10, and Bob Gregg and Jim Forni nine each.

Drake's record in league play is now 4-8 won-lost.

Tam Pours It On San Rafael

The Tamalpais High School Indians are like the army of the Roman Empire. They have plenty of power, and very litte mercy. Yesterday afternoon the Mill Valley team eagerly tore apart the San Rafael High Bulldogs, 74-47 in a Marin County Athletic League basketball game at College of Marin in Kentfield.

After mounting a 13 point lead in the first quarter, and maintaining it throughout the second quarter, the Indians should by rights have taken the pressure off the much maligned and last place Bulldogs. But, perhaps because coach Bernie Schneider feels his team must get as sharp as possible for next Tuesday night's big game at league leading Redwood, Tam was still pressing, full court style, while leading by 20 in the final period.

The victory, Tam's fifth in a row since losing to Redwood, brought the Indian's MCAL record to 10-2, and kept them two games behind undefeated Redwood in second place. For San Rafael, the loss was No. 9 against three wins.

Will Garner, the league's leading scorer, struck up his average with 21 points to pace the winners, who placed 11 men in the scoring column. Nine of Garner's points came at the end of the first period, when the Indians broke a 4-4 tie and sealed San Rafael's fate by rattling off 13 straight points.

Steve Miles, Tam's center, played his best game of the season, scoring 11 points and turning in an outstanding defensive effort. He was the only Indian besides Garner in double figures.

San Rafael was led by Bill Lechner and Mark Farrar with nine points each.

All-Stars

CINCINNATI (UPI) — The Perry brothers, Gaylord of the San Francisco Giants and Jim of the Minnesota Twins, are the only brothers ever to pitch against each other in the annual major league All-Star game.

Warriors' Problems Mount

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—The San Francisco Warriors have enough problems to drive a coach into another line of work.

Coach Al Attles' team has lost its last three games, the third one Friday night to the San Diego Rockets, who, with Seattle, are breathing hot on the Warriors' neck for second place in the NBA Pacific Division.

Another problem —Jeff Mullins, San Francisco's high scoring guard, injured his ankle in the 109-103 loss to San Diego, and did not return after leaving early in the third period.

And to add insult to misery, the Milwaukee Bucks, the hottest team in the NBA, and Lew Alcindor come to the Cow Palace tonight. Alcindor scored 42 points and pulled down a career-high of 29 rebounds as the Bucks whipped Seattle 128-112 Friday night.

The Warriors couldn't handle the 5-10 Calvin Murphy of San Diego so the 7-2 Alcindor could spell disaster tonight.

Murphy pumped in 30 points, and with the help of Elvin Hayes' 28 tallies, led the Rockets to their fifth win in their last six games.

San Francisco managed to stay in the game with hot free throw shooting, hitting 24 in a row before missing in the third period.

Nate Thurmond, who hit 14 of 14 on the charity line, led the Warriors with 29 points, and Nick Jones added 21.

'Magician' Casteel Paces Terra Linda

Joe Casteel, Terra Linda High School's magician in a basketball uniform, accounted for 25 points last night and the Trojans solidified their hold on third place in the Marin County Athletic League with a 78-68 victory over San Marin High in Novato.

A victory by the Mustangs would have lifted them into a third place tie with Terra Linda, but they settled instead for their seventh loss in 12 games, despite a 27 point performance by 6-foot-8 center Dana LaFerriere. The Trojans are now even at 6-6.

Casteel had by far his best offensive game of the year, hitting on eight field goals and nine free throws; most of his shots from the floor were circus types from underneath the basket.

San Marin, like every other team in the league, had a terrible time with Terra Linda's determined man-for-man defense, and came up with only one star performance, by the inimitable LaFerriere. The second leading scorer in the league coming into the game, he connected on nine shots from the field and a like amount from the free throw line.

La Ferriere's teammates were not so productive on the charity strip. Of 41 attempts on free throws, they made only 20, and of those they missed, 17 were in one-and-one situations.

50-Point Spree For Cleveland

By United Press International

With only 12 victories for the Cleveland Cavaliers so far this season, every one becomes memorable for Walt Wesley. However, Wesley will probably remember Friday night's vistory a little longer than all the rest.

The Cavaliers' 125-109 victory over the Cincinnati Royals Friday night was the game of a lifetime for Wesley. He scored 50 points, more than he had ever scored before in his life, by hitting 20 of 33 shots from the field and adding 10 of 14 free throws.

"The best I ever scored before was 45 at Kansas when I was a junior," Wesley said. "I feel a little more determination when I play the Royals because I once played for them. I never thought about the points during the game, and it's a great feeling to score 50, but it's even greater to get the victory."

Going into the game, Wesley was hitting 45.5 per cent of his shots from the field, and in four previous losses to Cincinnati this year, he had 76 points, an average of 19 per game. Wesley got 16 points in the first half, pacing Cleveland to a 57-54 lead, and the 6-10 center reeled off 20 in the third quarter for a 93-82 advantage to snap a 12-game losing streak. It was Cleveland's highest point total of the season, and the third time the Cavaliers beat an established NBA team.

Other NBA games also provided individual heroics with Chet Walker scoring four points in the final 38 seconds of regulation time to tie the score and then added 11 more in overtime to give the Chicago Bulls a 115-114 victory over the Detroit Pistons and Earl Monroe got 15 of his 34 points in the fourth quarter to lift the Baltimore Bullets to a 120-113 victory over the Buffalo Braves.

In other games, Milwaukee beat Seattle 128-112, San Diego topped San Francisco 109-103, Phoenix beat Boston 116-112 and Philadelphia beat Los Angeles 118-104.

Chet Walker scored 44 points as he lifted Chicago to second place in the Midwest Division with a half-game, two percentage point lead over Detroit. The Bulls, spurred on by the largest home crowd in their history with 18,545, will meet the Pistons again on Sunday at Detroit.

The Pistons trailed by 11 points early in the first quarter but came back to go ahead 93-83 with 6:11 left in the game. But Chicago came back to tie the game on Walker's heroics.

Buffalo led 98-93 with six minutes left when Monroe dropped in seven straight points and Kevin Loughery added a layup to put the Bullets ahead 102-98. The Braves cut the Baltimore lead to 102-101 when Loughery was called for a personal foul and a technical, but he followed with a jumper from the key and Jack Marin sank an 18-footer to break open the game.

Lew Alcindor scored 42 and had a career high of 29 rebounds as Milwaukee beat Seattle.

Dick VanArsdale scored 26 as Phoenix topped Boston despite a 33-point showing by Jo Jo White of the Celts.

Jim Washington scored 28 points in Philadelphia's victory over Los Angeles.

UP AND OVER — Renato Dionisi of Italy cleared the bar at 16 ft., 5 inches last night during the pole vault event at the Olympic Invitational track meet in New York's Madison Square Garden.

OLYMPIC MEET

Liquori, Washington Steal The Limelight

NEW YORK (UPI)—For Marty Liquori the Madison Square Garden swan song was bittersweet, but for Herb Washington, the Olympic Invitation Track Meet Friday night was the start of something big.

"I really felt nostalgic," said Liquori after winning the 1500 meters in a new meet record time of 3:44.2 for his 13th straight New York victory. The Villanova senior who has elected to pass up the final Garden meet of the season, the AAU Championships next weekend, had little trouble defeating teammate Chris Mason and Mikhail Zhelobovsky of the Soviet Union.

"I'm satisfied with the win," Liquori said, "but I really felt like attaching a sign to my back saying goodbye or thank you to these poeple."

Washington, who ended Kentucky's Jim Green's Garden unbeaten streak, almost had to pay his own way to the meet.

"I've wanted to compete in these meets all year," the NCAA 60-yard dash champ said. "I'd have paid my own way to this one but now with (John) Carlos gone, I guess I've proved I'm the fastest around after tonight."

Washington and Green got involved in a lively debate after the 50-meter dash which the Michigan State upstart captured in 5.7 seconds. At the end, it was Washington who predicted the outdoor season would decide the supremacy of the 1971 sprints.

"I'll beat you outdoors," Washington said to Green. "And then we'll know who's the best in the world."

Overshadowed by Liquori's farewell and the Washington-Green sprint duel were a trio of record breaking performances in the 1,000-meter run, the 55-meter hurdles and the high jump.

Tom Von Ruden of the Pacific Coast Track Club bettered his own meet 1000 record with a 2:20.4 time in addition to re-establishing the world's best time for the event.

"John Davies of Great Britain broke my old world's mark a few months ago," Von Ruden said after beating Ireland's Frank Murphy. "So I thought it would be nice to get the world's record back to the United States."

Leon Coleman, who finished fourth in the 1968 Olympics at Mexico City, got a magnificent start in the 55-meter hurdles and then had to stave off a sizzling finish from Penn freshman Bruce Collins. Coleman set the meet mark and equaled the world's best with a time of 7.1 seconds.

Reynaldo Brown made a vain effort to topple the world high jump mark, failing three times at 7-4 1-2, but still managed to set a new meet record of 7-2 1-2 in defeating Wisconsin's Pat Matzdorf and Kestutis Sapka of the Soviet Union.

The pole vault, which had the makings of another world record with Sweden's Kjell Isaksson competing, saw a major upset when Renato Dionisi of Italy jumped a personal high of 17-4 1-2 to beat Ksaksson on the basis of fewer misses. Dionisi's leap easily bettered the meet record of 17 1-2 set in 1970 by Sam Caruthers.

The bright spot of the evening for the nine-strong Soviet delegation came in the 800-meters when Yevgeny Arzhanov defeated defending champion Byron Dyce, the Jamaican Olympian, and Brian McElroy of the New York A.C. with a time of 1:52.

In the longer sprints, Rutgers' Tom Ulan lunged at the finish to edge Tommie Turner of Murray State in the 400 meters and Ulan's former scarlet Knights teammate Pete Schuder snared the 500 meters in 1:04.

Cardinals Are Going To School

By United Press International

The St. Louis Cardinals are going back to school to learn their ABC's, and it will be very rough on those who don't do their homework.

Last season the Cardinals lost several games because they missed cut-off throws, ran bases poorly and made other basic mistakes. So the Cardinals' management announced Friday that for the next 10 days the team will work on the fundamentals of the game.

It is assumed that major leaguers know their fundamentals very well but apparently the Cardinals do not. And the management made it clear that if any player felt ridiculous by working on fundamentals then it was just too bad for him.

"If any player feels embarrassed to go over the ABC's of the game, he's just going to have to be embarrassed," said Coach Vern Benson.

The Cardinals opened their spring training camp at St. Petersburg, Fla., Friday with 15 pitchers, six catchers and rookie infielder Tom Heintzelman working out under the watchful eyes of manager Red Schoendienst. Schoendienst got out of his hotel bed after a bout with the flu to take charge,

Among the missing at the opening day workouts was star pitcher Bob Gibson. Gibson has been given permission to finish some personal business before beginning workouts Monday.

Still unsigned for the Cardinals are Joe Torre, Jose Cardenal, Julian Javier, Ted Sizemore and rookie Luis Melendez.

There were a number of signings Friday, but the three biggest names were Maury Wills of the Los Angeles Dodgers, Alex Johnson of the California Angels and Juan Marichal of the San Francisco Giants. Wills, who hit .270 last season signed for an estimated $90,000 — the same amount he received last year — while Johnson, who won the American League batting title with a .328 average, got a "substantial" raise over last year.

Marichal, who had a disappointing 12-10 record last season after an adverse reaction to penicillin severely hampered his spring training program, received an estimated $125,000.

Also agreeing to terms with the Angels were outfielders Tony Gonzalez and Billy Cowan.

The Milwaukee Brewers inked infielder Ted Kubiak, which leaves only Tommy Harper unsigned from among last year's regulars. Kubiak was the Brewers' most durable performer last year, appearing in 158 games.

The Washington Senators signed second-string catcher Jim French for an estimated $18,000. French, who held out for one day, batted only .261 last year. The Senators still have not signed first-string catcher Paul Casanova, pitcher Horatio Pina and reliever Darold Knowles. Knowles, who won only three games last year, is seeking $45,000.

Pitcher Bill Denehy, who became a trival question four years ago when he was traded from the Mets to the Washington Senators for the rights to negotiate for manager Gil Hodges, was back with the Mets Friday.

Amazing Show By Aussie In San Diego Track Meet

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (UPI)—Kerry O'Brien couldn't believe it today as he tried to come off a cloud of joy after bettering both the indoor and outdoor two-mile records with a time of 8:19.2 in the San Diego Indoor Games Friday night.

"It's unbelievable," said the veteran Australian distance runner. "I'm stunned and happy. I think I now deserve the road runner of the year title.

"The way things were moving in the race, I knew I had a chance (at the record). It was a tremendous pace and a fantastic track."

O'Brien's amazing performance came after former Kansas distance star Jim Ryun had delighted the capacity crowd of 12,007 by equalling the seven year old mile indoor record of 3:56.4.

Kerry Pearce, a fellow Australian who originally set the indoor mark of 8:27.2 here three years ago, was second to O'Brien in 8:20.6. which bettered his old record. Frank Shorter of the Florida Track and Field Club was third in 8:27.2, fast enough for a new American record.

Pearce had stayed with O'Brien until the final lap and said he was "very happy" with his performance.

"O'Brien and I did not discuss the race before we ran," Pearce said. "I lack a little experience. I didn't have it in the last quarter."

The outdoor mark for two miles is 8:19.6 which was set by another Australian, Ron Clark, in 1968,

The performances by O'Brien and Ryun overshadowed another world record in the women's 600 yard run which Maria Sykora of Austria won in 1:21.5. The old record indoors was 1:22.3 set by Cheryl Touissant of the United States last year.

Ryun credited New Zealander Dick Quax for setting up the race for him, declaring he was responsible for the ultimate time.

"Quax started picking it up and I didn't know if I could get him or not," Ryun said. "When he moved, I tried to go with him. My legs had felt a little flat while warming up. I had felt tired all week."

Ryun, however, said his real interest was in outdoor competition and he added, "If I run well indoors, fine; if I don't, fine. It's the outdoors I'm aiming for."

Ryun, who started on a comeback this outdoor season at San Francisco, laid back in fifth or sixth place until the next to last lap as Chuck LaBenz of the Pacific Coast Club set a blistering pace, running the half mile in 1:54.5 and the three-quarters in 2:57.4.

Ryun had a margin of nearly 20 yards over second place John Mason thanks to a 56.4 final quarter. But the first four finishers all bettered four minutes. It was believed the best second, third and fourth place times for an indoor mile.

Mason was second in 3:58.0, La Benz third in 3:58.1 and Quax fourth in 3:58.9 after moving up on the next to last lap in a spurt that set Ryun off with his burst of speed at the end.

Almost overlooked was Aussie Ralph Doubell's victory in the 1,000 yard run in 2:06.3, fastest indoors this year.

The distance races overshadowed the rest of the meet in which Randy Matson, making his final indoor appearance, put the shot 68 feet, 4 inches to best indoor champion Al Feuerbach who threw 66-9 1-2.

Olympian Lee Evans won the 600 yard run in 1:08.7; Lennox Miller captured the 60-yard dash in 6.1 secoonds; Willie Davenport won the 60 yard hurldes in 7-1 and Bob Seagren pole vaulted at 17-1 as Kiyoshi Niwa of Japan was second at 16-6.

Petaluma Defeats Rancho

For both the Rancho Cotate High School Cougars and the Petaluma Trojans the basketball game was meaningless yesterday, but still important. It was a rivalry between the schools that had nothing at stake — each playing its final game of the season. It was the Trojans who were victors, 86-70, the 10th time they have beaten the Cougars since the rivalry began.

The Tojans, who finished third in North Bay League Section 1, were never really out of control. They took a commanding halftime lead of 45-30, and led by as much as 25 points at times in the second half.

The Cougars were spearheaded by their 6-foot-8-inch center Ron Seiler who scored 27 points and brought down 22 rebounds. Steve Wlodarczyk added 17 for Rancho.

Petaluma was led by its all-league candidate, Joe Rodola who scored 15 and did a tremendous job of controlling the boards as best one can against Seiler. Mike Blote, a reserve senior for the Trojans, was second in scoring for his team with 13.

Petaluma finished the season with a 19-5 overall won-lost record. The Cougars had a 10-12 overall slate, good enough for fourth place in NBL II.

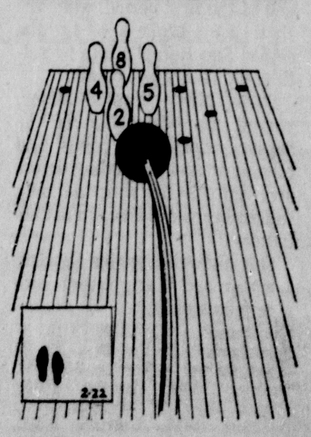
BOWLING TIPS

By DON CARTER



If you leave the 2-4-5-8 pins, don't get hurt twice. You may already have been hurt by the fact that you got a count of just six pins on a previous spare. Now you must concentrate on getting all of the remaining pins down so you won't severely damage your score.

Regard the 2-5 pins as a "pocket" and line up your feet and your spot out on the lane so you will bury the ball in that area. Don't get careless just because the 2-4-5-8 looks like a big target.

Fouts Named To Post With OEO

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI)—A veteran network sportscaster has been named a regional information director for the U.S. Office of Economic Opportunity.

Bob Fouts, who resigned from a position with ABC radio to take the OEO post, will be responsible for public information aspects of the Nixon administration poverty programs in California, Nevada, Arizona, Hawaii, Guam, American Samoa and the U.S. Pacific Trust territories.

Longest Shutout

NEW YORK (UPI)—Carl Hubbell, peerless southpaw of the Old New York Giants, shut out the St. Louis Cardinals, 1-0, in 18 innings in 1933. Hubbell fanned 12 and didn't walk a batter.

American Upsets Aussie Net Star

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (UPI) — Unseeded Valery Ziegenfuss of San Diego pulled the first big upset of the International Tennis Championships Thursday by beating fourth-ranked Australian Karen Krantczke 6-4, 4-6, 6-2.

The victory puts Miss Ziegenfuss, seventh-ranked U.S. player, up against second-seeded Rosemary Casals Friday in the quarter-finals of the $10,000 ladies tour event.

Miss Casals, winner of the $3,000 first prize at Philadelphia last week, defeated Tory Fretz 6-4, 6-4 in a first round match.

In another match Thursday, Kerry Melville defeated Laurie Fleming 6-2, 6-4 and advanced into a quarter-final match with third-seeded Ann Jones.

Marin Gets No Rest, Faces Santa Rosa

By DAVID EINSTEIN

It took a "super effort" to beat Contra Costa, and it's going to take another one tonight to beat Santa Rosa. So says College of Marin basketball coach John Panagakis, whose Tars meet the Bear Cubs at 8 o'clock in Santa Rosa. Marin has not won a game there in three years.

Wednesday night the Tars won their 23rd game of the season, and their 14th at home without a loss, edging Contra Costa on Charlie Flynn's last second heroics. The 84-79 decision was the Kentfield team's first ever over the Comets of San pablo in a Camino Norte Conference game.

And it was a crucial win, that brought Marin up to a three way tie for second place with Contra Costa and West Valley; all are 8-3 in league play, a game behind De Anza of Cupertino. The Tars will put their 23-4 overall record and a possible post season playoff spot on the line next Wednesday when they host DeAnza. But Panagakis isn't worrying about that. He's got enough to keep him busy concerning Santa Rosa.

"Santa Rosa is playing great basketball," he said today. "I don't think they've lost any game this year by more than a half dozen points. They've just been unlucky. The ball hasn't bounced their way. Otherwise their record could be reversed."

The Bear Cubs, 2-6 in conference games and 8-13 overall, have, indeed, had their share of misfortune. The latest episode came last week in Campbell, where they lost to West Valley by two points in overtime. Twice this year they have lost to Marin by six, in the finals of the Tars' Christmas Tourney, and in the first league meeting between the teams.

Hopefully, the Tars will have enough energy left after Wednesday's game to handle Santa Rosa, a team that Panagakis describes as "very physical. They go to the boards extremely well." It remains to be seen whether Marin will be up or down psychologically. Both moods are possible.

Against the Comets, there wasn't any question but that they were up. Way up. "Any time you beat Contra Costa, it's got to be a super effort," said Panagakis. He was especially careful to note that the victory was a product of a five man effort. Everyone contributed in one way or another his best effort of the season.

Particularly heroic were Flynn, whose clean steal and subsequent foul shots with less than a minute remaining meant the victory, Herrnberger, who scored a season high of 23 points and did an outstanding job handling muscleman Ollie Ellison, and Roosevelt Green, who worked a specially designed offense to perfection.

"We were interchanging our offense," Panagakis said, explaining Green's movements throughout the game from a high post to a low post and back again. "Our whole plan was to try to get them in foul trouble. Once Ellison (one of the state's leading rebounders) got into trouble, we went at him."

So successful was the plan in application that Ellison, who seldom fouls out, did so with several minutes left to play. And even while he was in there, Green and Herrnberger combined to keep him and Comet center Floyd Allen effectively confused.

Gal's Bowl Tourney Winding Up

Women bowlers will be competing in the last two days of the Marin County Woman's Bowling Association City Tournament today and tomorrow.

The tournament started last weekend, with singles and doubles closing things this weekend. All events, team, singles and doubles are being held at Nave Lanes near Ignacio.

Leading the past week's bowling scores were Mike Weddell with a 694 three-game series at Country Club Bowl in San Rafael and Marilyn Epidendio (again) with a 622 at Greenbrae Lanes.

GREENBRAE LANES

Men — Fred Horton, 676; Chuck Fisher, 666; Lee Brown, 651; Steve Kanzee, 644; Myron Holmes, 639. Women — Marilyn Epidendio, 622; Lu Sharp, 591 and 590; Gloria Biss, 569; Peg McMurtry, 568; Sandy Pollock, 567.

COUNTRY CLUB BOWL

Men — Mike Weddell, 694; Fred Ness, 682 and 659; Bob Curry, 666; Lou Eastland, 664. Women — Joan Curristan, 565 and 552; Jean Clark, 546; Leemoi Bekey, 545; Lois Schwab, 532. Juniors — Nancy McPherson, 542.

NAVE LANES

Men — Jack Vallee, 638; Ed Kirla, 608; John Hobbs, 607; Walt Moreno, 600. Women — Jan Lenci, 569; Anita Stockinger, 568; Mitzi Brown, 561; Em Smith, 557; Jean Twillman, 551.

Sonoma Does It Again

The Sonoma State College Cossacks added yet another basketball loss to their pursuit of a "perfect" season, this time falling to University of California at Davis, 91-72. They have now extended their won-lost record to 0-23.

Playing in their home court at Rohnert Park., the Cossacks were victims of a slow start matched with uninspired basketball. They fell behind at an early point 12-2, and the game could have ended right there. At the half the score was 41-30.

For Sonoma, Larry Austin had 18 points. He was followed by Mark Bucklew with 14 and Tad Wolisczko who had 15. For Davis, Steve Fletcher tallied 17. Close behind was Mark Underwood with 15 and Ron McMillan wth 13. Will Curley, a native of San Anselmo, added 8 points to the Davis cause.

Today is Saturday, Feb. 20, the 51st day of 1971.

The moon is between its last quarter and new phase. The morning stars are Mercury, Mars, Venus and Jupiter. The evening star is Saturn.

Those born on this date are under the sign of Pisces.

On this day in history:

In 1800 the U. S. Supreme Court ruled that the power of the federal government was no greater than that of any individual state in the Union.

In 1872 the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York City was opened to the public.

In 1938 Anthony Eden resigned as British foreign secretary to protest the "appeasement" policy of Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain toward Nazi Germany.

In 1962 astronaut John Glenn landed safely after three orbits of the earth.

A thought for today: Poet John Greenleaf Whittier said, "For all sad words of tongue and pen, the saddest are these: 'It might have been.'"

No Incensing

STOCKHOLM (UPI) — The Swedish justice ombudsman has dismissed a petition from a Greek convict who wanted to burn incense in his prison cell.

Prison authorities had refused him permission to burn the incense because they suspected it contained narcotics. The inmate asked the ombudsmen to reverse the decision but he refused on grounds that smoke pollution would be unfair to the other inmates.

HOW TO PLAY

WINNING BRIDGE

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

Always Give The Opponents A Chance To Contribute Tricks

It's all very well to be self-reliant, but only a selfish person would deprive others of the pleasure of helping him. At the bridge table, don't try to win every trick you need by your own unaided efforts; give your opponents a chance to contribute to the cause. They may not like it very much, but you can remind them that they were not put in this world just for their enjoyment.

PLAYS LOW

West opened the five of diamonds, and South played low from the dummy. East won with the queen and returned the eight of diamonds. South put up the jack, and West declined to cover with the king.

South counted eight sure tricks: two spades, two diamonds and four clubs. He cleared the top clubs out of the way, cashed the ace of spades and led a spade to try a finesse with dummy's jack. If the finesse worked, he would have nine tricks all by his own efforts.

Unfortunately for declarer, East won with the queen of spades and returned a spade to dummy's king. South still had only eight tricks, and that's all he managed to win. Down one.

LESS ACTIVE

South makes his contract if he is less active. After winning the second trick with the jack of diamonds, South cashes the king and queen of clubs, enters dummy with the ace of diamonds and returns to the ace of clubs. Then he leads the ten of diamonds, discarding a low heart from dummy.

West gets a trick with the king of diamonds, but must now lead spades or hearts. If West leads a heart, declarer can eventually win a trick with the queen of hearts. If West leads a spade, South can play low from the dummy and trap East's queen. A spade lead from West will give South a third trick in the suit if West has either the queen or the ten. This is quite a bit better than playing West for just the queen of spades.

What do you say?

ANSWER: Bid one no-trump.

This response tends to promise a fairly good hand, since you would prefer to bid a suit of your own or to raise clubs if you had a poor hand. Some experts promise eight to 10 points; others, nine to 11 points with the response of no-trump to the opening bid of one club.

State Steps To Cut Welfare Pay Errors

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —The Reagan Administration is taking steps to tighten control over procedures to determine who is eligible for welfare benefits.

State Social Welfare Director Robert Carleson said Friday the action was prompted by an administration study which showed that county mistakes in distributing welfare have resulted in $51 million in overpayments.

The steps, he said, include creation of a special department task force to combine eligibility control and financial audit activities in the welfare program.

"This will eliminate areas of overlap between the two functions and facilitate development of information more useful for solving problems of eligibility determination and grant payments," Carleson said.

The department also plans to transfer the eligibility control bureau from its field operations branch to its management services branch to give the bureau "a better organization base" to reduce eligibility errors, Carleson said.

He said the county overpayment problem resulted from a "rapidly increasing caseload and complex state regulations coupled with various administrative differences among the 58 counties."

The finance department study, made at Carleson's request, showed the error rate for determining welfare eligibility was 50 per cent in adult aid and 25 per cent in aid to dependent children. The results were made public last week.

Dope Raid In Kentfield: 2 Arrests

Two Kentfield residents were arrested yesterday on suspicion of possessing dangerous drugs, narcotics for sale and concealing stolen property following a 7 a.m. raid on their homebylaw officers.

Arrested were Gilbert Eloy Atencio, 29, and Beverly Ann DeCosta, 22, of 20 Hill Drive.

San Rafael police said today they accompanied county narcotics agents in the raid after they received a tip that a quantity of cocaine had been seen at the home.

Officers, carrying a search warrant, found a suspected bag of cocaine and one of suspected marijuana, as well as 20 items ranging from office equipment to cameras believed stolen.

The pair was released from Marin County Jail, Atencio on $5,000 bail and Miss DeCosta on $1,500 bail. They are scheduled to appear Monday in Marin Municipal Court.

Delay Urged For Peripheral Canal

WASHINGTON (UPI) —Contra Costa County officials have told the White House that construction of the $200 million peripheral canal should be postponed because of environmental dangers, according to Rep. Jerome R. Waldie, D-Calif.

Waldie said the project was criticized in a 150-page report submitted to the president's Council on Environmental Quality by the Contra Costa County water agency and the county board of supervisors.

The congressman said the report concluded environmental "evils and dangers" were such as to make the project "premature."

Southern Crossing Span Gets Go-Ahead

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —The state Toll Bridge Authority yesterday removed the last obstacle and directed construction to begin on the contrgversial Southern Crossing bridge over San Francisco Bay.

The agency adopted a report ordered by the legislature which concludes the proposed $300 million span will not despoil the environment or divert potential users of the Bay Area Rapid Transit district.

E. R. Foley, chief engineer for the state Division of Bay Toll Crossing, said initial construction of the bridge will probably begin later this year with completion targeted for "sometime in 1976."

The bridge will stretch from India Basin south of San Francisco to East Bay, with legs running to Alameda-Oakland and San Leandro.

The report prepared by Foley was ordered by a resolution authored by Assemblyman Robert Crown, D-Alameda, and adopted by the legislature last year.

It directed toll engineers to determine environmental factors and the effect it would have on rivaling the BART system for trans-bay passenger patronage.

In its report, the authority concluded that BART can expect higher than anticipated usage.

It also said the proposed new crossing will relieve the congested Bay Bridge of traffic.

Regarding the environment, the report said "there will be only minimal effect" in the areas where the bridge will be built.

"Any delay in the project will mean increased construction costs as well as continued trans-bay traffic congestion," the report said. "Delay will also cause future problems in project financing and be disruptive to the many planning programs of other agencies now in progress."

The San Francisco Board of Supervisors recently voted 6-3 to oppose the span, which prompted authority member Verne Orr, Gov. Ronald Reagan's finance director, to question the legality of beginning construction.

Foley replied that the city had already made its commitments to the state. He said construction could commence.

MD Draft Seen

WASHINGTON (UPI) —For the first time in two years the Selective Service system will be asked to draft medical doctors and dentists, Defense Department sources said Friday.

Span Lobbyist Issue Put Over

The legislation-public relations committee of the Golden Gate Bridge District has continued to Thursday at 1:30 p.m. consideration of hiring a Washington lobbyist.

The district has been trying without success for almost a year to get federal financing for its $25 million bus and ferry system. It is also planning long-range transit that could not be paid for without federal funds.

Richard C. Clark, assistant chief of administration-security for the district, said the committee announced the continuation after discussing the hiring in closed session Thursday.

CMA Sues To Stop Cut In Medi-Cal Services

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —The California Medical Association said in court yesterday that it was suing the Reagan administration over Medi-Cal cutbacks "to prevent the abandonment of patients."

The statement was made by CMA attorney David Willet in an opening statement at a hearing before Superior Court Judge William E. Gallagher on the association's attempt to get a restraining order to stop the reductions.

The CMA was joined in the action by the California Rural Legal Assistance, the California Dental Association as well as San Mateo, Alameda and Sacramento counties.

Willet told Gallagher: "This is not an action to raise the fees paid to doctors. This is not a suit to perpetuate the present Medi-Cal system. This is an action to prevent the abandonment of patients."

Deputy Attorney General John Fort, representing the Reagan administration, said the key reason for the budget problems was "the national recession and unemployment and a large increase in the number of persons eligible" for the benefits.

He also said the administration of the new regulations "has been reasonable and proper."

Lawyers estimated that the hearing would last at least a week.

The CMA asked for the restraining order in January. It sought to wipe out the Dec. 15, 10 per cent Medi-Cal reductions ordered by the state Health Care Services Department—the administrator of the health care program for California's medically indigent.

Health Care Services Director Earl Brian said the cuts were needed because of an expected multi-million-dollar deficit in the program this year.

Sacramento County went to the 3rd District Court of Appeal recently in an effort to upset the reductions but the court dismissed its action without comment. Observers felt the appellate court declined to rule on the issue because it was before Judge Gallagher.

CMA President Ralph W. Burnett, Bakersfield, and President-elect Roberta Fenson, San Francisco, said when they filed their suit that the reductions had to be stopped "to save the health—and the lives—of the state's poor."

They said that despite the fact Medi-Cal was having financial problems, "it is a fact that for the first time all the poor had access to quality care —to what doctors call 'mainstream medicine.'

"Under the severe cutbacks imposed by the Department of Health Care Services as of Dec. 15, the 'mainstream medicine' concept is out the window. Even adequate care is often impossible."

Early in January Gallagher ruled the Reagan administration did not violate the law in reducing payments for Medi-Cal patients in nursing homes. The state agency had been sued by the California Association of Nursing Homes.

Gallagher said it was legal for the state to make economy moves to help solve budget problems.

Lensman Jailed In Contempt

UKIAH (UPI)—A preliminary hearing for three relatives of militant Indian leader Richard Oakes charged with attempted murder will be held Monday. Oakes promised to be on hand to witness the court proceedings.

The suspects, Dale, Harold and Robert Marrufo, appeared before Justice Court Judge Hale McCowen Jr. Thursday to plead innocent and to have a preliminary hearing date set.

Oakes appeared in the courtroom with 20 or 25 Indian companions. Judge McCowen ruled that no photographs were to be taken in the courtroom or in the corridor outside.

Robert Curry, 25, a photographer for the Ukiah Daily Journal, took pictures of Oakes in the corridor despite the judge's order. He was arrested and jailed when he refused to surrender his films. He was released on $60 bail with a hearing on contempt charges against him to be held next Thursday.

The Marrufo trio was arrested early Sunday following a scuffle outside the Gualala Hotel in which Eugene Leighton, Point Arena, was shot and wounded twice by rifle shots. He was struck in the right arm and side, but was reported in good condition.

Wilson: Put Dental Care In Programs

Dr. Charles E. Wilson, California Dental Association president-elect will call for inclusion of dental care in all public and private health care programs when he addresses the Marin County Dental Society next week.

In a press release, Dr. Wilson said that the definition of dental health care by legislators and administrative officials as an elective rather than an essential service in health care plans is "faculty" and must be corrected.

The alternative, Dr. Wilson said, rests with legislators and government officials who must redefine dental health as a basic essential in the next health program offered to Congress.

Dr. Wilson — a Fairfield dentist — will become president of the California Dental Association in April at its annual meeting in San Francisco. His address to the Marin society is set for 6:30 p.m. Tuesday at the Meadow Club in Fairfax.

Civic Center Display Of Animal Portraits

Sixteen oil paintings by animal portrait painter Lily Fast of Fairfax are on exhibit at the Marin County Library in the Civic Center.

The exhibit may be viewed from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. weekdays until March 15.

Fall Date Liked For Novato Congress

The Novato Chamber of Commerce has decided that the Congress for Community Progress, which tentatively had been scheduled for May, will be held next fall.

With several months preparation needed and no chairman selected for the event, directors decided Thursday to postpone the all-day event, reported Billie Garl, chamber secretary.

Novato Chamber of Commerce directors also:

MILITARY — Scheduled a military-civilian dinner with 50 military officers as guests of 50 chamber members at the Alvarado Inn March 17, and a luncheon, briefing and tour at Hamilton Air Force Base on April 1.

LUNCHEON — Received notice that Supervisor Arnold M. Baptiste will speak at a general membership luncheon at noon March 4 at Sportsman's Lodge.

SELECTED — Name Robert Churchill of West America Securities as a director and Gordon L. Lee, district manager of the Western California Telephone Co., as treasurer.

Chief Firm On No-Shoot Order

OAKLAND (UPI) —Police chief Charles Gain says he'll stake his reputation on a policy forbidding police to shoot at fleeing burglars.

Gain told members of "Citizens For Law and Order" at a city council work session that his 1968 order was the "most beneficial to the social harmony" of the city.

Earl W. Huntting, president of the citizens group, had just told the councilmen Thursday his organization would "not push" for revocation of the policy at this time. The group represents businessmen and attorneys concerned about "breakdown" of law enforcement and court decisions.

Quake Damage Cuts Gas In Sylmar Area

LOS ANGELES (UPI)—Damage to gas mains in the Sylmar area from last week's earthquake has forced termination of gas service to nearly 10,000 homes in the foothill communities of Sunland and Tujunga.

A spokesman for the Southern California Gas Co. said the lines were fractured in the Feb. 9 quake, permitting dirt to enter. The dirt worked its way up to filters located at several regulator stations in the Sunland-Tujunga area, partially blocking the filters Friday.

Sally Aims To Change VD Program

Sausalito Restaurateur Sally Stanford has been appointed to Gov. Ronald Reagan's 28-member task force on venereal disease.

She replaces screen star Raquel Welch, who resigned from the committee because of film commitments.

Miss Stanford, formerly San Francisco's most famous madam, said she is eager to try to change current programs of VD treatment and education.

"There have been fantastic blunders in this area," she said. "We are more enlightened about animals than people."

Miss Stanford said she would like to see creation of free clinics where people, particularly young people, can receive treatment without identifying themselves or listing their sexual partners —two requirements she feels keep many from seeking treatment.

She is convinced VD informational classes should be taught by "people the kids can relate to with complete freedom.

Brown Says 18-Year-Olds Can Register New Voters

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — Secretary of State Edmund G. Brown Jr. said yesterday that it was legal for 18-year-olds to register new voters.

Brown said his legal opinion has been sent to California's county clerks and registrars of voters. He made the finding, he said, because his office has received "many inquiries from local election officials."

Most counties have refused to name deputy voting registrars under 21 pending clarification of the matter, Brown said.

The secretary of state said, "Deputization of 18-year-olds is proper under California law and will provide a constructive outlet for the political energy of our young citizens."

He said the age of deputy registrars was not considered in the election code.

The state official said Congress in passing the Voting Rights Act giving 18-year-olds the right to participate in federal elections "considered 18-year-olds capable of understanding the oath and forms.

"It would be anomalous to take the position that 18-year-olds have these qualifications for the purpose of registering to vote but do not have the same qualifications for the purpose of being deputized to register others."

Sandstorms Lash Southland Roads

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Winds of near hurricane velocity lashed Southern California deserts into blinding sandstorms Friday, closing or restricting traffic on at least five Interstate highways.

The hardest hit area was the Mojave desert, where gusts were clocked at up to 72 miles an hour and created what some oldtimers described as the worst sandstorm in memory.

Innocent Plea In Drug Case

Peter Donald Tibbitts, 18, of Kentfield, has pleaded innocent in Marin Municipal Court to charges of possessing heroin and marijuana and a misdemeanor count of possessing a hypodermic needle.

Judge Peter Allen Smith referred the case to juvenile court, but set a preliminary hearing on the charges for March 2 if the case is not acceptable to juvenile court.

Preliminary hearings for four codefendants have already been set for the same date.

They were arrested Jan. 28 when police broke up a beer party at a Larkspur lumber yard.

Dairy Princess Blanks Ready

Applications are now available for entry in the 1971 District 3 Dairy Princess contest to be held May 8 at the Petaluma Veterans Memorial Auditorium.

The contest is open to girls at least 17 years old who live in Marin, Sonoma, Mendocino, Napa, Lake or Solano counties. The contestants must be high school seniors or graduates and have some connection with the dairy industry.

Applications may be obtained from the Petaluma Chamber of Commerce and must be returned with three wallet-size pictures. The first 12 entries will be accepted, based on the letter postmark date.

Warren's Wife Replies To Suit

SACRAMENTO (UPI) —The wife of Municipal Court Judge Earl Warren Jr., son of retired Chief Justice Earl Warren, attempted Friday to stop divorce proceedings and save their 17-year marriage.

Allen Fields, attorney for the former Cleo Patricia Kent, filed a petition for reconciliation in Superior Court. He said the matter could eventually be placed with a domestic relations counselor of the court.

Warren, 40, filed a petition Thursday for dissolution of their marriage. He listed irreconcilable differences as the reasons for the breakup.

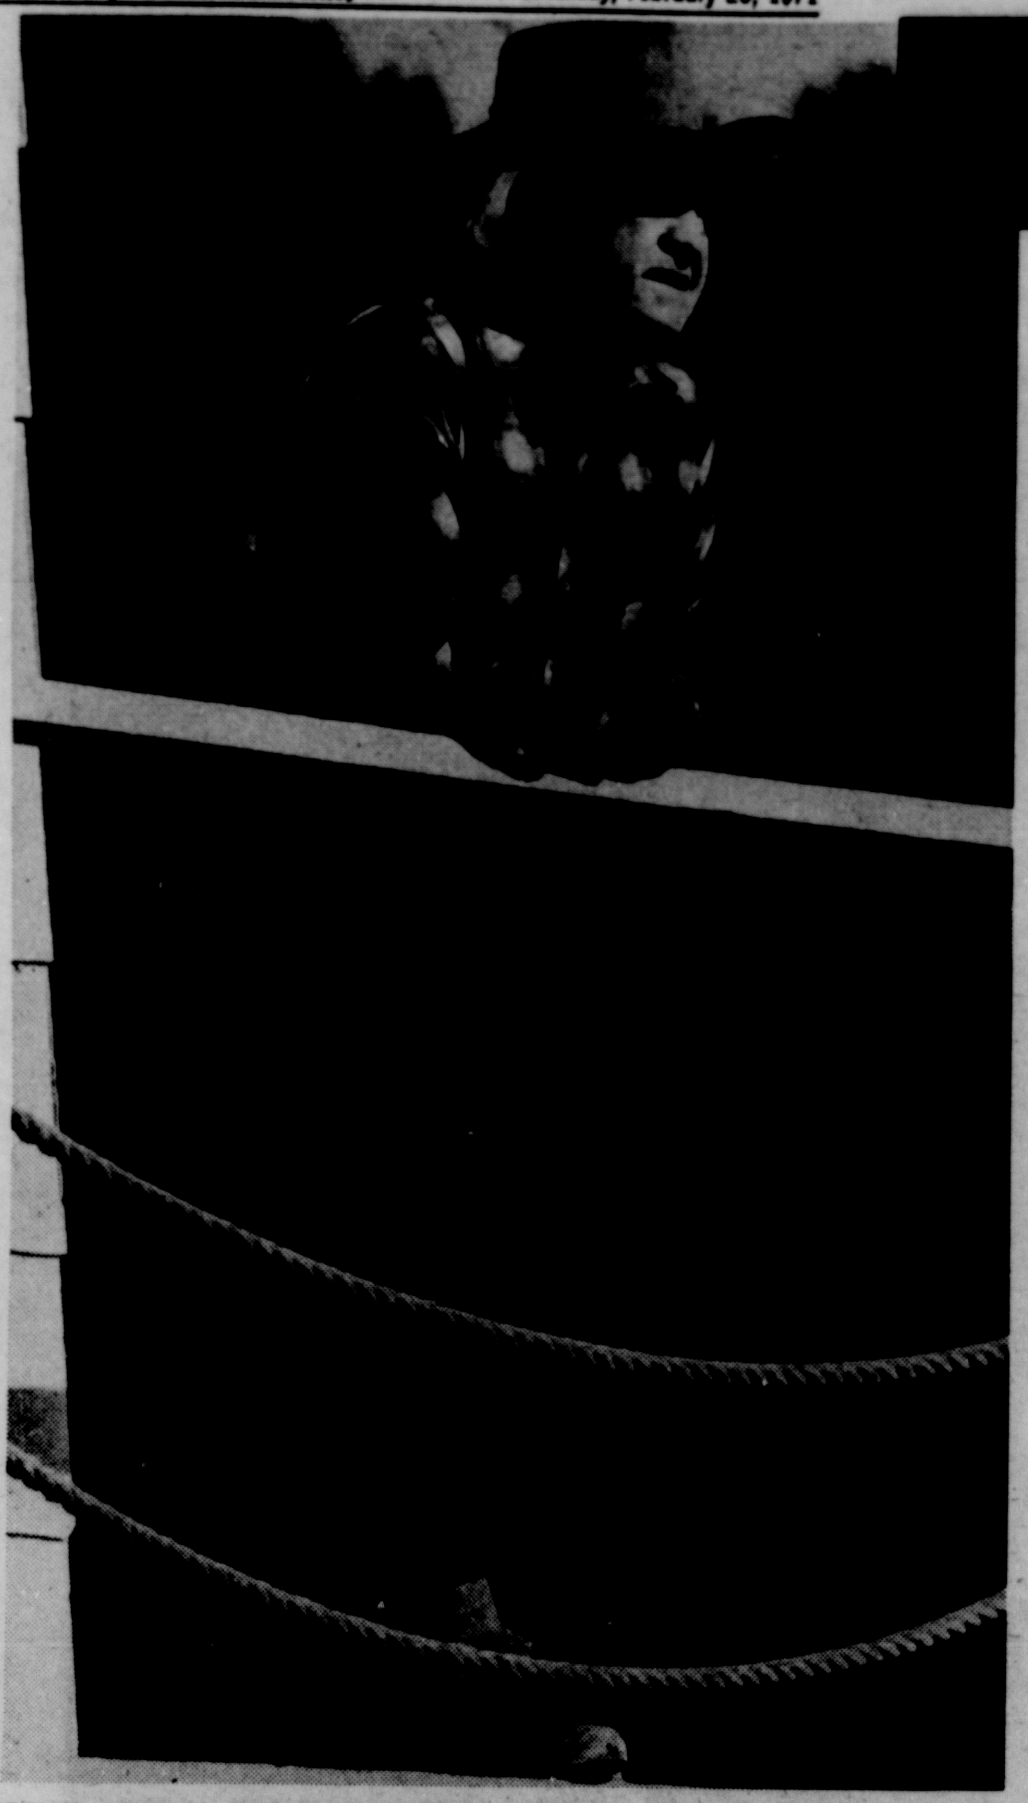
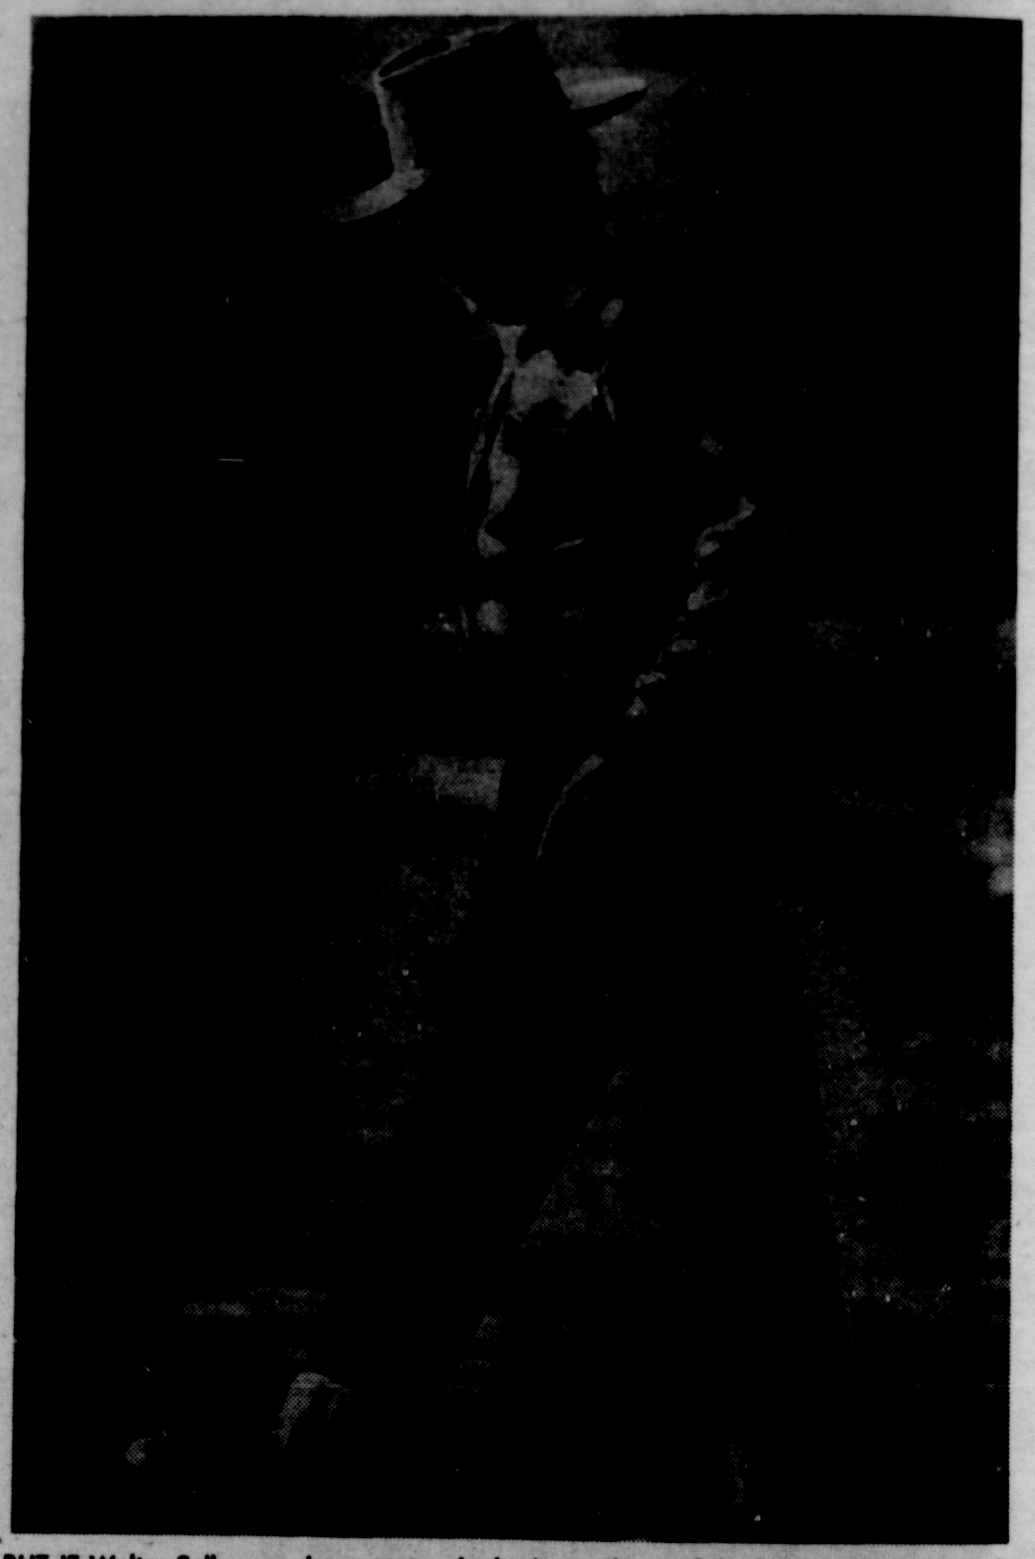
Profile Of A Marinite



FORMER LAWMAN Walter Bruno Sellmer, nearing 80 and retired, now has plenty of time for reflection, and from the porch of his home overlooking the Stinson Beach surf he ponders the new horizons that have opened to him since he began befriending the crippled and the blind.



BUT IF Walter Sellmer no longer totes the badge and gun of the lawman, he remains far from inactive. He starts each day with a brisk walk and four-mile jog to limber up the still spry legs that once chased down lawbreakers and poachers. And the rest of his day is filled with activity.

Walter Sellmer — The Last Of A Breed

Marin's Former Sheriff Has Found New Horizons

By WAT TAKESHITA

When Walter Bruno Sellmer retired as sheriff in 1955, a bit of the old West vanished from the Marin scene.

He was the last of that breed of western lawman, who relied on his star and six-shooter to protect the good guys from the bad.

Sellmer, the man, however, lives on in his beachfront home at Stinson Beach, reaching out for new horizons.

Since he hung up his gun 16 years ago, he's turned to the pen and typewriter to tackle a new field — the world of the shut-ins. Daily, he pounds out a stream of encouragement to fellow members of Handicaps Unlimited International and the National Shut-In Society. He has even mastered braille to keep in touch with the blind.

NOVATO'S FIRST speed-cop, later game warden and Marin sheriff, has turned humanitarian and poet.

The ageless wonder, who will turn 80 on May 16, has bridged the gap that separates young from old, the straights from dropouts. The sudden focus on ecology and love is nothing new to Sellmer. He's been fighting for conservation and ecology since 1914. The out-of-doors, the wonders of nature, and the marvels of Marin have been his stomping grounds for almost 60 years.

From his typewriter flow verses on peace and love, inspired by pen-pals scattered throughout the nation. One inspiration, in particular, is Miss Jean Isbell, who is confined to a wheelchair in Richfield, Utah. For the thrice-divorced Sellmer, this is his fourth romance.

TANNED FROM the sun and wind, his white hair combed straight back, Sellmer walks with the same brisk pace that old-timers still remember.

Newcomers to the beach marvel at the old gent who jogs three and four miles each morning along the roads of Stinson Beach. But few would guess that here goes a living legend who made Marin history for a half century.

Born in 1891 in San Francisco, he grew up south of the Slot (Market). Small but tough, he learned to use his fists in street fights and, in the ring. As a teen-ager, he boxed at the Barbary Coast for a dollar a fight as a 122-pound featherweight.

HIS FATHER, Jacob P. Sellmer, a carpet layer and upholsterer, bought some cabins in Larkspur about the turn of the century and rented them out.

Sellmer attended schools in Corte Madera and in San Francisco, completing the sixth grade.

In 1912, his father bought a ranch in Novato and started raising chickens. Young Sellmer and his bride, Hazel, settled down to chicken ranching in Novato.

HE STUMBLED into law enforcement quite by accident. "I was driving a horse and wagon one day when a car brushed me off the road," recalls Sellmer. "I was so mad I went to Judge (Herman) Rudolph and Constable (Tom) Sutton to complain."

"What we need is a speed cop to catch those pesky autos that go over 20 miles per hour and scare horses and chickens," the constable told him.

Hired on the spot, Sellmer became Novato's first speed-cop. He chugged along the roads of North Marin in a souped-up model T Ford, armed with a 30-30 rifle and a set of boxing gloves.

HE USED A stopwatch and roadside markers to clock the speeders, much as today's police use radar. "I got a dollar for each arrest. On Monday morning, I'd have a sack of money for Judge Rudolph."

Why did he carry boxing gloves?

"One day I arrested a fella, and he said if I had a pair of gloves, he'd knock hell out of me. From then on, I carried a set of gloves in the car but never had to use them."

He beefed up his patrol by getting a Harley-Davidson motorcycle, which he hid behind haystacks to nab speeders. He became so well-known that he often disguised himself as a hobo and sat around camp fires to watch for pesky drivers.

TOO MUCH dedication to law enforcement led to his downfall. Conscientious Sellmer spotted the constable's car parked on the wrong side of the road. "I called him down on it, and was fired on the spot. That was the end of Speed-Cop Sellmer."

As deputy constable and speed-cop, Sellmer had worked closely with the state game warden, the late David Hoen. When he lost his job as speed-cop, he was hired as game warden on Hoen's recommendation.

From 1916 to 1930, Sellmer was the scourge of the poacher and the fish and game violator. He won recognition statewide as the game warden with the greatest number of arrests.

HE USED HIS motorcycle, horse, car, boats and even an airplane (built by his father) to cover the county from land, air and sea.

Signs popped up in the remotest areas of Mount Tamalpais, warning hikers and hunters: "Game Warden Sellmer will be here today. He might be watching you now!"

To put teeth into those warnings, Sellmer created a system of secret agents, with 463 citizen friends to watch for violators. None of these agents knew the identity of the others.

SELLMER EVEN deputized his wife (second wife, Mary) as a game warden to help him patrol the county.

In July of 1928, Sellmer sounded an official warning on the importance of ecology. "The public has awakened to the fact that our wildlife must be protected if we would keep it from extermination," he wrote in the Marin Herald."

When he nailed citizens Jake Obitz and Pistol Smith for killing a doe, Sellmer put the carcass in a barber shop window in San Rafael with this sign: "Doe killed by Jake Obitz. Arrested today by W. B. Sellmer, game warden!"

JUDGE RUDOLPH, presiding at his cheese factory in North Marin, sentenced Obitz to 60 days in jail and $100 fine.

What he lacked in manpower and modern technology, Sellmer made up in tenacity and ingenuity.

Along Point Reyes, abalone hunters were required to bring their catch to shore before taking them out of the shell so that the game warden could measure the size.

"WHEN I questioned the size of abalones they had taken out of the shells, they'd show me the empty shells on the beach, but I began to suspect they were using the same shells over and over again."

Sellmer meticulously scoured the Point Reyes shoreline, putting small marks on every abalone shell he could find. The next time the abalone hunters pointed to their shells, Sellmer found his marks on most of them. That put a stop to undersized abalone hunting.

The incident he recalls with greatest satisfaction is the time he saved the lives of hundreds of passengers riding a train that was headed straight for a horse stuck in a trestle.

"IT WAS ON a curve near St. Vincent's orphanage north of San Rafael," recalls Sellmer. "A boy was leading a horse over the trestle when the horse's legs broke through, and it was stuck on the tracks belly deep. I could hear the train coming around the curve. I ran toward the train as fast as I could and stopped it just in time."

IN THE DISGUISE of a hobo, Walter B. Sellmer covered the roads of Marin County back in 1914, stopping any daredevil motorist who might be speeding at faster than 30 miles an hour.

A Former Sheriff Exchanges Pistol For A Typewriter

Sellmer and the train crew used ropes to hoist the horse off the tracks, as the train passengers cheered.

Sellmer had some close brushes with death while game warden.

"ONE DAY MY boat got swamped in Tomales Bay. I was out of gas, had lost the oars, and was sinking fast. Two men came by on a boat so I yelled for help. But they yelled back, 'We know you, Sellmer. You're just trying to trap us for breaking the laws.' And they took off."

He was finally rescued by Antonio Rocca of Tomales.

In 1927, he was recommended for the Carnegie Medal for heroism for stripping to his drawers and jumping into the surf at Stinson Beach to rescue a drowning man. Of 200 people on the beach, Sellmer was the only one who dared the treacherous breakers to swim to the floundering victim.

WATER POLLUTION was also one of Sellmer's concerns. One day, he spotted Fred Genazzi of Point Reyes dumping garbage into Papermill Creek. Instead of arresting the man on the spot, Sellmer hid behind bushes and shot the scene with his movie camera.

Arrested for water pollution, Genazzi told Judge Rudolph he wasn't the culprit. "Sellmer can't see straight!" Genazzi testified.

Sellmer quietly draped a bedspread against the wall and turned on his movie projector. "Thirty days in the county jail," the judge ordered.

SELLMER CARRIED his campaign for conservation statewide. For the State Fair in Sacramento, he produced an exhibit entitled "Forest Tragedy." The feature of the exhibit was a large photograph of a fallen doe, with two orphaned fawns standing helplessly by. With a flair for dramatics, Sellmer captioned the photograph: "A Mother Murdered." It got statewide publicity.

"The picture was posed," Sellmer admitted. "One fawn was a real live one, but the other two deer were stuffed."

Sellmer quit as game warden to run for county sheriff in 1930 when Sheriff Jack Keating died. He nosed out Alex McCurdy by 478 votes.

IN ALL HIS 40 years of law enforcement, the last 24 as sheriff, Sellmer never drew a gun or club in anger. "I always tried to talk to them, to calm them. Usually, if you talk to them quietly, they will cooperate."

Pointing to a broken nose which he suffered during his boxing days, Sellmer jokes: "Maybe this helped some. They'd look at the broken nose and figure this guy's been in a couple of scrapes."

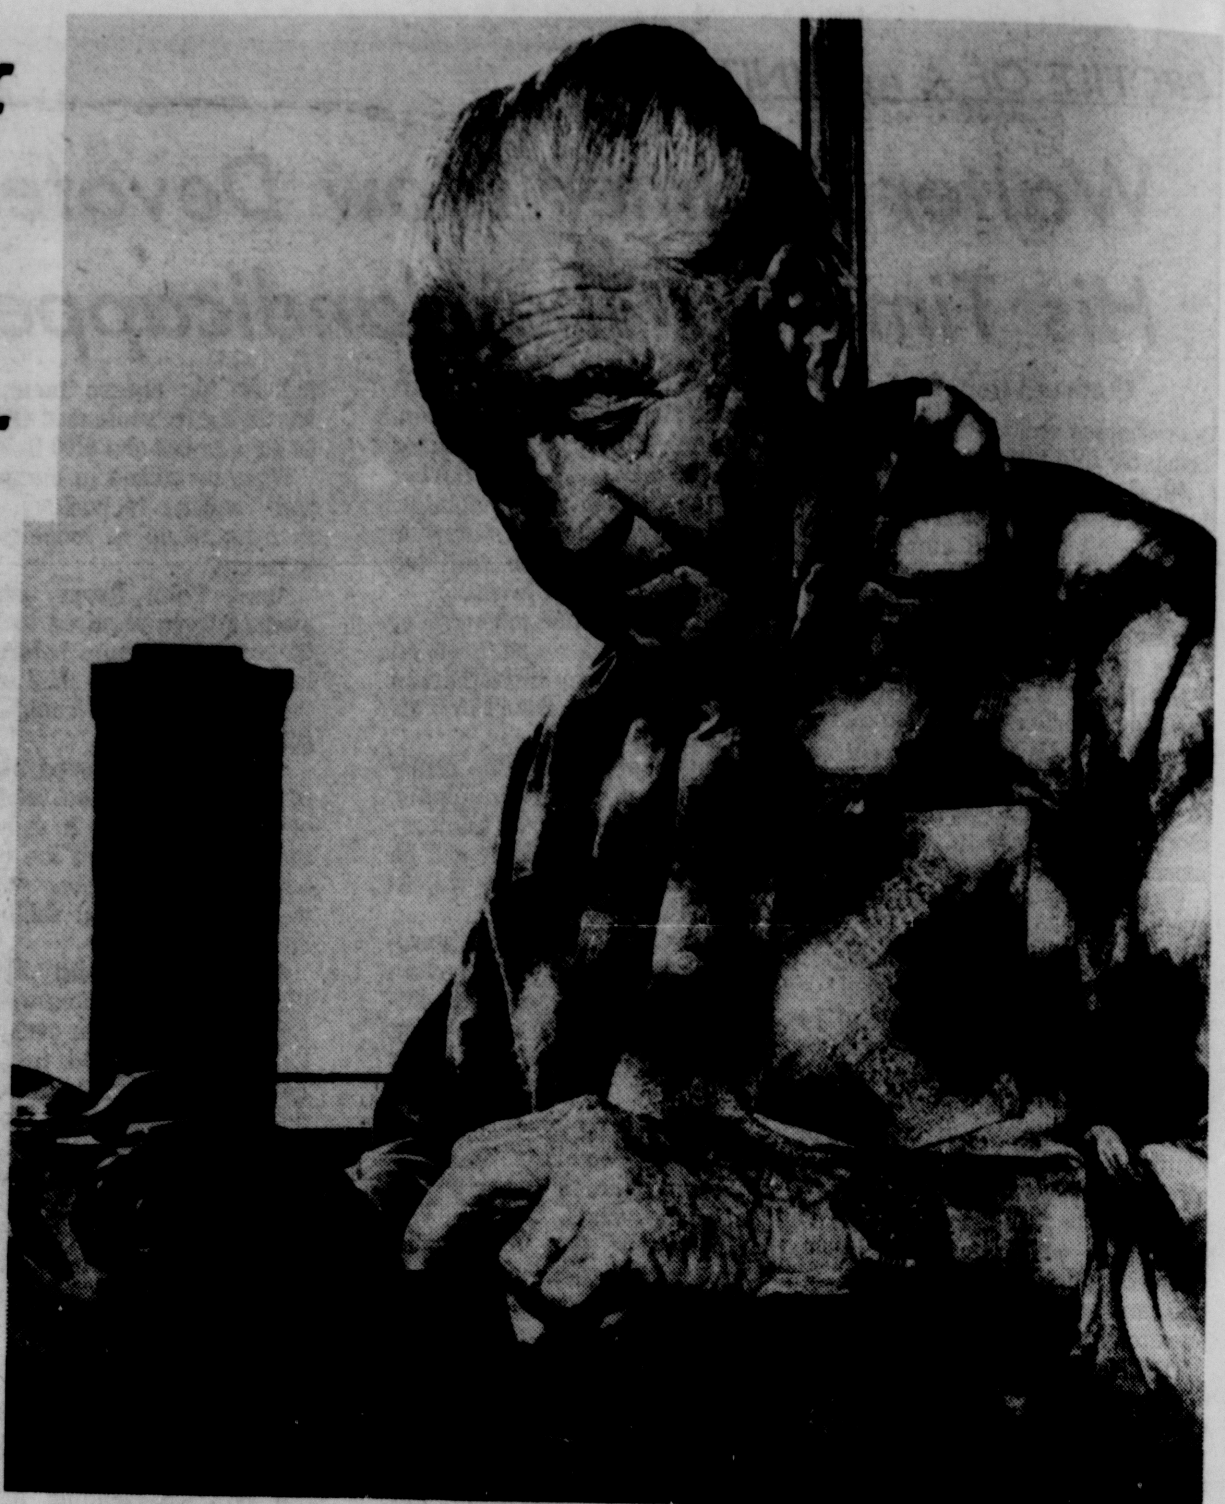
The one tragedy that brought gunfire and death erupted on Jan. 16, 1935, when four armed San Quentin desperadoes took four hostages and broke for freedom in Warden J. B. Holohan's car. The car headed north.

"I ORDERED the Black Point drawbridge raised, and we tailed them," said Sellmer. "I ordered my men not to shoot, as long as there were hostages."

Blocked at the drawbridge, the getaway car roared back toward Hicks Valley. Tomales Constable Jack Bones and his posse, including young Dist. Atty. Al Bagshaw, were waiting for them near the Valley Ford Creamery. The posse shot out one tire, and the car careened into the creamery building.

In the shootout that followed, Bagshaw dropped the ringleader with a blast from his shotgun, and the others surrendered.

In 1954, when the late David Menary Sr. outpolled him in his try for a seventh term, Sellmer dropped out of the limelite to take up a new life-style, later popularized by hippies and the love generation.



AT HIS TYPEWRITER in his Stinson Beach home, Walter B. Sellmer sits down daily to tap out messages of hope and love to his crippled and blind "pen pals" throughout the country. It has become an abiding interest with the former lawman.

HE SET UP housekeeping in a trailer at a toll gate on the road that leads through William Hall's ranch to Drake's Beach. He combed the beaches for stones, sea shells, and whalebone to sell to tourists who passed the toll gate.

Beachcombing and trailer life game him time for meditation, which opened up a new horizon that borders on the religious.

"I was never religious," admits Sellmer. "But I began to ask myself what would God want from a person like me. Then one day an old woman came along in shabby clothes. She wanted to buy a cluster of sea shells for a person in a wheel chair. But she did not have the $3.

SHE WAS ABOUT to leave when I called her back. So I said I want you to give this to the person in the wheelchair."

"That was the turning point," admitted Sellmer. "That was to be my future. I would help the handicapped. And you know, it has brought me more luck, success and happiness. The whole world seems to be opened up to me."

Divorced from his third wife, Semiana, in 1959, Sellmer dropped his beachcombing and began devoting his life to helping the old, the blind and the shut-ins, including his father, who dies in 1968 at age 98.

HE HAS THREE sons. William is a correctional officer in San Quentin, Harry is a printer in San Francisco, and Walter J. works for the telephone company in Petaluma.

His daughter is Eunice Willcutt of San Rafael, who once reigned as Miss Marin during a July Fourth celebration. Once a week, Sellmer drives in from Stinson Beach to have lunch with Eunice at the Taverna Yiasou restaurant near the Civic Center.

From his house on stilts on Calle de Resaca, which overlooks the Stinson surf, Sellmer pounds his typewriter and writes in braille, spreading cheer "to my many friends." He buys artificial limbs, wheel chairs, and other aids to shut-ins throughout the country.

FOR INCOME to supplement his social security and pension, he represents a firm that prints business and postal cards. He also sells rubber stamps and magnetic signs that fasten to automobiles.

"All I need is something to live on," said Sellmer. "The rest I'd rather give to my friends.

"All shut-ins are wonderful people. I've fallen in love with one in particular, Jean Isbell. I met her three years ago and sent her a diamond ring, so we're engaged. But the problem is, I can't take care of her. So we write to each other every day." More than 4,000 letters and poems have passed between them.

SELLMER IS California's assistant representative to the National Shut-In Society. Because of his law background, many of his shut-in friends address him as Marshal Dillon of Stinson Beach.

Walter Sellmer, for 40 years the scourge of the speeder, poacher and lawbreaker, is at peace with the world. One of his recent poems, published by the Handicaps Unlimited International, sums up his philosophy:

HAPPINESS — PEACE OF MIND

"When All the world seems blue
And others smile, but not at you,
Daily tasks, and listless days
And misery lurks in many ways.

We wonder why we feel that way
While others smile and are so gay,
A train of laughter makes us wonder
How we failed and began to blunder

We thought of God, and began to pray
He heard our plea, and showed the way
To help the handicapped, and the blind
Brought us happiness and peace of mind."

STUDENT GARY SHARP works in a chemistry laboratory in Sonoma State College's Darwin Hall at purifying a new, heat-sensitive organic compound. Sharp is just one of the Sonoma State chemistry majors who are impressed with the approachability of the faculty members and enthusiastic over the program. He is a Fairfax resident.

Involved Students, A Dedicated Faculty

These Ingredients Make Sonoma State Chemistry Department A Success

"I can't explain it, but I feel free here. There's a spirit about the place that excites me."

Nineteen-year-old Vincent Wilson of Rohnert Park is speaking about the chemistry department of Sonoma State College.

And it is the kind of remark that is echoed time and time again by other chemistry majors whose enthusiasm and dedication often keep them in the lecture halls and laboratories of Darwin Hall on the Rohnert Park campus for long, extra hours.

The involvement of the students in this relatively small department seems to be attributable to no single magic ingredient or formula.

INSTEAD, STUDENTS are inclined to credit the dedicated corps of faculty members and their commitment for the special atmosphere that flourishes in the chemistry department at Sonoma State.

"I enjoy working in the labs, and it is largely because there are always faculty members available to help me with my problems and to answer my questions," says 21-year-old James Moyer of Montclair.

The students add that their work is tough — but always interesting. And among the students there exists a comraderie that causes an exchange of views and information among them along with the dialogue between faculty and students.

"I DON'T FEEL I'm taking classes from authoritarian figures," says Gary Sharp, 28, from Fairfax. "These teachers are all approachable. I find myself chatting about some aspect of chemistry for a half hour when my original question may have taken only a minute to answer."

"It's easy to like these professors," another student said. "Most of them aren't too old and they relate well. They're athletic and mix well with college age students."

Dr. Robert E. Holmes, associate professor of chemistry, heads a department of 10 faculty members who have earned their doctorates. Almost all are under 40. At 56, Dr. Ambrose R. Nichols Jr., former Sonoma State College president, will return to teaching full-time in chemistry in the spring semester and will become the senior member.

"WE ALL HAVE different viewpoints," Dr. Holmes said, "But we talk about them and use these viewpoints to help each other. This is a major asset of the department's faculty."

Dr. Holmes, who is a physical chemist, also stated that the decision to make this a teaching department with a balanced research effort, not one which emphasized research, was made early, and the commitment to that decision is considered essential to a successful program.

"We've never added a member to our faculty who hasn't stayed, because we seek people with a certain kind of attitude: Teaching enhanced and supported by research."

"GENE (DR. Gene D. Schaumberg, associate professor of chemistry, and chairman of the division of natural sciences) and I started the chemistry major in 1956. We were faced with a building under construction and a quarter million dollar budget to outfit the chemistry section alone," Dr. Holmes related. "That was the start.

"We committed ourselves to the task with the belief that a smaller number of quality instruments was more vital than many inexpensive units. With sophisticated instruments, a student can push the level of an experiment much deeper and his understanding will be more profound."

Dr. Schaumberg, an organic chemist, says, "Students must think for themselves. We don't want them to perform just technical procedures. Science has synthesized the gene; life will be next. People must know what this means and decide whether it should be done.

"WE ARE ALL concerned with teaching," states Dr. Don Marshall, the department's analytical chemist. "The personal attention we can give students makes our department special.

"I don't want students to hesitate to see me. I have no formal teaching assignments on Wednesday, but I'm here. I enjoy what I do.

Dr. Marvin Kientz, biochemist, admits there are aspects of chemistry which, like portions of any field, can be drudgery if they are not made interesting. In his continued effort, he says, "I want to know what my students are getting out of classes, why they're having problems and what I can do to facilitate their learning; however, there are few shortcuts."

Dr. Nichols, a physical chemist, needs little introduction when it comes to teaching. He spent 22 years teaching chemistry at San Diego State before accepting an administrative post.

A QUOTATION from a former student in a recent issue of "Scientific American" attests to his teaching abilities: "I worked for eight years in the real world — as a lumberman, machinist, machine designer, loftsman — before returning to college. I turned chemist because Ambrose Nichols . . . was the best teacher I've ever met."

Dr. Dale Trowbridge, an organic chemist and one of the more recent faculty appointments, feels that, "We're fortunate. There is great rapport here.

"At larger schools students must motivate themselves to a large degree. Here, we can help a great deal. I teach a general chemistry course which has a large number of biology majors; consequently, we are trying to include more organic and biochemistry.

"I THINK MY students are now more concerned with their education than in the past. They're continually proving course content and demanding relevance . . . This is only my second year here, but the department offers me a great deal."

Dr. Les Brooks notes that the college owns an NCR Century 200 digital computer which is used extensively by faculty and students in chemistry.

Dr. Brooks says, "The chemist of today must master a growing volume of complex mathematical principles and theories. Our students take a number of courses in math, physics, and physical chemistry. By using computers and electronic calculators, sophisticated and laborious chemical calculations and statistical determinations are realizeable at the undergraduate level."

THE CHEMISTRY Department offers a course in applied computer programming. In addition, the department makes electronic calculators available to students at all levels. Students feel that "the combination of the digital computer and the electronic calculators provide a saving of time which is invaluable and allows for efficient use of their precious time."

The comments by Dr. David Eck, organic chemistry, Dr. Vincent Hoagland, biochemistry, and Dr. Douglas Rustad, inorganic chemistry, continue in the same vein.

Motivation brings most of the faculty to the campus daily, whether they are formally teaching that day or not. Evening preparation, research, faculty goverhance, curriculum development, committtee work, community service and other commitments all add to the contribution each faculty member makes.

NOT ONLY IS the faculty active academically, but it is athletically active as well.

Dr. Rustad was one of the prime distance runners in the country several years ago, and still competes in local races. He, and other professors like Drs. Brooks, Marshall, Trowbridge, and Kientz, manage to get in some running or basketball during the week. Dr. Schaumberg is one of the better basketball players on the SSC campus.

The sports activity is a minor point, but a definite part of the picture for it provides an additional interaction of faculty and students.

SINCE 1965, the Bachelor of Arts Degree in chemistry has been offered at the Sonoma State campus.

In addition, this year the college is offering the Bachelor of Science Degree in chemistry. This is the first degree of its type on the campus. It requires more course work in the chemistry major and has been sought by the faculty for several years since some 80 per cent of all chemistry graduates at SSC subsequently enroll in graduate programs in chemistry, allied sciences or professional fields.

The chemistry major in general pursues his professional training. As one student puts it, "Who would enroll in such a demanding program just to get a college degree? A chemistry degree is neither a convenient nor easy way to get through college."

THE PRIMARY focus of the department has been to prepare students to do professional

RENEE LeBOEUF, a Sonoma State College chemistry major, gets some instructions from Dr. David Eck of the faculty on the operation of the nuclear magnetic resonance spectrometer, a sensitive instrument that measures minute changes in magnetic fields caused by certain atoms. The information is then used to determine the structure of complex molecules.

DR. ROBERT E. HOLMES, head of the Sonoma State College chemistry department calibrates an infra-red spectrophotometer used in the precise determination of the minute spacings between individual atoms in gaseous molecules. The department has stressed quality over quantity in the acquisition of laboratory instruments.

work related to or supported by chemistry. Hence undergraduate research is an integral requirement for the chemistry major.

This research orientation is shown by conducting the lab portions of both the first organic course and the advanced course in modern techniques in organic chemistry as project labs with the facilities available 40 hours per week. A similar attitude is prevalent in many of the upper division courses.

The B.A. and B.S. degree offerings allow the student flexibility in tailoring the depth and breadth of his program to meet his individual goals.

THE B.A. DEGREE is a four-year program designed to provide chemical training for those wishing to obtain technical work or work allied to chemistry such as pre-professional, medicine, electronics, food processing, chemical sales, patent, safety, library, or supervisory work in the chemical industries. This degree would provide minimal preparation for graduate study should the degree holder consider continuing education toward an advanced degree.

The B.A. pattern is especially useful for credential candidates and will offer an opportunity for them to be more broadly prepared in the natural sciences.

The B.S. degree is a four-year program designed to provide an adequate and strong chemical training needed by candidates desiring to work as chemists in industrial and governmental laboratories or desiring to enter graduate programs in chemistry leading to an advanced degree. The degree is built up from the fundamental requirements of the B.A. degree coupled with more intense training in particular specialization areas.

ONE HUNDRED twenty-eight units are required for completion of the B.S. program. Since the program only requires four additional units overall, less freedom is available for choice of electives. This does not detract from the major, in that students electing this major are clearly planning for the future demands of graduate school.

The department's offerings are varied and highly professional. In the 1971-72 catalog, there will be 37 different offerings under the chemistry heading, including general introductory courses, specialized advanced topics and independent student research. Students encounter all phases of physical, organic, biochemistry, inorganic and analytical chemistry, at introductory or advanced levels.

Modification currently in progress for the first and second year programs will introduce various fields of chemistry to the major earlier than in previous years.

"WE WANT TO introduce the physical principles of chemistry early, while including analytical, organic, and biochemistry and, to a degree, the usual topics of general chemistry," Dr. Holmes said.

A special accelerated general chemistry course, 125AB, involves three hours of lecture, a problem session and six hours of lab weekly. It includes the introductory aspects of quantitative analysis, physical chemistry and instrumental analysis.

This course is so concentrated that science majors can bypass the analytical chemistry course.

THE OTHER general chemistry course, 115AB, with its high involvement of biology students, has less emphasis on physical chemistry and more stress on organic and biochemistry.

All faculty members agree there is a great deal of effort which students must make in this program. Such items as atomic structure, elements, bonding, but to name a few, must be understood at the start.

Chemistry majors work hard — they have long hours.

The discussion of, and solution to, environmental problems are of particular interest to the department and its students.

THIS YEAR in Chemistry 102, a course for non-science majors, stress is placed on methodology and the importance of chemistry in the environment. Besides learning about atomic structure, chemical bonding, acids, proteins and carbohydrates, students are shown how chemistry relates to drugs, over-population, food additives and pollution.

In 1970, a course entitled "Pollution and the Environment" was initiated. The new catalog will list it as: "A study of the problems of air, water, and land pollution with special emphasis on chemical analysis."

Another course, "Chemistry and the Environment" will look at the effects of insecticides, phosphate detergents, mercury and lead compounds on the ecology of North America and the earth, including the conflict over economic advantage versus ecological effects.

SPECIALIZED offerings include topics such as applied nuclear and radio-chemistry and an electronics class which explores basic circuit theory, operation of tube and transistor devices, analysis of typical circuits used in electronic scientific instruments. In fact, one of the surprises which greet students at SSC is the sophisticated equipment at their disposal.

"I have talked with science students at larger schools and only in the senior or graduate years are they accorded the opportunity to work with precision equipment. Here we can use any equipment, once we're checked out." This is the remark of a chemistry major who admits to being wary about attending this small state college.

He continued to say, "I wouldn't switch now."

REPRESENTATIVE instrumentation includes: Ultraviolet, infrared, atomic absorption, and X-Ray spectrometers for the determination of molecular structures, the identification of trace or large quantities of a myriad of chemical substances, and the precise determination of the concentration of the gamut of trace pollutants to "pure" products; fraction collectors and gas chromatographs for the separation and identification of mixtures of various chemicals; programmable WANG electronic calculators and an NCR Century 200 campus computer to aid in the rapid reduction of data and accurate calculation of results.

Because of their arduous schedule, chemistry majors have been accused of being different from other students. Not so, say students and faculty alike.

Most students were concerned about the Cambodian decision, but felt it was a political issue. They established priorities and did what they could in their time allotment. Their educations are vital to them, and they were determined to continue their courses.

DR. KIENTZ notes, "Perhaps our students are not as socially sensitive as students in other disciplines. They don't think about these problems as much. They're working too hard.

"As we have designed the program, with the heavy doses of chemistry, math, and physics, our students find it difficult to crusade extensively for social issues and also continue to get a proper science education."

One of the worries of the faculty is teaching load. In comparison to other institutions nationally, according to Dr. Holmes, a 12-unit teaching load in chemistry is high. Not merely lecture time is involved. Nearly every class includes laboratories which demand a great deal of preparation.

The heavy teaching load was criticized by a National Science Foundation consultant who analyzed the department: "The contact hour teaching loads are too high in the department . .. it is a load that is not conducive to the best teaching.

THE JOB MARKET for potential graduates fluctuates. These fluctuations are constantly reflected in the character of the departmental program.

While at the PH. D. level there is currently a surplus of pure chemists due in large part to a deflated space industry, there is a critical need for chemists with two to four years of training. There is also a need for environmental scientists at all levels of training who have an appreciation for physical solutions to environmental problems. It's a multi-faceted problem for chemists, biologists, physicists, economists and social scientists.

A crucial problem facing the department is space limitation. With all other sciences, plus art and mathematics housed in the same structure, space is at a premium, and future growth of the department will soon be dependent on the realization of more facilities.

THE CONTINUOUS task of the department is to upgrade the curriculum to keep it at a high professional level. Now that the department offers the B.S. as well as the B.A. program, scheduling for evaluation and accreditation by the American Chemical Society uses established minimum standards to evaluate the quality of a degree program. Recognition by the ACS and approval of the B.S. program will constitute significant national professional confidence in the department and its program.

Once the B.S. degree is approved by the ACS, the department will complete plans for the institution of a Masters Degree in chemistry. Although originally planned for 1971-72, the department will delay the initiation of the Masters program until a new Physical Science-Mathematics Building becomes a fact.

STUDENT ED WILLIAMS works "after hours" on an individual project in the Sonoma State College introductory organic chemistry laboratory, indicative of the special dedication and enthusiasm that both faculty and students in the department seem to generate.

USING A PULLEY APPARATUS that is part of the specialized exercising equipment at Bob Fuller's Conditioning Therapy Gym in Kentfield, Erica Young wins the approval of physical therapist Fuller as she gives her left hip flexer muscle, weakened by polio, a needed workout. Erica is one of many who use the gymnasium and Fuller's specialized training and experience to help them along the road to recovery from injuries or ailments.

Bob Fuller: 2 Hats, 2 Homes

Hospital Administrator Also Hard-Working Therapist

By DON KEOWN

A woman whose activities were once severely restricted by a back problem now not only performs her work as a housewife without fear or difficulty, but also pursues such sports as skiing and horseback riding.

A middle-aged woman immobilized by a stroke who had to be helped from place to place now transports herself, extremely mobile with the assistance of only a cane.

A victim of rheumatoid arthritis has increased the dexterity of his once crippled hands to the point where he now works at a job that requires the driving of a bus. And in the process, has replaced depression with an almost euphoric enthusiasm for life.

ALL THESE, and more, credit their progress in their struggles to resume normal living, despite their ailments, in part to the physical exercise programs they have undertaken at the direction of Bob Fuller, registered physical therapist.

Fuller is a man who not only wears two hats, but also has two "homes."

At Center Medical and Rehabilitation Hospital in Kentfield, he has been the administrator for the past two years and the head of its physical therapy program for eight years.

AND, ALSO IN Kentfield, he is the owner and proprietor of Bob Fuller's Conditioning Therapy gymnasium in the Redwood Medical Building at 1125 Drake Boulevard.

Both places have afforded Fuller with opportunities to develop his own philosophy and approaches for physical therapy work with those with physical problems.

Center Medical and Rehabilitation Center boasts on its staff four full-time physical therapists (in addition to Fuller) and two full-time occupational therapists.

"THIS IS A very large force of therapists for a 99-bed hospital," Fuller points out.

And he adds. "I think we are unique in the Bay Area in offering such an extensive therapy program. This is possible because we are so specialized. Center Medical Hospital is devoted to internal medicine and to rehabilitation."

At his private gymnasium, too, Fuller works with a good many people who are fighting back against ailments and injuries that threaten to make them invalids or partial invalids.

HE ESTIMATES that approximately one-fifth of his clients come to the gymnasium with rehabilitation as their

It makes no difference what cuased the bag to melt on your husband's suit and stained it. The problem is . . . what can be done about it.

Unless you are an expert in stain removal, I suggest you do not attempt to remove the stain yourself. The plastic stain may be removed by your drycleaner. The stained area should be soaked in perchlorethylene, brushed, then drycleaned.

A warning should be given when perchlorethylene is mentioned. It is highly toxic, especially when hot. Avoid inhaling the fumes and use it in a well-ventilated room. "Perc" is not flammable, but it is safest when used by your drycleaner.

Rehabilitation In The Gymnasium

Exercise Plays Major Role In Balanced Recovery Program From Physical Disorders

principal reason for being there.

And among the other 80 per cent who come for conditioning, there are, Fuller adds, many who also have physical disorders that they hope will benefit from the exercise. "Sometimes they are not even aware of their problems," therapist Fuller adds.

Most of those with physical problems come to him in search of help because they have heard of his work from others who feel they have benefitted from his assistance, Fuller says.

BUT NO SMALL number come at the recommendation of their physicians, he adds.

Fuller stresses that he, and other physical therapists in Marin, work in close cooperation with the medical profession.

For instance, if the patient has a physical imparment and is not in the gymnasium at the instructions of his doctor, Fuller invariably contacts the physician for approval before proceeding with the exercise-therapy program.

FULLER IS the president of the Marin Registered Physical and Occupational Therapy Society of between 35 and 40 members, whose objectives, along with maintaining the high standards of the profession, include the fostering of close cooperation with the physicians and their organizations.

Fuller says his choice of physical therapy as a vocation was a natural one "since I had always been interested in and associated with athletic endeavors, especially physical education and training for sports."

Physical therapy he sees as simply "a fefinement" of that earlier interest.

EXCEPT FOR some experience as a physical education instructor in schools, he has devoted his adult life to gymnasium management and physical conditioning and therapy.

The new duties as administrator of Center Medical and Rehabilitation Hospital which he took on two years ago in no way interfere with his dedication to physical therapy and conditioning, he says. "In fact, it enables me to carry on the therapy program exactly the way I feel it should be handled."

He brings to the hospital and to his own gymnasium 20 years of experience in physical fitness, plus training at the D. T. Watson School of Physical Therapy, affiliated with the University of Pittsburgh in Pennsylvania.

HIS GYM employs a staff of eight. He has been the owner there for two years, and prior to that he managed other gyms.

Physical therapy in a non-hospital setting, he believes, is often more effective with some patients. "They find the surroundings more normal and are therefore less inhibited."

What kinds of patients come in for therapy?

"THE VAST numbers are the victims of the kinds of chronic diseases and disabilities that seem to abound in our county," Fuller says. "The arthritics, the post-strokes, the bad backs and shoulders, etc."

A STATIONARY bicycle enables Lucille Hirchert to apply gentle exercise to her arthritic right hip, thus building up its endurance. The resistance of the pedals and the speed of the wheels can be controlled.

Therapy for those afflicted with back and shoulder problems is generally relatively simple in comparison to the severe arthritics and to those who have suffered strokes, he adds.

Fuller adds that his reputation for the treatment of back and joint problems has brought sufferes from not only other points in the Bay Area but from the farther corners of the Far West as well to his gymnasium and to the Kentfield hospital for his expert guidance and evaluation. The ages vary from 8 to 80.

Fuller emphasizes the need for a balanced therapy program in helping such people.

"PROPER, carefully chosen exercise is important," he says. "But the emotional and social aspects of the problem must be considered as well in the treatment. The approach must be a balanced one."

PHYSICAL THERAPIST Bob Fuller watches while Erica Young works to restore spinal flexibility and strength to lateral abdominal muscles on her road to recovery from the effects of polio.

Therapist And The Handicapped

Bob Fuller Aids Those Fighting Back Against Crippling Ailments And Injuries

While the Fuller gymnasium is a well-equipped one with exercise devices, large whirlpool baths, sauna, steam room, showers and lockers, Fuller emphasizes the absence of "gimmicky machines and quacky methods."

He is sharply critical of the practices by which he feels some health spas, physical fitness gymnasiums and reducing salons have brought public distrust upon the whole field.

FOR INSTANCE, he says, the contracts required by state law to inform the customer as to his entitlement for his money should be used for the protection of the client, not to bind him to the gym.

"Anytime conditions make it impossible for the patient to continue the exercise course, such as a move from the community, or he feels dissatisfaction with the program or his progress, he should be promptly released from the contract terms," Fuller says. "And an appropriate refund should be made."

On the other hand, Fuller believes, the gymnasium proprietor and therapist should strive faithfully to comply with each and every provision of the contract.

FOUR-FIFTHS OF the clients at Bob Fuller's Conditioning Therapy gymnasium are there primarily, not to repair the ravages of illnesses or injuries, but to lose weight or to improve their general physical fitness.

A key element for the success of such programs, Fuller says, is that the exercises and attendant procedures be selected for the specific needs of each individual client.

And such a program, properly conceived and faithfully followed, might well prove the ounce of prevention that would necessitate the therapy that others must undertake to remedy or partially correct the damages done by maladies.

"THE PHYSICALLY fit person is just naturally less susceptible to serious disease and injury," Fuller says.

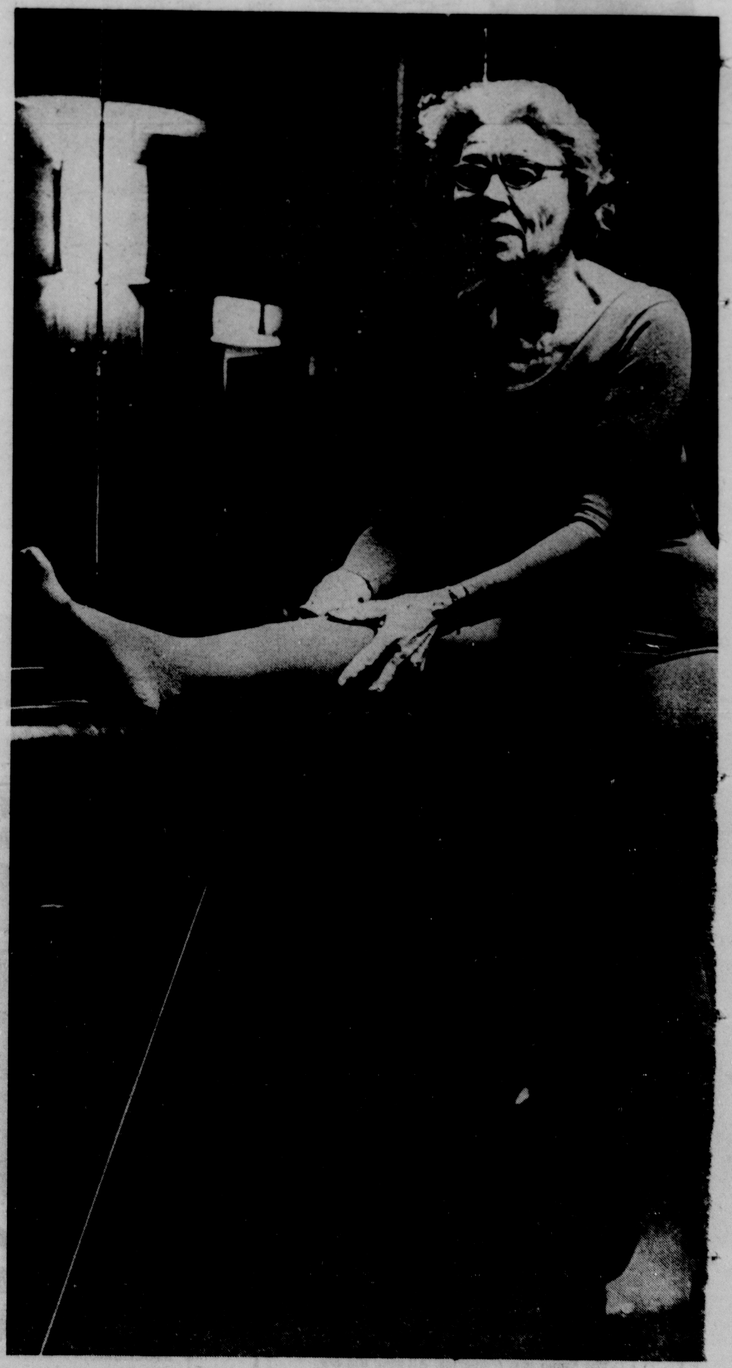
That is one of the principal points made by the book, "Skiers' Exercise Manual," that Fuller co-authored with Dr. Paul Davidson, specialist in internal medicine and arthritis.

The physically fit skier who has built up his stamina and improved his flexibility and coordination is much less likely to return from the slopes with a leg or arm in a cast, they stress.

THIS SAME premise holds true for all of life's activities, Fuller adds.

And if, despite those precautions or because you failed to take them, some crippling ailment still shackles your body or limbs, then you can still fight your way back to a nearly normal way of living through a balanced program of therapy in which expertly chosen exercises play a fundamental role.

That is the philosophy and the policy of Bob Fuller, both at Center Medical and Rehabilitation Hospital and at his conditioning and therapy gymnasium.



LUCILLE HIRCHERT stretches her hamstring and posteria fascia muscles as she works out in the Bob Fuller Conditioning Therapy, fighting back against the crippling effects of arthritis. Progress has been considerable. Sufferers from arthritis are among those who most frequently seek the help of Bob Fuller and his exercise facilities and programs to restore or continue the use of endangered joints.

Sydney — City For The Epicure

The Travel Pages

Note to Gourmets: Don't exclude the Australian metropolis of Sydney from your roster of cities whose culinary treats should be explored. You might be surprised at the variety and the quality of its gourmet restaurants.

And there are plenty of places to please persons of simpler tastes who merely want good food in interesting surroundings.

According to American Airlines, whose 707 Astrojets arrive there three times weekly from Hawaii, more than 1,100 restaurants are listed in the Sydney classified telephone directory.

Many are recognized as top-rank. Many specialize in French, Indonesian, Greek, Indian, German, Chinese, Spanish, Japanese and Italian cuisine.

Seafoods are excellent. Oysters, an expensive delicacy in many parts of the world, are abundant. They also are delicious and inexpensive, and are offered as appetizers in nearly every restaurant.

THE PRAWNS are enormous, succulent and — like the oysters — inexpensive.

Lobster, too, is excellent. And every menu offers a wide choice of fish — including, in season, burrumundi caught in Queensland and scallops from Tasmania.

Sydney has many unlicensed restaurants to which patrons may bring wine. There is an extensive variety of first-rate and inexpensive Australian wines, known by the type names used in Europe: Riesling, hock, Moselle, red and white Burgundy, Chablis, sauternes, claret, rose and champagne.

Wine-making is a major industry in Australia, and the drinking of wine with meals has become customary.

Several restaurants are of more than passing interest to visitors.

The Argyle Tavern, for instance, is in the old historic Rocks area of the city, located in a convict-built store erected in 1828. It was remodeled a few years ago as an early 19th Century colonial inn. Waitresses wear mob caps and long dresses, and waiters wear tunics and knee-breeches.

Whole lambs and pigs are roasted on a huge spit, and a house specialty is steak-and-kidney pie served in an earthenware dish for two persons. A trio plays for dancing, and patrons are urged to join in the singing of Australian bush ballads.

AN EVENING at the Argyle is a lighthearted and enjoyable one.

For elegant dining, there is the Chiswick Gardens restaurant in a beautiful old colonial house in Woollahra. It offers an international cuisine.

The Coachmen, at Redfern, is in a convict-built house. It has six dining rooms, and an area for dining outdoors in the summer (which is the season here now, exactly opposite from North America's winter). There is dancing every evening.

The restaurant has a wine museum in its cellars which patrons are invited to inspect. Selections can be made from the more than 2,000 vintage wines stored there.

ANOTHER restaurant located in a convict-built house is The Coach Inn, at Parramatta North.

Sydney's kosher restaurants include The Folk Center and The Eden, both at Woollahra. The Eden specializes in continental kosher.

The Paddington area — a sprawl of narrow streets and densely packed terrace houses, many decorated with fine iron "lacework" like that in the French Quarter of New Orleans — has some excellent continental restaurants, including The Hungry Horse, Patrick's, D'Arcy's and La Bodega.

Kings Cross is an area of nightspots and restaurants, among them Les Girls, featuring Australian food and an all-male revue; Mother's Cellar, which whips up pancakes of all kinds, and Nagoya Sukiyaki, with authentic Japanese decor and food.

VISITORS WHO are more interested in sightseeing than in seeking out gourmet meals should keep Cahill's in mind. This is a chain of low-priced restaurants, each with a distinctively different decor and atmosphere. There are seven of the restaurants and ten Cahill's self-service buffet-bistros. Nearly all are licensed and provide a selection of Australian wines.

The food is good, varied and priced at reasonable levels.

Britain Discards The Bob And Tanner

As of this week British slang lost two words, ''bob'' and "tanner," and British currency had no shilling for the first time in 484 years.

After centuries of staunch resistance to the decimal point, the British finally succumbed.

After a couple of millenia of experimentation with such terms as sceats, stycas, nobles, crosses, crowns, sovereigns, groats, guineas, broads, bonnet pieces, ryals and angels, the British are finally settling down to use nothing but pounds and pence. The official reason is to facilitate foreign trade.

THE BOB OR shilling will cease to exist and the "tanner" or sixpence will only linger on borrowed time until all vending machine makers have figured out how to convert to the new coins.

However, first-time American visitors to Britain will probably find the change a relief since the pound now has 100 pennies like our dollar.

The picturesque British coinage is going fast.

The shilling or "testoon" was made a British coin in the reign of good King Henry VII in 1487. It is being taken out of service in 1971.

The farthing was removed from currency in 1961 when it finally became too small in value to buy anything.

The 10 shilling note and the half crown have been withdrawn from currency in the past two years.

Remaining shilling coins are the same value and size as the new pence coins and will be used interchangeably until worn out.

THE BRITISH government is spending 15 million dollars in advertising alone to acquaint the British with their new coins.

The pound won't change and will still be worth $2.40, but since old King Offa in the year 775 chopped a pound of silver into 240 pieces, a pound has had 240 pennies. Now it will have 100. Each will be worth 2.4 cents.

There will be five pence, 10 pence and 50 pence coins. These have been gradually put into circulation for the past two years to replace the shilling and two shilling coins and the 10 shilling note.

The 50 penny piece retains that British zest for originality. It has flat sides, not six or eight or 12, but seven.

ANOTHER RELIC will go as the "d" is dropped. For many centuries, the Roman initial for "Denarius" has stood for penny.

British shoppers will have to learn to handle three brand new coins.

The new coins are a two penny coin (4.8 cents), a one penny coin (2.4 cents, and not to be confused with the old penny). The old monster penny will continue to open public toilets until someone figures out a better solution. There will be a new half-penny coin, worth 1.2 cents.

Pounds will be written L1 as in the past.

THE EXPERIENCED U.S. traveler to Britain may be daunted by the thought of mastering the new money. The British are just as puzzled. But the new traveler will find the money much easier, since it is divided into tens and hundreds.

If you're going to Britain this year, write for a simple conversion sheet from the British Tourist Authority, 680 Fifth Avenue, New York City, 10019.

PAT WARD OF British Overseas Airways Corp. points to one of the new 10-pence pieces that have replaced the old two-shilling coin in the United Kingdom's monetary system. At bottom right is the 50-pence piece.

An Original Thinker With Enticing Ideas

THE LONG ROAD WEST, a Journey in History, by Frank Morley; Dial, 416 pages, $7.95. Reviewed by Larry Kramer.

In reviewing a work of nonfiction this reviewer's standard technique is to begin with three questions, one of the author and two of the reviewer:

I expect the author to tell me what he is setting out to do, and then I am obligated to judge whether he has done it and at what level of competence, and finally, whether it was worth doing. In applying this tripartite yardstick to "The Long Road West" I struck out on the first question, but still felt the second and third measures had to be carefully considered.

Frank Morley is fascinated by roads. He's written an earlier book about "The Great North Road," the Roman road in England. His history begins with an anecdote about El Camino Real in San Mateo, Calif.

From this beginning at the Western edge of the North American continent, he sets out to see how civilization got here from the eastern edge of the Mediterranean. I took him so seriously at first that I fretted about the absence of a map anywhere in the book. Who ever heard of a history of anything so geographical as a road without a map to give the reader his bearings?

To make things worse I kept wanting Morley to be consistent. He kept turning north, south and even back east, when his title said plain as day that the book was about "The Long Road West." The only thing that kept me from putting the book down in disgust was that it fascinated me.

After a while I accepted the idea that Morley was only using the "road" simile as a device to let him explore ideas that turned him on. And those ideas were many and varied. He cut a broad swath through history. He was interested in the fact that each of Solomon's trade treaties brought with it a strange god. He noted that the Greeks and the Romans looked at athletics quite differently, and further that Paul must have been an athlete because his epistles are sprinkled with allusions to sports.

From the classical era through the rise of Christianity and its conflict with Mohammedanism to Spain's rise and fall in the New World, Morley led me a merry chase. But then the revelation came. I began to feel I liked the man.

His research isn't original, but he thinks originally and he has a critical eye for the best published material in each period, and he's not afraid to put his opinion on the line. I found myself going to the library shelves to renew acquaintances with old historian friends, and to meet new ones.

Morley's a refresher and an introducer. Better, he's an enticer.

I recommend "The Long Road West" for dipping into. Morley reminds me of that literate cowboy, Gene Rhodes. His writing leaves you with the feeling that you'd really enjoy sitting 'round a campfire with him discussing "cabbages and kings" until the dawn cried stop.

Lisa Hobbs Calls New Kind Of Woman

LOVE AND LIBERATION by Lisa Hobbs; McGraw-Hill, 159 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by Barbara Hosmer.

While recognizing that all women live in a male-created world, noted journalist Lisa Hobbs sees changes so radical as to constitute a revolution in women's lives in America.

With the whole traditional woman's role of producing large numbers of babies being challenged, even by government policy, woman as traditionally defined may have already become oblolete.

A new kind of woman must emerge now, contends Mrs. Hobbs in her new book, "because woman has gained no corporate strength in modern society, she faces the fundamental problem of her very existence." Shorn of her total child-producing and rearing role, she has not been trained or encouraged toward any other.

Women are realizing this, says Mrs. Hobbs, and re-defining themselves, breaking down the "false concepts of sex roles that have limited the destinies of men as well as women."

Marriage as traditionally circumscribed has to go, states the author, herself married happily to a "liberated man" for 19 years and the mother of two children. New less restrictive marriage styles with freedom for wide choices of out-in-the-world activity must replace it, she says.

An avowed Feminist who for 20 years has been a working-press reporter, Lisa Hobbs documents the crippling conditioning that women are given as children through home attitudes and especially by the education system in a brief but effective chapter of the book.

She also pounces on pronouncements of what is "masculine" and "feminine," citing anthropologists' findings that much of what is considered manly or womanly in one culture may be reversed in another. But she believes that there is a firm and critical sex difference, chromosomatically based, that is "an integral part of a person's totality."

Mrs. Hobbs describes the meaning this difference will have on the behavior of men and women and in the society to come. She adds that there are no bystanders in any revolution and "the coming revolution in the world of women will be no exception." There is a deep antagonism between the sexes now and it must be brought to the surface and examined before a new psychology of male and female relationships can come about, the author says.

And meantime women will have to fight for every inch to bring the changes that will allow them to find worthwhile places in the world, she believes.

Readable throughout, sometimes amusing, this brief book stresses humanity while it bluntly asks and discusses the basic questions about the future of men and women as people in a threatened world.

Sad And Bloody Record Of Red Man's Subjugation

BURY MY HEART AT WOUNDED KNEE by Dee Brown; Holt, Rinehart and Winston, 447 pages, $10.95. Reviewed by Bryce W. Anderson.

"So tractable, so peaceable, are these people," wrote Christopher Columbus to his Spanish sovereigns, describing the Caribs of the West Indies, "that I swear to your majesties there is not in the world a better nation."

Within a decade, whole tribes of the Caribs had been destroyed by the Spanish interlopers.

From then until the last American Indians in what became the United States were cooped up on reservations, white man and Indian were never long at peace. And though the Canadians occasionally won a battle, they never won a war.

University of Illinois and an authority on the history of the western Indian tribes, has traced the last part of that long warfare — and the treaties and promises that accompanied it, broken one after another — in "Bury My Heart at Wounded Knee."

Many others have written the history of the western Indian wars, but none as Brown has done. He has written it as viewed from the Indians' side.

It makes an intensely sad and often infuriating tale.

It begins in the Southwest, with the American capture of what is now New Mexico, and the quickly following warfare with the Navahos. It follows the three decades of war interrupted only briefly by treaty-making, as the tribes of Great Plains, Rockies and Sierra were hunted, driven, and sometimes massacred.

It ends with the massacre at Wounded Knee on Dec. 29, 1890.

The title comes from what happened to Crazy Horse, the Sioux chief who commanded under Sitting Bull at the Battle of the Little Big Horn. After he was bayoneted to death at Fort Robinson, Neb., the Sioux were ordered to a new reservation on the Missouri River. But enroute there, a band including Crazy Horse's parents slipped away and carried the slain chief's heart to a secret burial place near the creek called Wounded Knee — the place, where, 13 years later, the last bloody chapter was written in the history of the subjugation of the red man.

On Growing Up In The Brazilian Jungle

WIZARD OF THE UPPER AMAZON by Manuel Cordova-Rios and F. Bruce Lamb; Atheneum, 204 pages; $6.95. Reviewed by Jeff Greer.

Simple folk tales sometimes can be peeled like the layers of an onion, for many levels of significance. This is such a book.

On the surface, an 84-year-old Peruvian and his American friend and translator have given the reader a sort of Gulliver's Travels of the shadowy, savage jungles of Brazil not far east of the icy backbones of the Andes.

Within are treasures to enthrall a nature-lover, enchant an anthropoligist and tear away some of the wraps of the world's present-day drug culture. It's all in starkly simple, poetic language; I cannot determine how much is due the translator and how much the original story-teller.

Cordova-Rios describes his capture as a teen-ager in the rubber forests of Brazil. He was taken by a savage, naked people with a taste for cannibalism, an intensely personal knowledge of jungle and human nature, and an elaborate ritual of using hallucinatory drugs for learning and social guidance.

The youthful rubber-cutter discovered, as he learned his captors' language, that he was being groomed to become chief of the small tribe. He was carefully instructed — and severely tested — in jungle survival skills, tribal lore and drug ritual.

The descriptions of communal "trips" on the brews made of jungle plants bear striking parallels to tales of LSD users, but also involve mass hallucinations in which all partakers heard and saw the same manifestations. Overtones of psychic power also are seen in the Peruvian's adventures, and in the tribal medical lore he later used.

Views, Satirical And Serious, Of Britain's Past And Present

RUN IT DOWN THE FLAGPOLE by Bernard Levin; Atheneum, 451 pages, $8.95.

A CONCISE HISTORY OF THE BRITISH EMPIRE by Gerald S. Graham; Viking, 288 pages, $8.50.

By DON KEOWN

To London journalist-columnist Bernard Levin, the 1960s were a decade in which his native land underwent almost unbearable strain.

Tugging at the English from one side was their long dedication to the past and preoccupation with tradition. Pulling from the other side was that thing called progress and modernism, with all its benefits, and all its deficts.

The result, in Levin's view, was a decade of contradictions, confusions, paradoxes and follies unmatched in all of Britain's long history. He describes it, with wit and bite, in his "Run It Down the Flagpole: Britain in the Sixties," a dazzling demonstration of English satirical humor at its most literate best.

It is all there—the Profumo-Christine Keeler scandal, the funeral of Winston Churchill, the rise of David Frost to superstar status, the Beatles, Mary Quant, the Great Train Robbery, the Moors murders, Harold Macmillan and Harold Wilson, the Mods and Rockers, Bertrand Russell and the Peace Marchers, the devalued pound, Malcolm Muggeridge, the Welsh and Scottish Nationalists, Prince Charles, Enoch Powell, and much, much more.

"In truth," writes Levin," it was a very uneasy decade, and in it the whirling fragments of the almost cosmic explosion that had broken up so many of Britain's traditional attitudes and beliefs, the tensions and contradictions of these most tense and contradictory years, produced a state of national weightlessness akin to that experienced physically by astronauts outside the earth's gravitational force."

In this tug-of-war between the new and old Levin seems generally to regard the former as the lesser of two evils. Yet the 10-year record he recites appears to speak differently. For it was when the British left the protective shell of their traditionalism that they came in for their worst troubles.

Everyone who has had a frustrating experience with those monstrous monuments of modernity, the computers, can identify with Levin's assertion that:

"Gradually more and more people came to realize not only that far too many organizations, institutions and commercial bodies had installed computers long before they had either the trained staff or the back-up facilities to make them work harmoniously, but that the errors of omission and commission made by the compute rs or their fallible human operators, multiplied by the extreme difficulty and even, in some cases, impossibility of tracing and correcting such errors, had led by the end of the decade to a situation that was coming to resemble E. M. Forster's short story, 'The Machine Stops'."

What Levin seems to be saying of this struggle between modernization and presentation is that there are, indeed, two sides to every question, but both of them spurious, the latter, perhaps, just a bit more spurious than the former.

To the American traveler accustomed to regarding Britain not as a looneybin, but as a bastion of the old values and a sanctuary for the sane, this jaundiced and bleak overview from a native son will come as a jolt.

If a country where courtesy still prevails, where quiet can yet be found and where there remain pockets not yet made ugly by progress can produce this kind of reaction, one wonders at the trauma that might be risked if a similar analysis were attempted of our own mad land. True, to a degree Art Hoppe, Russell Baker and others have been making just such assessments, but none has yet has done so with quite the sustained and devastingly acerbic wit with which Levin pulls off his coup. Perhaps a nation that can produce a Joe McCarthy, an Agnew, a Wallace among its national leaders, to say nothing of an Oswald, a Birch and a Rubin among its fringe, is too easy a target to invite this kind of merciless dissection.

What Levin seems to have done is to caricature his country and countrymen. And while it is much in vogue these days in portrait work to show the warts as well as the features, Levin has chosen to draw in only the warts and to omit the features. Yet, as any visitor to England quickly discovers, there is still much national substance behind the blotches that Levin has selected to emphasize and to exaggerate.

The result is a rather glib and superficial picture of Britain in the 1960s that is very cleverly done and quite funny.

For an example of Levin's wit — and insight — turn to Page 429 as he looks ahead into the 1970s and sees a decade at least as bleak and problem-fraught as the one just completed:

"In the first months of the Seventies, a significant news item was received from the United States: Groups of students, tired of burning down their colleges in the name of peace, had decided to burn them down in the name of conservation; and since the pattern in Britain throughout the Sixties had, in such matters, followed at a fairly short interval that in the United States, it seemed likely that this would be the subject to occupy the extra-curricular activities of the students here too during the dawning decade."

Perhaps Levin is right — man, be he Englishman, American or Hottentot, has lost his way, and is blundering about ludicrously. And it is best to treat the whole sad spectacle as comedy or farce.

On second thought, leave out the Hottentot. He may just know who and where he is.

THE FRONTISPIECE for Gerald S. Graham's new book, "A Concise History of the British Empire," is this reproduction of "Britannia and Her Boys" from the Illustrated London News, 1885. It is one of 250 illustrations.

FOR A MUCH more sweeping — and much more serious — summarization dealing with Britain, pick up Gerald S. Graham's scholarly "A Concise History of the British Empire."

The University of London Rhodes professor of imperial history and author tells the story of the development of the British empire, of its glory days, and of its 20th Century adjustments to fit the new realities and the rising spirit of nationalism.

For some reason the illustrations — there are a good many of them — remind us of our schoolboy history texts. But Graham's writing is by no means pedantic. He does not hesitate, for instance, to insert his own learned opinions.

The much romanticized Sir Walter Raleigh, for instance, emerges as a rather foolish adventurer. The early Massachusetts Colony was not a democracy, but rather a theocracy, rigorously exercised, ironically, by the same Puritans who had fled the old country to escape religious persecution. And: "All the gennine love for India manifested over the years by so many British civil servants, soldiers and missionaries did not compensate for a lack of cultural sensitivity and an aloofness that sometimes hardened into arrogance."

And finally, a major British mistake was its efforts in the 10th Century to implant the Westminister parliamentary model, a product peculiar to the time and aptitudes of a particular people, upon other lands that had neither temperament, tradition or training to make a success of it. "Events of the last few years have demonstrated only too clearly that government is not a matter of abstractions open to solutions by formulas," writes Graham.

But despite the clarity of the demonstration, have we yet all absorbed its factuality?

Graham has done an excellent job of condensing, not by the simplest expedient of summarizing or outlining, but by giving us the "sense" of history rather than all its details. It makes for a superior book, not as entertaining, of course, as Levin's, but far from dull.

Sleuths & Suspense

THE WALTER SYNDROME by Richard Neely; McCall, 207 pages, $5.95. Reviewed by Don Keown.

With his fifth novel, a psychological thriller with a wallop, Kentfield writer Richard Neely apparently has hit a jackpot.

"The Walter Syndrome," published late last fall, appeared in a condensed version in Cosmopolitan magazine, has been selected as a Literary Guild alternate for March, has been sold for paperback reprint reproduction by New American Library, and appears headed for a movie that should rival "Psycho" as a producer of gooseimples.

Neely sets his story in New York City, where he was born and where he worked for a time on the Journal-American. The period is the depression 1930s. To work for the classified advertising department of one of the papers comes a glib young man whose psychopatic hatred of women drives him to repeated murder and mutilation.

Neely employs three narrators — the killer Charles Walter, his alter ego, meek, submissive, shy Lambert Post, and star reporter Maury Ryan who strikes up a strange relationship with the latter day Jack the Ripper that permits him to remain a step ahead of the police in the desperate effort to halt the savage slayings.

Neely sets his stage, both time and place, exceptionally well, and then spins a hard, uncompromising yarn that grips the interest. His final surprise is not totally original, but it nonetheless provides a smash climax.

A Jackpot Novel

Some New Books For The Juniors—

Man takes great pride in the complex computers and other machines that he has developed in recent history, often overlooking the fact that nature has produced far more complicated mechanisms for many, many centuries — the human body, or the human mind, for examples.

Or something so outwardly simple as the plant leaf.

Freelance writer James Poling makes it clear that while the leaf is a model of compact efficiency that puts to shame most man-made appliances, it is by no means as undistinguished as it sometimes appears.

And, ironically, while the leaf is absolutely essential to the survival of mankind, it encounters its worst enemy in man uproots the plants and trees upon which it grows, or shrouds it in lethal smog. Paradoxically, man can also be the great perpetuator of leaf-life when he plants and cultivates.

Poling's book is "Leaves: Their Amazing Lives and Strange Behavior" (Holt, Rinehart and Winston, $4.95) and it is a superior science book for 10, 11 and 12 years olds. It tells how leaves function, follows a leaf through its brief life cycle and differentiates among the various types of leaves. There are some photographs and drawings — not many — , but here Poling's well-done text is the attraction.

Some other new books for juniors:

"I ain't gonna study war no more . . . " goes the old song that has been endorsed by many of our young, overcome by revulsion for mankind's propensity for slaughtering his own. Yet there can be a genuine good in books about war, providing the strife is treated realistically, not romantically. Honestly presented, war is unglamorous and horrifying. McGraw-Hill has issued two new books in its high-class International Library series.

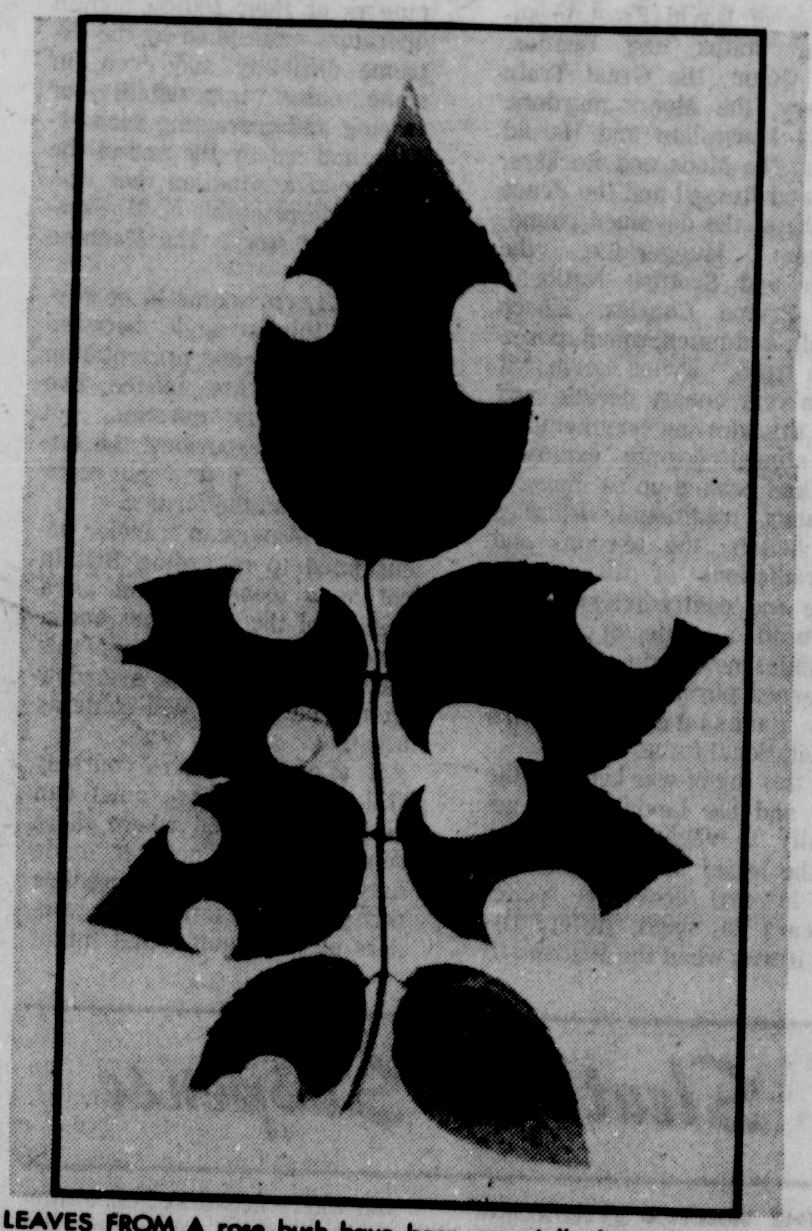
They are "Sea Fights Under Sail" by Christopher Lloyd and "Great Sieges" by Vezio Melegari, both splendidly and colorfully illustrated and handsomely designed. The Englishman Lloyd has met the historical honesty test better than the Italian Melegari, making clear the suffering strife at sea has inflicted upon sometimes heroic, sometimes terrified men. Melegari is less successful in bringing forth the famine and pestilence and maiming that have been the rotten product of sieges from Troy to Stalingrad and beyond.

"The Truth About Drugs" (Doubleday, $3.50 hardcover, $1.75 paperback) by Geoffrey Austrian, writer and editor, is an effort to appraise without hysteria or defensiveness today's drug scene. Austrian operates on the premise that there is no need for any special pleadings — that the facts about drugs speak for themselves. "Drugs must work together with something else — and that something is people," he writes. "The results of drugs seem to be as much 'people effects' as they are drug effects." While written primarily for the young, the book could serve as a primer or easy introduction for the parent or other older person anxious to acquire a better understanding of why drug usage has soared so suddenly.

Today's young people have far different interests and problems than the youth of previous generations. But one big bugaboo remains unchanged — money. There is always a need for more of that, and for better use of what is available. Mary Beery has written "Young Teens Money" (McGraw-Hill) covering how to earn, spend and save. It is in a question-and-answer format, and seems a bit simplistic. Worth the price of the book? Even with the help of Miss Beery's book, we can't advise you on that. For there's no price quoted on the dustjacket.

Literary figures with a few exceptions are "out of style" as subjects of biographies for young adults. Hilda White, nevertheless, has written "Truth Is My Country" (Doubleday, $5.95) that profiles eight New England authors — Hawthorne, Emerson, Thoreau, Stowe, Dickinson, Robinson, Millay and Frost. Unlike most such studies for juniors, Mrs. White gives in-depth attention to the literary contributions of her subjects along with the accounts of their personal lives. It is sound, unsensationalized biography.

Black author Jesse Jackson has written a novel about black boyhood, "The Sickest Don't Always Die the Quickest" (Doubleday, $3.95) that one suspects is totally honest and authentic. The problems of Stonewell Jackson and his friends such as Steeplehead and Sugarfoot, are, the reader is convinced, the very kind of problems many a black boy has faced — problems generally like those of any other youngster, and yet also to a degree peculiar to a race and its culture. It makes for an unusual story.



LEAVES FROM A rose bush have been especially fitted for a unique role in nature's grand scheme of things by rose-cutter bees who have neatly snipped them for use as building material in their nest. The illustration is from James Poling's "Leaves: Their Amazing Lives and Strange Behavior."

The coach helped make Johnny a little league "all-star".

The Sullivan Reading Program made him a reading "all-star".

It's great to be a winner. No one wants to be a loser, yet many, many kids lose out every day in school because they can't keep up in the classroom. They just can't read adequately.

The Sullivan Reading Program has been making winners out of kids for years. In fact, more than five million school children have used nationally acclaimed Sullivan Reading Materials to improve their reading skills. Sullivan Reading Centers utilize these well-tested Sullivan materials to provide supplemental reading instruction for children at all school levels. (Ask your child's teacher about the Sullivan Reading Program.)

Sullivan Reading Centers offer personalized reading instruction and self-paced group instruction for your child. Classes are small, and a step by step Sullivan teaching program of reading success builds confidence while it improves your son or daughter's reading skills. He'll work at his own pace, competing only with himself, and he or she can come to the Center any day of the week or on Saturday morning. If he needs additional time to make sufficient progress during the course, he's given the extra time at no additional cost. Initial testing and all materials used by the students are also included in the $60 fee for the four-week course.

If your child's like most of our students, he'll enjoy the time spent at the Center as much as he does on the baseball diamond. He knows we believe in "all-stars," too.

YOU CAN RUSH the season in your garden with plants that begin their "Spring flowering" while the calendar still shows it to be winter. The India hawthorne or raphilepsis is one such. Here it is shown in use as a low, hedge-like planting, with its pink blossoms in bloom.

Garden Page

In California the first signs of spring come early — often before winter is at its mid-point.

In many parts of the state, Marin included, the first blooms of spring come in January and February — it's common to go out one brisk day and there are buds opening on flowering quince, India hawthorne, the daphne.

One of the best bets for early color is flowering quince; the nice part is that they continue to bloom for several weeks. The colors are glorious additions to the garden — ranging from a snow white, through shades of pink and rose to deep red.

WHEN DAPHNE begins to bloom in late winter, it provides one of the most enjoyable shows in the garden world. Not only are the waxy pink blooms appealing to look at, but their fragrance is something out of this world.

The India hawthornes are as early as January in some California gardens. They produce handsome heads of pink-to-red blooms that are delicately scented. The fragrance isn't as pronounced as the bountiful color — the plants bloom and bloom, week after week.

LIKE OTHER early-flowering plants, India Hawthorne (Raphiolepis) has many uses in the landscape.

Your nurseryman can suggest planting ideas so that you can incorporate all the early-blooming specimens in your garden and enjoy their beauty year after year.

Azaleas and camellias are often considered spring blooming plants, but actually you can enjoy months of color from both — by judiciously selecting varieties. Certain types begin blooming in fall and some hit their peak at this time of year, while other varieties are still flowering in late spring.

Nurseries have azaleas and camellias in bloom now — and the colors will please the most discriminate taste. Shopping for the plants while they are in flower has its advantages, as you can select exactly the color you want to add to your garden.

A CHECKLIST FOR MARIN GARDENERS

Here is the Marin gardener's checklist for the coming week:

✔ Finish general dormant spraying before buds open.

✔ Set out artichoke plants for future crops. The bushes are attractive enough to be grown in the ornamental garden.

✔ Continue to plant camellias. They are in bloom in nursery containers and shopping for them while they are flowering is a fun experience for the entire family.

✔ The late winter is a good time to feed the lawn so that it will get off to a fast start when spring bows in.

✔ And if you haven't yet taken care of pruning your hydrangeas, do that, too, without further delay.

✔ Plant new roses while they are still available bareroot.

✔ Prune your fruit trees before new growth starts.

Ready to talk about DEPENDABILITY?

People often forget one important thing when buying their first washer. It's DEPENDABILITY. Consequently, they get to know the repairman pretty well. And that's expensive. With the second washer, it's different. Dependability comes first! And that's why a Speed Queen should be your No. 1 choice. Speed Queens are Designed and Built to be dependable . . . to give extra years of faithful service. We'd love to have you come in and say, "prove it."

Priced from $229 to $329

*LIFETIME WARRANTY ON STAINLESS STEEL DRUM

The Speed Queen stainless steel dryer drum is warranted for the life of the dryer by Speed Queen, A Division of McGraw-Edison Company. If the drum fails as a result of a manufacturing defect, it will be replaced. Labor charges incurred in the removal and replacement of the drum are the responsibility of the owner unless the one year warranty responsibility of the Speed Queen dealer applies.

This solid, non-perforated Stainless Steel tub is chip-proof, rust-proof and ideal for Durable Press fabrics.

*10-YEAR WARRANTY ON TRANSMISSION PARTS

Speed Queen washer transmissions consisting of the case, cover, rocker arm, link, crank gear, connecting rod, pinion and drive clutch are warranted for ten years from date of installation by Speed Queen, A Division of McGraw-Edison Company. If any of the above listed parts fail within the 10-year warranty period as a result of a manufacturing defect, they will be replaced. Labor charges incurred in the removal and replacement of such parts are the responsibility of the owner unless the one year warranty responsibility of the Speed Queen dealer applies.

A Warm Nook In The Kitchen

Wood Panels Soften Look

Women's Lib notwithstanding, the kitchen is considered a woman's domain, and it is where she spends a large part of her home time.

Kitchen decor reflects her personality and interests — or should.

In the past decade, the kitchen has been regaining its family orientation, much as it had in olden days when the wood range made it the coziest room in the house.

THIS ROOM has claimed a bigger share of the building and remodeling spotlight, too, with more emphasis on family living. In fact, kitchens are the No. 1 remodeling project, accounting for the highest dollar volume.

More attention is being lavished on kitchen conveniences and gadgetry, such as electronic ovens and ceramic top ranges. Even the ecology surge is felt, with the advent of garbage compactors.

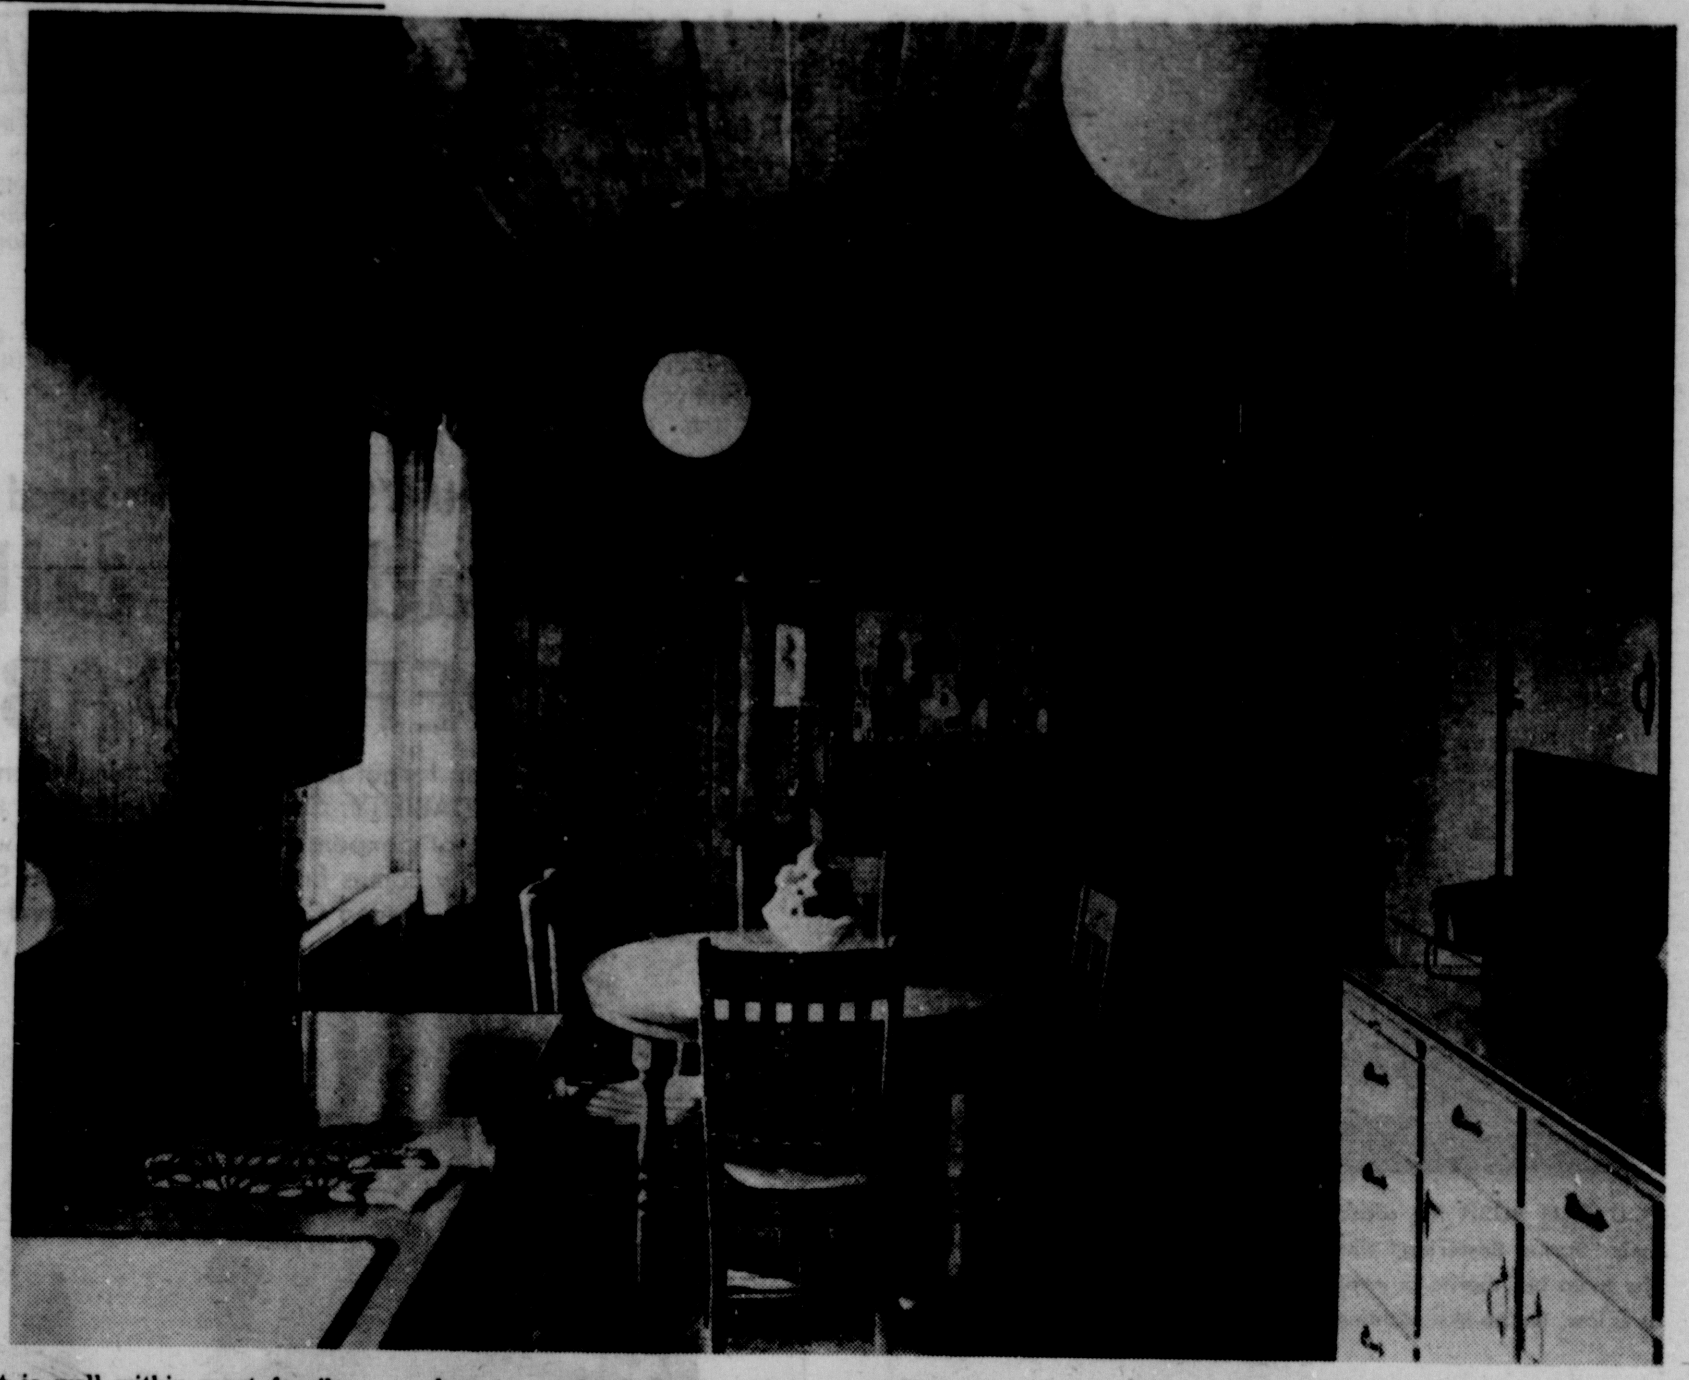
Often a kitchen renovation is more of a brightening than a major rebuilding, and this needn't be expensive.

ADDITION OF butcher block countertops or a new wall treatment of western wood paneling relieves the hard-surface look, yet is well within most family budgets, and can do wonders to improve the atmosphere of a kitchen.

One family with an older home added new life to the kitchen by paneling the ceiling and walls of the breakfast area with one-by-six -inch V-groove Douglas fir boards, finished clear to retain the warm color and grain of the wood.

Shelves in the wall were enclosed with doors of the same board paneling. Brightness was added with a large window in the eating area and new, white globe light fixtures.

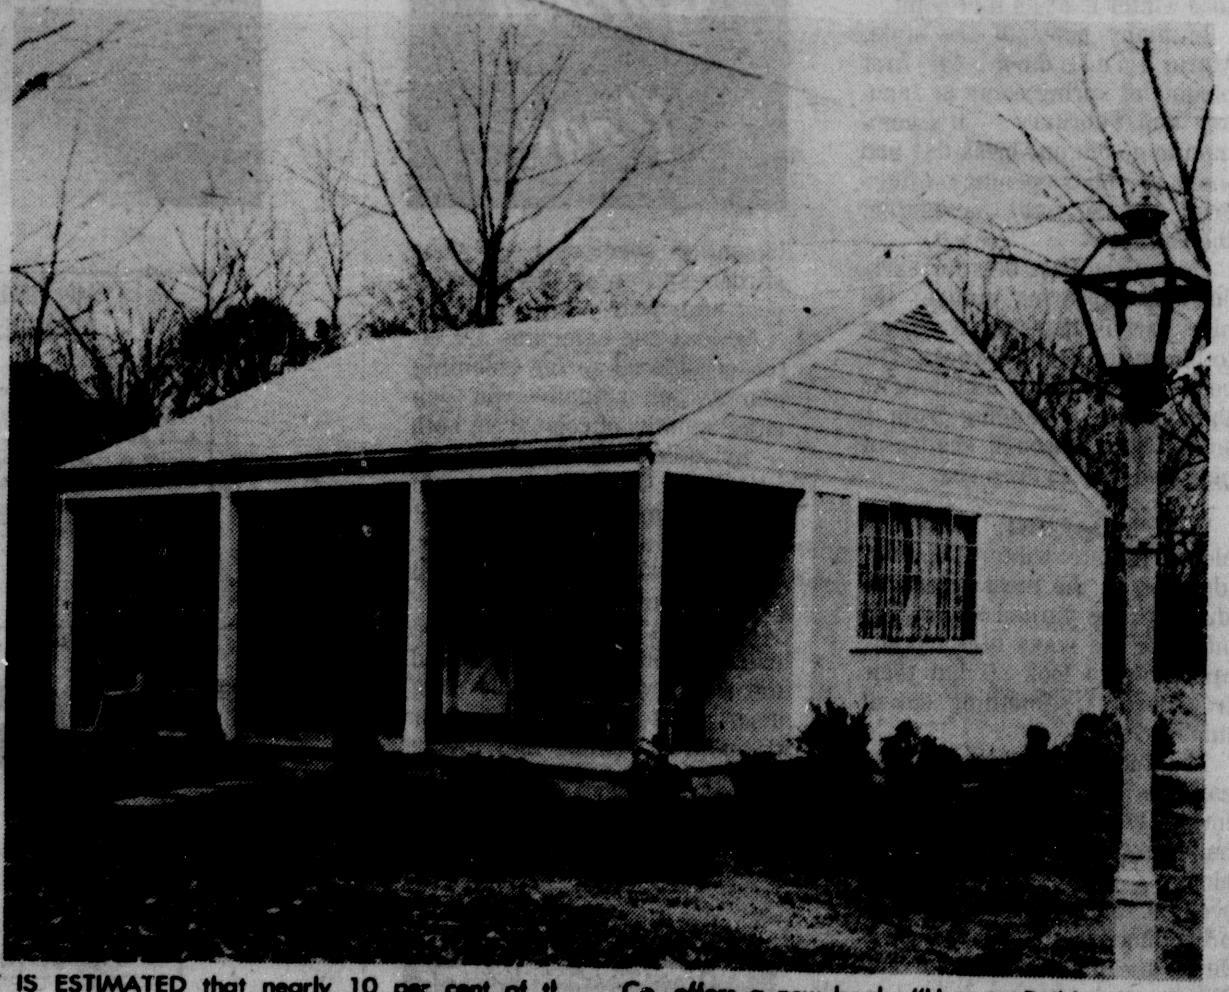
Another way to brighten the kitchen is by "going outdoors," adding a bay window with bench overlooking a flower garden, or sliding windows opening to a wood deck.



THE HIGHLY-ENAMELED kitchen is often too antiseptic. Offering a contrast is this warm nook brightened with one-by-six-inch V-groove Douglas fir paneling on the walls and ceiling. Lacquer, varnish or paste wax finish simplifies the cleaning. The eye-catching artwork offsets the strong verticals of the paneling. Table and chairs are painted green to add color accent.

(Western Wood Products Association photos)

Covered decks with table and chairs for breakfasts or barbecues extend kitchen-family room livability greatly, and for more months of the year. For decks with western exposure, a sun screen may be added for afternoon comfort.



IT IS ESTIMATED that nearly 10 per cent of th houses built in America are constructed by people working in their sparetime and for their own occupancy. Especially is the do-it-yourself approach popular on the simpler, generally smaller vacation and retirement homes. As help, East-Bild Pattern Co. offers a new book, "How to Build a Vacation or Retirement House," through the Independent-Journal. Send $2.50 to Independent-Journal, Post Office Box 215, Briarcliff Manor, N.Y., 10510. Include your zip code number. The book contains more than 160 illustrations plus detailed, non-technical directions.

A Movable Wall Can Solve Your Home Storage Dilemma

Portable Room Divider Will Do Multiple Service In The House

Space is a luxury in most homes, so a room divider that combines organized storage with hobby and work areas can be welcome indeed.

And for a bonus, the divider can be built so it can be moved about. Against a wall, it's floor-to-ceining storage; rolled out on casters, it's a room divider; or in the center of the room, an island for family activities.

A HANDSOME version that can be built from available plans is called the Caravan. All materials needed are available from most lumber dealers.

The project puts lazy space to work, while serving as an attractive piece of furniture.

A novel shelving arrangement is another feature of the movable Caravan. Upside-down beveled board siding acts as cleats to hold the shelves, drawers and storage "boxes," which rest on small side rails.

Handyman's Pages

A drop-down table becomes a home office, sewing area or hobby center. Drawers and slotted shelves allow orderly storage of bills, letters or patterns.

A PULL-OUT drawer-shelf in the compartment adjacent to the table provides a convenient typing area for correspondence or home office work.

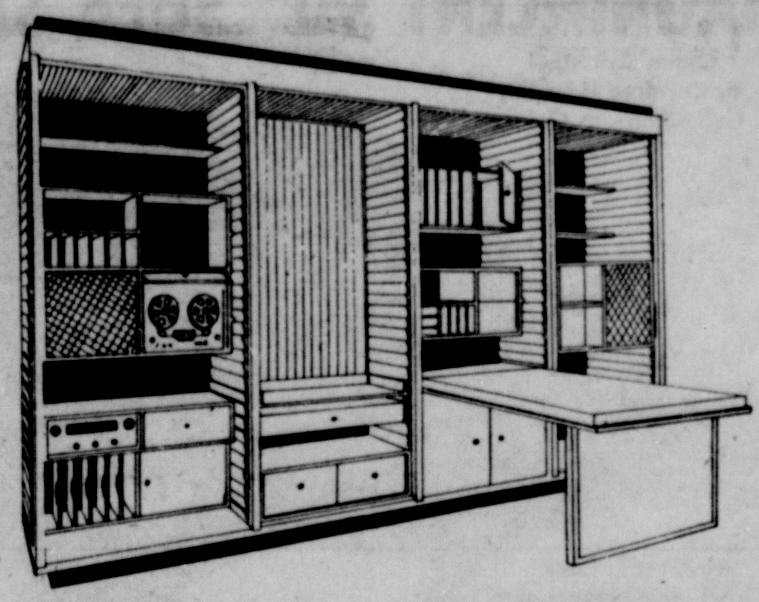
The end compartment houses a tape deck, record changer, records and small television set.

The Caravan, as designed by Melvin Kroker, a young Oregon architect, is ceiling high, has four sections, and the shelves and storage boxes are interchangeable.

BUT THE UNIT may be scaled down in size for an apartment, or expanded for a larger home. One or two such units function well as partitions for a temporary guest room.

Even if you move, the Caravan goes with you. If the wood has a natural finish, it will fit in readily with new decor and surroundings. Or it can be painted in some bright new hue.

For an eight-page color booklet on storage ideas, featuring the Caravan, and a plan sheet with construction details and materials list, send 25 cents in coin to Western Wood Products Association, Department 519-21P, Yeon Building, Portland, Ore., 97204.



THIS STORAGE WALL on wheels is truly versatile, serving equally well as room divider, activity island or just organized storage with variable shelves and cabinets. It is the Caravan, built of western lumber and paneling in various widths. Shelf areas are faced with upside down beveled siding that serves as cleats.

Special Seating For Kibitzers

Kibitzing is an art that has to be cultivated.

Like all arts, it requires a great deal of thought and the proper equipment before it can be managed in style. For those persons who refuse to do things halfway, today we introduce our genuine — official kibitzer chair, shown here with Jimmy Durante.

You'll find kibitzing to be an exciting activity, and, so far, one that the government hasn't been able to tax.

To begin with, I suppose we should say that a kibitzer chair is something like a horse. To get the most out of it you have to ride it, just the way Jimmy is doing. You will notice that it has a place to rest your elbows while your feet are solidly planted on the floor — a must for every kibitzer, and great for all armchair generals.

The chair is handy around election time in smoke-filled rooms because you can place your ashtray right in front of you on the arm rest. It also furnishes a place for a cup of coffee, some paper and a pencil or anything else you want to have handy. Photographers like it because it's an ideal chair to have pictures taken in.

Ladies with dresses, of course, ride the chair sidesaddle, or turn it around and sit on it like a conventional chair. Good for watching television too.

You'll enjoy it either indoors or out.

Building a kibitzer chair is easy when you use the full-size pattern. All you need do is trace the pattern on wood, then saw out the parts and finally put them together. Simple tools are all you will need, and the pattern lists the required materials, which are inexpensive.

JIMMY DURANTE puts one of the kibitzer chairs built from a Steve Ellingson pattern to the relaxing use for which it is intended.

To obtain the full-size kibitzer chair, pattern No. 86, send 50 cents (add 25 cents per pattern for airmail delivery) to: Steve Ellingston, San Rafael Independent-Journal Pattern Department, Post Office Box 2383, Van Nuys, Calif. 94109.

Other patterns you will enjoy: No. 250 Tool storage shed, $1; No. 217 Poker table, $1; No. 135 Trestle desk, $1; Booklet picturing 450 projects, 75 cents.

We have the new kind of Armstrong floor that hates waxing as much as you do.

It's called Solarian.™

The sunny floor that shines without wax. In fact, Solarian should not be waxed, since most household waxes will not adhere to its unique high-gloss wear surface. With no wax to buy, apply and let dry . . . you save money, time and work. No yellowing, no stripping.

The secret behind the waxless shine.

A major new development—the Mirabond™ Wear Surface—is an entirely new formulation that maintains its brilliant gloss far longer than any vinyl floor. The surface actually rejects ordinary wax, while making Solarian easier to keep clean. Even black heel marks wipe right up with a mild cleaner.

As beautiful to look at as it is to care for.

Choose Solarian in this crisp mosaic design or a gentle marble graining, both in four sunny, kitchen-perfect colors.

Let us show you this amazing new development in flooring.

The Stereo Scene — Columbia Classics

By JOHN SUNIER

Although recording of classical music by domestic companies in this country has fallen on bad times, at least one major label is keeping up a steady output of new recordings by re-pressing many of their best discs in a fine series of bargain albums.

I am speaking of Columbia Records' Odyssey series, featuring such outstanding performers as Ormandy, Szell and Oistrakh. New masters have been cut from the original stereo tapes, and with recent advances in cutting techniques the result is often startlingly improved signal-to-noise and less "scratch than the original high-priced discs.

TWO BRUNO WALTER albums are of special interest: His magnificent "Brahms Symphony No. 1" (Odyssey Y 30311) and his definitive "Mahler Symphony No. 9" (Odyssey Y2 30308). This is one of Mahler's most adventurous and at the same time most profoundly felt compositions and this version has it above all others for my ears.

"Austrian Music for Harpsichord and Clavichord" (Odyssey Y 30289) is the title of the latest album by talented harpsichordist-musicologist-writer Igor Kipnis. There are almost no recordings available of clavichord, that super-subtle tiny keyboard sound that is yet so very expressive, so the fact that one side of this LP is devoted to clavichord performances of music by Mozart, Haydn and Froberger is enough to recommend it highly.

Add the harpsichord pieces, unusual ones by rara avis such as Poglietti and Fux, Kipnis' sparkling performances and top engineering and you have a hands-down winner in this recital disc.

Columbia's Charles Ives series continues with two new albums. Paul Zukofsky, violin, and Gilbert Kalish, piano are featured with The New York String Quartet in "Charles Ives Chamber Music" (Columbia M 30230).

SEVERAL OF THESE little works are first recordings. The "Trio for Violin, Cello and Piano" is the major work here, but the listener will find some of the short pieces such as "In Re Con Moto Et Al" simply fascinating.

"American Scenes, American Poets" (Columbia M 30229) presents Evelyn Lear and Thomas Stewart, accompanied by pianist Alan Mandel, in the best album of Ives songs I have had the pleasure to hear. Ives reinterprets and preserves the songs and sounds of late-19th-century New England in these glorious little songs. "The Things Our Fathers Loved" strikes me as perhaps the most sincere and touching patriotic song ever penned in America. "They Are There" is a stirring song of the First World War. American poets such as Whitman and Thoreau provide the lyrics for the 10 songs on the second side of the album.

Ives' lovable unpredictability shines through all this music and gives it a piquancy that avoids any touch of the sentimental.

The Eric Satie bandwagon continues to roll along as pianist Philippe Entremont makes his auspicious conducting debut with the zany French composer's "Parade," "Relache" and two of the beautiful "Gymnopedies," (Columbia M 30294). The Royal Philharmonic Orchestra is on its toes and obviously has a jolly good ti playing this witty and tuneful music.

Entremont also has another album which he is heard as piano soloist concerti by Jolivet and Milhaud, as w as a piano quartet version of Milhau jazzy "The Creation of the World," (C umbia MS 7432). This LP won two Eu pean recording awards, and features two French composers conducting th own works. Unusual modern works exciting interpretations and good soun

ANOTHER TOPNOTCH album of m sic for piano and orchestra is the Ru Serkin/Eugene Ormandy effort (Colum MS 7423) which showcases three sh pieces: Strauss' "Burleske in D Mino Schumann's "Introduction and Conc Allegro," and Mendelssohn's "Capric Brillante." The style of all three pie can only be described as Lisztian, tho that composer is not represented in album. The Strauss is the longest wor veritable fireworks display of wit virtuosity.

The backing of the Philadelphia chestra provides its usual richness depth, especially in the string section.

TV NOTES

By JACK GAVER

Jack Benny's second special of the season for NBC will be seen at 9 p.m. March 10.

Dr. Seuss "The Cat in the Hat" will be a new half-hour animated special on CBS March 10. This is the third video show to be based on one of the notable children's books by Ted Geisel (Dr. Seuss).

NBC has prepared a one-hour special on Scotland Yard for broadcasting in March. Producer Lucy Jarvis was permitted to take her cameras into guarded areas of London's police headquarters which have never before been open to the public.

"The Doris Mary Anne Kappelhoff Special" is a one-hour CBS program that takes a backward look at the career of — who else? — Doris Day. This will be the first video variety hour for the star, whose weekly comedy show is CBS. Perry Como will be on the special, which will be seen at 10 p.m. March 14.

A satiric but affectionate look at American marriage and togetherness in the 1970s is the aim of "Robert Young and the Family," a CBS special set for March 10. The star serves as host-narrator for the one-hour show that will employ the talents of Beau Bridges, Lee Grant, Julie Sommars, Lurene Tuttle, Jack Warden, William Windom and Dick Van Dyke.

HUMAN ANIMAL

Not much different,
leaving things behind
To decay and rot,
nuts and things,
Man's debris,
mechanical art,
Around for years,
but not forever,
Instincts of life
pretty much the same,
All to earth again,
acorn shells,
Cans and paper,
time's contrast,
Nature's human animal.

POINT REYES — C. B. GEARHART

CHANT OF THE BIRD CRUSADE

Hollow bone. Marrowless.
Ailerons plumed. Outstretched wings.
Plummet no more. No hunter's shot.
The higher grace. To highest haven
Since two by two. Peace in flight.

ALCOA ALUMINUM WOODGRAIN SIDING

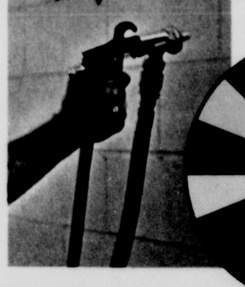
Alcoa Woodgrain Aluminum Siding combines Old World charm with one of the newest advancements in aluminum building product technology—ALCOA SUPER 40 TEMPERING—an Alcoa metal working wonder that adds new strength and rigidity to quality Alcoa Siding!

And, you'll get Alcoa's exclusive Alumalure® finish that resists chipping, flaking, blistering and peeling. Alcoa Rough Cut will keep its fresh newness for years. Won't rot or warp. Can't streak or stain because of unsightly rust! It helps save on fuel and air conditioning costs while it adds valuable insulation qualities.

New



16 DECORATOR COLORS

DURA-FLEX (IT'S CLIMATIZED) TEXTURED COATING

SAVE MONEY YEAR AFTER YEAR

One high pressure application bonds directly onto any surface without mess or odor . . . insulates, waterproofs, eliminates repainting and increases your property values.

COVER ALL SURFACES TO SEAL CRACKS, HOLES AND ALL OTHER DEFECTS.

Applied with special heavy duty equipment under 450 lbs. of pressure per square inch to a thickness approximately 20 times that of ordinary paint, that coating actually fuses itself to the wall surface and becomes a permanent part of the wall assuring longer lasting beauty, protection and insulation.

CHECK THESE EXCLUSIVE MONEY SAVING FEATURES!

END CONSTANT HOUSEPAINTING

No paint to buy, no painters to hire—year after paint-free year! Both of these great new home exteriors make constant housepainting a thing of the past.

WON'T ATTRACT INSECTS

Destructive insects like termites have no taste for Alcoa Siding or Dura-Flex Coating. Saves money, saves worry!
